Senator Ashurst Attacks Long In Scathing Speech

Arizonan Gives Louisianian One Of Worst Tongue-Whippings Of Career

LASHING IS GIVEN AFTER HUEY SLURS JIM FARLEY

Solon Asserts Long's Kind Is Washed Up Only In Turbulent Times

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP)—The threatened war on Senator Long's anti-administration forays broke in the senate today as veteran and "freshmen" Democrats alike lashed at the Louisianian with such words as "offensive" and "crawfish, grunt, puffer and kingfish."

Long replied in kind, but was apparently somewhat subdued after the scholarly Senator Ashurst of Arizona had given him one of the most extended through semi-polite tongue-whippings of his senate career.

After the Democratic leader, Robinson of Arkansas, had heatedly resented an inference by Long that Postmaster General Farley had "stolen" souvenir postage stamps for his friends, the oratorical Ashurst drew from his desk a prepared speech.

He compared Long to crustacea such as the "crawfish, grunt and puffer," that are washed up on the shores only in turbulent times, but which seldom appear when the "sea is calm and tranquil."

Applying this analogy to present-day economics, the Arizonian declared:

"The same physical principle operates on mankind, when the distress of depression, the fury of financial panic and storm, and the terror of economic uncertainty agitate the people. To all types of men, when confronted with any insecurity, there come dangerous thoughts, feelings and fears, and thus some men usually called odd-fish, are forced to the surface from the swamps of anonymity."

The free-for-all started when Ashurst put into the record an editorial criticizing the parole system. Without defending the parole system, Long said too many major law violators were going free while minor offenders were being made "sure criminals" by retention for long periods behind prison bars.

He did not mention Farley by name, but said a "high government official" had "stolen" stamps and

WILEY POST AGAIN FAILS TO COMPLETE STRATOSPHERE HOP

WICHITA, Kan., June 15.—(AP)—Wiley Post's aging monoplane "Winnie Mae," which has carried him on two record-breaking flights around the world, failed him today in his fourth attempt to span the nation through the sub-stratosphere.

Forced down by a broken piston, Post announced immediately that he will try again—but not in the plane to which sentiment has long attached him.

Minus retractable landing gear, dropped at the takeoff from Burbank, Calif., the plane made a "belly-skid" landing here at 3:30 p. m.

He had reached a point near Davenport, Iowa, when motor trouble developed and he turned back to Wichita.

"I knew the field here," he explained.

STATE'S TAX YIELDING PROPERTY VALUE DROPS

BATON ROUGE, La., June 15.—(AP)—The value of Louisiana's tax yielding property has sunk to the lowest level in many years.

The state tax commission's annual report reveals that 1934 property assessments on which ad valorem tax collections at the rate of 5 3-4 mills are now being made sank to $1,348,163,553 or $76,333,427 below 1933.

The 1933 total was $1,424,496,980 or $85,682,495 below 1932 in which year a record decline of $156,370,923 was recorded. Property valuations began dropping in 1930 and have continued since.

WOMAN FREED OF MURDER CHARGE IN RECORD TIME

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 15.—(AP)—A circuit court jury in three minutes late today acquitted Mrs. Iola Wilkerson, 34, in the March 3 slaying of her husband after hearing the former rural school teacher's story of brutal treatment over a 15-year period of married life.

Quick action of the jury in freeing her brought tears to the eyes of the mother of two children who testified she remembered nothing of the shooting that brought death to T. J. Wilkerson, cosmetic salesman.

Father And Flag
A Too Kind Heart

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

TODAY IS "Father's day." You might tell father "don't work so hard." In these times that will at least make him smile.

You might buy him a cravat, or a box of cigars and charge it to him. If he is old, you might give him a box of plain chocolate and advise him to eat a little occasionally. Chocolate, sugar in any pure form, is good for the old. Sugar feeds the heart muscles, according to the learned Dr. Leopold Stieghtz, who knows. That helps when father begins working on his income tax.

The best plan for "Father's day" might be to pat father on the back and say: "We hate to see you work so hard, but we really don't see what can be done about it."

FRIDAY WAS "Flag day." We have a fine flag, one that means something. That flag will be waving on this North American continent when many others of the world's flags shall have been torn down for good, while those who think we might have a better flag, will be decently buried in oblivion.

"The same flag with constantly improving government year after year," would be a fairly good motto.

SUSPECT ESCAPES AFTER GUN FIGHT

Man Believed To Be Weyerhaeuser Kidnaper Eludes Officers

KIRBYVILLE, Texas, June 15.—(AP)—A man officers declared they had been tipped was William Mahan, sought in the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping, apparently had made good his escape after a gun fight with officers near a CCC camp five miles east of here today.

The officers would not reveal the source of their tip that the man was Mahan, and department of justice operatives at Dallas said they had not been notified. C. B. Hamer, Jasper county deputy sheriff and a nephew of Frank Hamer, former Texas ranger, declared, however, that the tip came from a reliable source.

The tip, he said, was that Mahan was in the vicinity riding in a small

2 GERMAN PLANES CHASED AWAY FROM FRENCH TERRITORY

METZ, France, June 15.—(AP)—French pursuit planes today chased two German ships, which were hovering over frontier fortifications, back into German territory.

Military officials said the German craft were first observed over the defense works known as the "Petite Roselle" northwest of Metz.

Several French planes set to guard against such excursions promptly took to the air but the German airmen turned tail and fled, escaping over the border before the pursuers caught up with them.

SCHOOL BOARDS ASKED TO DELAY BUDGET PLANS

BATON ROUGE, La., June 15.—(AP)—Parish school boards have been asked by State Superintendent of Education T. H. Harris to delay preparation of the 1935-36 budgets until about the middle of July when more information about prospective school revenue will be available.

The state superintendent said today that he had suggested the boards defer their budget drafting a few weeks until he gained a better idea about what operation money was in sight. August 1 is the final date under the law for the submission of the budgets to the state budget committee.

MARTIAL LAW IS ESTABLISHED IN STRIKE AT OMAHA

State's Entire Militia Is Called Out To Quell Violence In City

ONE KILLED, MANY HURT IN STREET CAR WALKOUT

Mayor Reports Situation Is Out Of Control Of Local Authorities

OMAHA, Neb., June 15.—(AP)—A declaration of martial law with the entire Nabraska national guard mobilized to enforce it was the reply of authorities tonight to tram strike violence which has caused one death and injuries to 90 others here in the past three nights.

Acting swiftly after a long distance telephone conversation with Gov. R. L. Cochran, who is in Biloxi, Miss., Lieut. Governor Walter H. Jurgensen, acting chief executive, at Lincoln issued the proclamation of martial law for Omaha and Adjutant General H. J. Paul immediately directed mobilization of 1,800 troops in all parts of the state.

The Omaha units of the guards under command of Brig. Gen. Amos Thomas were first on the scene.

The state authorities intervened when officials of city and county requested aid to maintain peace following Friday night's climatic battle be-

WORK WILL BEGIN ON 2 PIPELINES

160 Men Will Receive $200,000 In Wages On Gas Field Projects

Two pipeline projects involving the expenditure of about $200,000 in wages to 160 or more men during the next several months, will be started in the northeast Louisiana gas field about the middle of this week, it was learned yesterday afternoon from an authoritative source.

The projects are the taking up of a 38-mile pipeline from Alto, in Richland parish to Pioneer, in West Carroll parish, and the re-laying of the pipe in a new line of approximately the same length, from Perryville, in Ouachita parish, to Pioneer.

Work on the projects will be done by men employed by the Southern Natural Gas company, an organization operating in the gas field and having its headquarters at Birmingham, Ala. This company owns the present pipeline from Alto to Pioneer and owns a compressor station constructed last year at Perryville.

Nearly all of the labor required for the projects has already been employed, it was stated.

The line from Alto to Pioneer is an 18-inch line, coupled with dresser couplings. As the pipe is taken up, it will be cleaned, repaired, repainted and installed in the new line, the two projects being carried on at the same time.

No officials of the gas company were in Monroe yesterday, and no official statement concerning the reason for taking up the Alto line was obtained.

It was stated that the taking up of the old line will not affect the regular employment of men at the Alto compressor plants.

A WELCOME TO SUMMER!

Summer's here! And racing onto the scene comes the Summer Girl of 1935, sprightly, joyous and lovely, eager for the fun the season promises. With the waves at her heels and fleecy clouds above, the beach sprite silhouetted here typifies Miss America, summer model. She is blond and shapely Jeanne Carmen, movie starlet, dashing gloom to the winds.

Big Automobile Show Will Be Staged Here

Remarkable Progress Of Motor Industry Will Be Shown In Exhibits

The remarkable story of business progress made by the automobile industry throughout the period of recent depression will be reflected in the first automobile show to be given in this city in many years, which will be held during "Automobile Week," June 22 to 28, inclusive.

The show, which will be sponsored by various automobile dealers of the city, will add new emphasis to the fact that the depression is a thing of the past and that business has long since "turned the corner" of new and better times.

The automobile show will be only part of the observance of the week, and will consist of a display of 1935 models of the leading cars distributed in the Monroe area. The display will be worthy of the great industry

DADS OF NATION TO GET A BREAK ON FATHER'S DAY

There will be presents for him to open when he awakes, there won't be work for him to do and he may sleep as long and as much as he wishes.

His favorite dishes will appear on the table, he may lounge around in his stocking feet and throw his ashes on the floor if he chooses.

Which is just one way of announcing that this is Father's day.

The entire nation today honors the bread winner of the family, just as it did the mother last month.

It is appropriate to wear a red flower today if Dad is still well and kicking but if he has passed on, his memory should be honored by the wearing of a white flower.

SULLIVAN SEEKS TO THROW TRIAL INTO U. S. COURT

SAYS HE CAN'T GET FAIR HEARING IN STATE COURT

Judge Pickrel Expected To Act On Transfer At Arraignment Monday

NEW ORLEANS, June 15.—(AP)—Charging that Senator Huey P. Long was trying to "destroy" him through state court action, and that he was being deprived of his constitutional rights, Col. John P. Sullivan, a Louisiana anti-Long patronage advisor to the Roosevelt administrtion, today sought entry to federal court.

His counsel filed a petition in criminal court asking that charges of "operating a confidence game" in connection with real estate deals be transferred from the state court to federal district court here for trial.

The petition was filed under a section of the federal code which provides that a defendant may apply to federal court for removal where he can show that he cannot obtain an impartial trial and is being deprived of due process of law.

Judge Mark C. Pickrel, of Lake Charles, assigned by the Louisiana supreme court in a 4 to 3 decision to sit on the case, has set arraignment of Sullivan for Monday in criminal district court, and it was considered likely that he would rule upon the federal transfer petition at that time.

The charges were filed against Sullivan by James O'Connor, assistant attorney general, before Judge Wil-

TRAVELING MEN WILL MEET HERE

Louisiana Association Names Monroe As Convention City For 1936

The Louisiana Travelers association will hold its annual convention in Monroe in 1936, according to an Associated Press dispatch yesterday from Lafayette, where the association held its meeting for this year on Friday and Saturday. The invitation to come to Monroe for next year's meeting was presented by J. L. Keenan, president of the Monroe Hotel association, who was present at the gathering.

Two hundred delegates, representing all parts of the state, were present at the Lafayette meeting. It is expected that a large attendance will feature the Monroe convention next year.

S. A. Fortier, New Orleans, was elected president of the association at the concluding business session of the convention in Lafayette.

ROOSEVELT WORKS ON NEW NRA PLAN

U. S. Chamber Of Commerce Assails Whole Recovery Policy

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP)—Relieved for the moment of major labor trouble, President Roosevelt today dug into the job of setting up the midget NRA to the accompaniment of a fresh blast of criticism from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The threat of a recovery-disrupting soft coal strike, originally set for tomorrow midnight, was removed when Appalachian producers agreed with the United Mine Workers to continue present wages, hours and working conditions through June 30.

Executive orders to preserve the recovery administration's shell were forecast for tomorrow. James L. O'Neill, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust company of New York, was reported to have been selected to head the new organization.

The chamber of commerce, in its Washington review, issued after a directors' meeting, assailed practically the whole administration recovery policy. The business organization stressed particularly its opposition to the Wagner labor disputes bill and the economic security program.

The coal producers represented at the joint conference with the miners agreed unanimously to continue their present wage and hour contracts, and to reassemble June 24 to negotiate new agreements to replace those expiring June 30.

This action was requested by Mr. Roosevelt yesterday to give congress time to act on the Guffey coal stabilization bill before the bituminous sit-

AT LEAST 17 ARE KILLED IN TRAIN CRASH IN LONDON

LONDON, June 15.—(AP)—At least 17 persons were killed tonight as a fast train laden with newspapers ploughed into a stationary section of the London-Newcastle express at Welwyn station, in the metropolitan area.

The official report telephoned from Welwyn say 17 were killed, but two London newspapers placed the death toll at "30 so far."

Two score persons, all aboard the express which had stopped at Welwyn, were seriously injured.

The agonized screams of the dying, pinned in the wreckage, added to the horror of the scene as the noise of an explosion which followed the crash died away.

Eight bodies were removed from the wreckage.

HIGH DIVE IS FATAL FOR SHREVEPORT MAN

SHREVEPORT, La., June 15.—(AP)—Bill Baker, 27-year-old FWA highway inspector, died in a hospital here tonight from the effects of a spinal fracture received last Wednesday when he dived 35 feet into four feet of water at Rose Hill lake. He had been employed as federal inspector for parish highway improvement projects over a year.

His widow and a four-year-old son survive.

Victim's Throat Cut As He Tries To Arrest Allegedly Drunken Man

DEATH OCCURS IN MONROE SANITARIUM SOON AFTER

Slayer Is Held In Jail At Jonesboro Pending Preliminary Hearing

C. M. Gunter, 59, Jackson parish deputy sheriff, was fatally stabbed in the throat about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Gordon Ziegler, 40, Jackson parish farmer, when the officer attempted to place Ziegler under arrest.

The stabbing took place on a residential street in Eros. Gunter's jugular vein was severed. An ambulance was rushed to Eros from Monroe and the officer was brought here to the Riverside sanitarium where he died within less than an hour.

According to Jackson parish authorities, Gunter was able to fire two shots at his assailant before losing consciousness, but neither shot took effect.

Ziegler went to the home of a relative in Eros after the stabbing where he was placed under arrest by Sheriff Neal Thomas of Jackson parish, who rushed to the scene from Jonesboro upon hearing of the trouble.

He was placed in the Jackson parish jail at Jonesboro to await the outcome of Gunter's wounds. When informed by The Morning World early Saturday night that Gunter had died, Sheriff Thomas said that Ziegler would be charged with the slaying and would be held in jail without bond pending a preliminary hearing.

According to Sheriff Thomas and residents of Eros, Ziegler had been on a drunken spree for several hours and had been warned numerous times by Deputy Gunter to "go home and get sobered up." Each time the warning was met with a curse from Ziegler and a mumbled threat, it was stated.

Finally Deputy Gunter told the man that unless he did as he had been ordered, he would be forced to place him under arrest and take him to the jail at Jonesboro, according to reports.

This time, reports stated, Ziegler became highly abusive and began to curse the officer in a loud voice. Still not wishing to have trouble with the man, Gunter ignored the abuse and went about his business, it was said.

About 3:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon, the deputy was said to have

HIGH WINDS JOIN ATTACK OF FLOOD WATERS IN TEXAS

AUSTIN, Texas, June 15.—(AP)—Roaring winds joined flood waters tonight in a devastating attack on central and southwest Texas which left at least 13 persons dead and scores missing.

Losses to crops and property forged into the millions of dollars.

As cloudbursts fed the floods, a twisting wind dippped into a small community near Kaufman, splintered a farmhouse and killed Elmer Burns, 48.

Houses and bridges were washed away in the racing streams. At Del Rio, A. J. Mitchell, farmer near Italy, was drowned with his wife and their two small children. Two were drowned at Kenedy and one at Victoria.

Laredo reported train service paralyzed on the National lines of Mexico, at Altos, about 25 miles southwest of Laredo.

Three special trains of Rotarians from the United States, bound for the international convention at Mexico, D. F., were held at Laredo, while two more were held at Nuevo Laredo, across the Rio Grande.

RABBI HIRSCH SEES BRIGHT FUTURE AHEAD FOR CITY, BUILT ON LOYALTY, COOPERATION

Brilliant Leader Of Jewish Congregation Reviews City's Progress

Spirit Of Democracy And Understanding Characteristic Of Community

EDITOR'S NOTE: The story set down here is a paraphrase of an informal conversation with Rabbi Hirsch, Monroe's brilliant, scholarly and able minister of the Jewish faith. It represents his earnest, sincere and appreciative estimation of the city he loves and serves. Rabbi Hirsch speaks with authority. He is the leader of Congregation B'Nai Israel, one of the largest church organizations of the city. Prominent in civic affairs, he is a former chairman of the Red Cross chapter, past president of the Kiwanis club, and immediate past governor of the Louisiana-Mississippi district of Kiwanis. He is now international chairman of attendance for all the clubs of the organization in the United States and Canada. He is acknowledged one of the great orators of the south.

BY RABBI F. K. HIRSCH

Rabbi Hirsch

We are accustomed to hearing people, absent from their home communities, speak of "my town," "our city," as they discuss the relative importance of institutions and activities "back home" as compared with those in the community which they may be visiting.

I sometimes wonder if those people use the possessive pronoun merely in a general sense of association with the city they call home, or if they really have a feeling of ownership, of responsibility, of being a definite and vital part of the home town. I believe there is a vast difference between the two aspects of citizenship.

From my observation and contact with the people of Monroe since I first came here to live more than seven years ago, I am persuaded that the people of this city have a deep-seated pride of citizenship and a sense of its obligation which give special significance to the phrase when they talk of "our town."

That attitude is given expression in the spirit of cooperation in public endeavors which is characteristic of Monroe and its people. It is one of the finest assurances of the great future that unquestionably confronts this city. It is a spirit that makes achievement inevitable, because it recognizes that strength lies in unity of purpose and success in cooperative effort.

I do not say that as a "city booster." I abhor the term. I say it because the convictions that came to me on my first visit to Monroe have been confirmed by years of residence in the city and close contact with every element that goes to make up the community's citizenship. My first impression of Monroe seven years ago was that of a city sure of itself, a city imbued with the ideals of progress, a growing community that offered wide fields of opportunity.

In spite of the fact that the past seven years have included the period of so-called depression, Monroe today is a greater city than it was when I first saw it. The spirit of cooperation and mutual good will, devoting itself to the common welfare in a way that makes the term "our city" luminous with meaningful significance, has surmounted economic difficulties and has set a fine mark of community accomplishment which few cities of its size can boast, either in the south or elsewhere.

Perhaps one of the reasons for the achievements of the past and the assurances for the future lies in the fine spirit of American democracy that permeates the citizenry of Monroe. There is an equality of mind and purpose that recognizes no false lines of class distinction—no caste except that of worthiness, integrity and civic loyalty. It is these charac-

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 15.—If you have seen a fellow entirely hidden behind a thin lamp post, it's your favorite sporting writer, who predicted Max Baer in the early part of the first round. From what I can hear Katie Smith was the only one who guessed it right. So, Katie, from now on I am for you. No matter which side the mountain the moon is on. I am glad the judges told us who won for you couldn't tell from the broadcasting. Anyone casting for all big sporting events should be sold to Sleepy Eye. Then he only tells you who he is rooting for it, and don't tell you whether or not he is a Democrat or Republican.

WORK WILL BEGIN ON 2 PIPELINES

160 Men Will Receive $200,000 In Wages On Gas Field Projects

Two pipeline projects involving the expenditure of about $200,000 in wages to 160 or more men during the next several months, will be started in the northeast Louisiana gas field about the middle of this week, it was learned yesterday afternoon from an authoritative source.

The projects are the taking up of a 38-mile pipeline from Alto, in Richland parish to Pioneer, in West Carroll parish, and the re-laying of the pipe in a new line of approximately the same length, from Perryville, in Ouachita parish, to Pioneer.

Work on the projects will be done by men employed by the Southern Natural Gas company, an organization operating in the gas field and having its headquarters at Birmingham, Ala. This company owns the present pipeline from Alto to Pioneer and owns a compressor station constructed last year at Perryville.

Nearly all of the labor required for the projects has already been employed, it was stated.

The line from Alto to Pioneer is an 18-inch line, coupled with dresser couplings. As the pipe is taken up, it will be cleaned, repaired, repainted and installed in the new line, the two projects being carried on at the same time.

No officials of the gas company were in Monroe yesterday, and no official statement concerning the reason for taking up the Alto line was obtained.

It was stated that the taking up of the old line will not affect the regular employment of men at the Alto compressor plants.

A WELCOME TO SUMMER!

Summer's here! And racing onto the scene comes the Summer Girl of 1935, sprightly, joyous and lovely, eager for the fun the season promises. With the waves at her heels and fleecy clouds above, the beach sprite silhouetted here typifies Miss America, summer model. She is blond and shapely Jeanne Carmen, movie starlet, dashing gloom to the winds.

Big Automobile Show Will Be Staged Here

Remarkable Progress Of Motor Industry Will Be Shown In Exhibits

The remarkable story of business progress made by the automobile industry throughout the period of recent depression will be reflected in the first automobile show to be given in this city in many years, which will be held during "Automobile Week," June 22 to 28, inclusive.

The show, which will be sponsored by various automobile dealers of the city, will add new emphasis to the fact that the depression is a thing of the past and that business has long since "turned the corner" of new and better times.

The automobile show will be only part of the observance of the week, and will consist of a display of 1935 models of the leading cars distributed in the Monroe area. The display will be worthy of the great industry

There will be presents for him to open when he awakes, there won't be work for him to do and he may sleep as long and as much as he wishes.

His favorite dishes will appear on the table, he may lounge around in his stocking feet and throw his ashes on the floor if he chooses.

Which is just one way of announcing that this is Father's day.

The entire nation today honors the bread winner of the family, just as it did the mother last month.

It is appropriate to wear a red flower today if Dad is still well and kicking but if he has passed on, his memory should be honored by the wearing of a white flower.

SULLIVAN SEEKS TO THROW TRIAL INTO U. S. COURT

Judge Pickrel Expected To Act On Transfer At Arraignment Monday

NEW ORLEANS, June 15.—(AP)—Charging that Senator Huey P. Long was trying to "destroy" him through state court action, and that he was being deprived of his constitutional rights, Col. John P. Sullivan, a Louisiana anti-Long patronage advisor to the Roosevelt administrttion, today sought entry to federal court.

His counsel filed a petition in criminal court asking that charges of "operating a confidence game" in connection with real estate deals be transferred from the state court to federal district court here for trial.

The petition was filed under a section of the federal code which provides that a defendant may apply to federal court for removal where he can show that he cannot obtain an impartial trial and is being deprived of due process of law.

Judge Mark C. Pickrel, of Lake Charles, assigned by the Louisiana supreme court in a 4 to 3 decision to sit on the case, has set arraignment of Sullivan for Monday in criminal district court, and it was considered likely that he would rule upon the federal transfer petition at that time.

The charges were filed against Sullivan by James O'Connor, assistant attorney general, before Judge Wil-

Louisiana Association Names Monroe As Convention City For 1936

The Louisiana Travelers association will hold its annual convention in Monroe in 1936, according to an Associated Press dispatch yesterday from Lafayette, where the association held its meeting for this year on Friday and Saturday. The invitation to come to Monroe for next year's meeting was presented by J. L. Keenan, president of the Monroe Hotel association, who was present at the gathering.

Two hundred delegates, representing all parts of the state, were present at the Lafayette meeting. It is expected that a large attendance will feature the Monroe convention next year.

S. A. Fortier, New Orleans, was elected president of the association at the concluding business session of the convention in Lafayette.

U. S. Chamber Of Commerce Assails Whole Recovery Policy

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP)—Relieved for the moment of major labor trouble, President Roosevelt today dug into the job of setting up the midget NRA to the accompaniment of a fresh blast of criticism from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The threat of a recovery-disrupting soft coal strike, originally set for tomorrow midnight, was removed when Appalachian producers agreed with the United Mine Workers to continue present wages, hours and working conditions through June 30.

Executive orders to preserve the recovery administration's shell were forecast for tomorrow. James L. O'Neill, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust company of New York, was reported to have been selected to head the new organization.

The chamber of commerce, in its Washington review, issued after a directors' meeting, assailed practically the whole administration recovery policy. The business organization stressed particularly its opposition to the Wagner labor disputes bill and the economic security program.

The coal producers represented at the joint conference with the miners agreed unanimously to continue their present wage and hour contracts, and to reassemble June 24 to negotiate new agreements to replace those expiring June 30.

This action was requested by Mr. Roosevelt yesterday to give congress time to act on the Guffey coal stabilization bill before the bituminous sit-

AT LEAST 17 ARE KILLED IN TRAIN CRASH IN LONDON

LONDON, June 15.—(AP)—At least 17 persons were killed tonight as a fast train laden with newspapers ploughed into a stationary section of the London-Newcastle express at Welwyn station, in the metropolitan area.

The official report telephoned from Welwyn say 17 were killed, but two London newspapers placed the death toll at "30 so far."

Two score persons, all aboard the express which had stopped at Welwyn, were seriously injured.

The agonized screams of the dying, pinned in the wreckage, added to the horror of the scene as the noise of an explosion which followed the crash died away.

Eight bodies were removed from the wreckage.

HIGH DIVE IS FATAL FOR SHREVEPORT MAN

SHREVEPORT, La., June 15.—(AP)—Bill Baker, 27-year-old PWA highway inspector, died in a hospital here tonight from the effects of a spinal fracture received last Wednesday when he dived 35 feet into four feet of water at Rose Hill lake. He had been employed as federal inspector for parish highway improvement projects over a year.

His widow and a four-year-old son survive.

Slayer Is Held In Jail At Jonesboro Pending Preliminary Hearing

C. M. Gunter, 59, Jackson parish deputy sheriff, was fatally stabbed in the throat about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Gordon Ziegler, 40, Jackson parish farmer, when the officer attempted to place Ziegler under arrest.

The stabbing took place on a residential street in Eros. Gunter's jugular vein was severed. An ambulance was rushed to Eros from Monroe and the officer was brought here to the Riverside sanitarium where he died within less than an hour.

According to Jackson parish authorities, Gunter was able to fire two shots at his assailant before losing consciousness, but neither shot took effect.

Ziegler went to the home of a relative in Eros after the stabbing where he was placed under arrest by Sheriff Neal Thomas of Jackson parish, who rushed to the scene from Jonesboro upon hearing of the trouble.

He was placed in the Jackson parish jail at Jonesboro to await the outcome of Gunter's wounds. When informed by The Morning World early Saturday night that Gunter had died, Sheriff Thomas said that Ziegler would be charged with the slaying and would be held in jail without bond pending a preliminary hearing.

According to Sheriff Thomas and residents of Eros, Ziegler had been on a drunken spree for several hours and had been warned numerous times by Deputy Gunter to "go home and get sobered up." Each time the warning was met with a curse from Ziegler and a mumbled threat, it was stated.

Finally Deputy Gunter told the man that unless he did as he had been ordered, he would be forced to place him under arrest and take him to the jail at Jonesboro, according to reports.

This time, reports stated, Ziegler became highly abusive and began to curse the officer in a loud voice. Still not wishing to have trouble with the man, Gunter ignored the abuse and went about his business, it was said.

About 3:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon, the deputy was said to have

HIGH WINDS JOIN ATTACK OF FLOOD WATERS IN TEXAS

AUSTIN, Texas, June 15.—(AP)—Roaring winds joined flood waters tonight in a devastating attack on central and southwest Texas which left at least 13 persons dead and scores missing.

Losses to crops and property forged into the millions of dollars.

As cloudbursts fed the floods, a twisting wind dippped into a small community near Kaufman, splintered a farmhouse and killed Elmer Burns, 48.

Houses and bridges were washed away in the racing streams. At Del Rio, A. J. Mitchell, farmer near Italy, was drowned with his wife and their two small children. Two were drowned at Kenedy and one at Victoria.

Laredo reported train service paralyzed on the National lines of Mexico, at Altos, about 25 miles southwest of Laredo.

Three special trains of Rotarians from the United States, bound for the international convention at Mexico, D. F., were held at Laredo, while two more were held at Nuevo Laredo, across the Rio Grande.

RABBI HIRSCH SEES BRIGHT FUTURE AHEAD FOR CITY, BUILT ON LOYALTY, COOPERATION

Spirit Of Democracy And Understanding Characteristic Of Community

EDITOR'S NOTE: The story set down here is a paraphrase of an informal conversation with Rabbi Hirsch, Monroe's brilliant, scholarly and able minister of the Jewish faith. It represents his earnest, sincere and appreciative estimation of the city he loves and serves. Rabbi Hirsch speaks with authority. He is the leader of Congregation B'Nai Israel, one of the largest church organizations of the city. Prominent in civic affairs, he is a former chairman of the Red Cross chapter, past president of the Kiwanis club, and immediate past governor of the Louisiana-Mississippi district of Kiwanis. He is now international chairman of attendance for all the clubs of the organization in the United States and Canada. He is acknowledged one of the great orators of the south.

BY RABBI F. K. HIRSCH

(As Told to Fred Williamson, Managing Editor of The World and News-Star)

We are accustomed to hearing people, absent from their home communities, speak of "my town," "our city," as they discuss the relative importance of institutions and activities "back home" as compared with those in the community which they may be visiting.

Rabbi Hirsch

I sometimes wonder if those people use the possessive pronoun merely in a general sense of association with the city they call home, or if they really have a feeling of ownership, of responsibility, of being a definite and vital part of the home town. I believe there is a vast difference between the two aspects of citizenship.

From my observation and contact with the people of Monroe since I first came here to live more than seven years ago, I am persuaded that the people of this city have a deep-seated pride of citizenship and a sense of its obligation which give special significance to the phrase when they talk of "our town."

That attitude is given expression in the spirit of cooperation in public endeavors which is characteristic of Monroe and its people. It is one of the finest assurances of the great future that unquestionably confronts this city. It is a spirit that makes achievement inevitable, because it recognizes that strength lies in unity of purpose and success in cooperative effort.

I do not say that as a "city booster." I abhor the term. I say it because the convictions that came to me on my first visit to Monroe have been confirmed by years of residence in the city and close contact with every element that goes to make up the community's citizenship. My first impression of Monroe seven years ago was that of a city sure of itself, a city imbued with the ideals of progress, a growing community that offered wide fields of opportunity.

In spite of the fact that the past seven years have included the period of so-called depression, Monroe today is a greater city than it was when I first saw it. The spirit of cooperation and mutual good will, devoting itself to the common welfare in a way that makes the term "our city" luminous with meaningful significance, has surmounted economic difficulties and has set a fine mark of community accomplishment which few cities of its size can boast, either in the south or elsewhere.

Perhaps one of the reasons for the achievements of the past and the assurances for the future lies in the fine spirit fo American democracy that permeates the citizenry of Monroe. There is an equality of mind and purpose that recognizes no false lines of class distinction—no caste except that of worthiness, integrity and civic loyalty. It is these charac-

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 15.—If you have seen a fellow entirely hidden behind a thin lamp post, it's your favorite sporting writer, who predicted Max Baer in the early part of the first round. From what I can hear Kate Smith was the only one who guessed it right. So, Katie, from now on I am for you, no matter which side the mountain the moon is on. I am glad the judges told us who won for you couldn't tell from the broadcasting. Broadcasting for all big sporting events should be sold to Henry Ford, for he only tells you who is paying for it, and don't try to sell you a car, or name Dizzy Dean's dog.

ANNUAL RODEO TO BE HELD IN JULY

Attraction Will Begin On Fourth And Continue Four Days

West Monroe's annual rodeo will be held by McGuire park on July 4, 5 and 6, it was announced Saturday by P. O. Clark, president of the rodeo association.

Mr. Clark and V. H. Faust motored to Pine Bluff, Ark., Sunday to inspect the Lewis rodeo. While there they expect to line up some major attractions for the West Monroe event.

Ike Hamilton, West Monroe's rodeo clown, and his trick mule, "Toby" filled a week-end engagement with the Lewis Rodeo corporation of Palestine, Texas. This is the third engagement that Hamilton has filled in neighboring states this season.

Hamilton will again be a feature attraction at the West Monroe rodeo this year.

If present plans are carried out, the rodeo will be greater and more attractive than ever this season.

Mr. Bill Stringer spent last week-end in Zenora as the guest of his mother.

DOCTORS HONOR DAFOE

While the American and Canadian Medical associations showered honors on him at their joint convention at Atlantic City, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe (right), physician to the Dionne quintuplets, found time for a sight-seeing ride along the boardwalk with Mayor Harry Bacharach. The celebrated doctor kept in touch by telephone with experts left in charge of the hospital at Callander, Ont.

Mrs. George Beekman won the golf prize, a golf bill.

The members present were Mesdames Fred Coats, W. P. Douglass, George Beekman, W. V. Garner, E. V. Loftin, E. L. Gladney, Jr., W. B. Gladney, George H. Goodwin, R. E. Holladay, Jr., George T. Madison, James Madison, A. L. Ross, H. I. Seligman, Charles Snyder, Leo Terzia, C. J. Goodwin, R. H. Williams, J. B. Bennett, A. C. Volk, Ferd Wolff, George Ludlum, F. L. Billington, J. C. Young, H. Webb Madison, F. K. Pettiss and Don Quinn.

The guests who enjoyed the hospitality of the various members of the club were Mesdames Archie Bane McBride, Isaac Chapman, H. F. Madison, David I. Garrett of Monroe, John Coats, Estelle B. Harris, Sallie Meredith of Monroe, L. E. Pagan, Thomas Higginbotham of Geneso, Ill., C. E. Bartell of Lexington, Va., Jo Linthicum of Los Angeles and B. N. Bone and Misses Dorothy Todd of New Orleans, Sadie Wanger of Houston, Texas, Julia Bowden of Baton Rouge and Lucie Jane Harris.

A wedding of widespread interest was solemnized June 8, when Miss Emma Johnston and Mr. Travis Culp were united in marriage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ward in Sterlington, with Rev. R. W. Loftin, pastor of the Baptist church officiating. A few intimate friends and members of the families witnessed the impressive ceremony.

Miss Johnston is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Johnston of Bastrop. Mr. Culp is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Y. Culp of Hamburg, Ark., and is connected with a dairy company in this city. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Culp will make their home in Bastrop.

Of interest to their many friends is the marriage of Miss Dorothy Waters to Mr. C. D. Gunn, solemnized June 7 in Trogo, La., at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. N. Murry. The bride was becomingly attired in an ensemble of navy blue sheer with white accessories. Miss Waters is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Waters of Trogo, and for the past four years has been a popular member of the Beekman school faculty. Mr. Gunn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Gunn of San Antonio, and is co-owner of the Purity creamery in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Gunn are now at home to their friends at the Louisiana hotel.

Mrs. Charles A. Kroemer's home on West Pine street was artistically decorated with spring flowers in pastel shades of pink, yellow and green, when she entertained at a bridge party Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. F. P. Dobinson, Mrs. Leroy Loftin and Mrs. J. W. Gillen were each presented with exquisitely embroidered pillow cases for high score, consolation and cut prizes.

Following the interesting games of bridge, Mrs. Kroemer served a delectable salad course to Mesdames C. M. Solly, E. V. Loftin, W. V. Garnier, J. C. Young, T. A. Murchie, Alex Pettiss, Joe Tinney, F. P. Robinson, Leroy Loftin, John Coats, F. L. Billington, Ferd Wolff ,C. L. Gill, P. L. Givens, Hunter Patterson, Boysie Spear, S. G. Lucky, A. B. Andrews, L. C. Ingram, Fred Coats, Dan Files, A. L. ## NUDE BODY OF WOMAN IS FOUND IN CISTERN

BANGOR, Pa., June 15.—(AP)—The nude body of a woman, strangled to death with a heavy wire, was found at the bottom of a cistern today, bound hand and foot and weighted with a heavy rock.

Dr. Theodore Reichbaum, deputy coroner, said the woman was between 25 and 35 years of age. The body had been in the water of the cistern for between two weeks and a month, he said.

The body was discovered by Miss Olga Dithomas, 18, when she dipped a bucket into the cistern in the rear of her home.

SAMARITAN HOME APPEALS FOR AID

Money Asked Of Public Before 2 O'Clock Monday Afternoon

The Home of the Good Samaritan is confronted with the serious financial necessity of raising $1,000 by 2 p.m. Monday or the home will have to be closed, Superintendent J. R. Downs said yesterday.

This institution at present cares for 20 unfortunate girls and their babies, all of whom will be homeless unless the money is forthcoming to assure the continuance of operation of the home, Rev. Downs said.

Rev. Downs is conceded to have done an important and necessary work for many years in the operation of this home. A mortgage on the place is past due and an ultimatum has been given.

"In all my many years I have never before asked for immediate relief as I am forced to do now," Rev. Downs said, "and I am most regretful to be compelled to do so now, but it is forced upon me for the sake of these unfortunate girls and their innocent babies."

Rev. Downs is asking all persons of Monroe to aid him if they can do so with cash, be it a large or small sum, for all will be thankfully received. The money should be left at either the Central Savings Bank and Trust company or at the Ouachita National bank. What money is forthcoming should be donated at once, for after 2 o'clock tomorrow it will be too late.

Mangham

Mrs. C. Noble Hatch was hostess at a garden party and linen shower Wednesday afternoon given at her home in Mangham honoring Mrs. Claude Frey, a recent bride.

Upon arrival of the honoree accompanied by her mother, Mrs. T. W. Stark and mother-in-law, Mrs. Will Frey, Sr., a corsage of sweet peas was presented them by the hostess. The honoree was lovely in a silk sport model dress of light blue crepe with a short length coat of lace. She wore a small white hat with blue accessories that completed the costume.

A puzzle of gold letters arranged by the bride upon a silver card board read: "Love, Honor and Obey."

The gift to the honoree from the hostess was a beautiful book, "Bridal Chimes," engraved in gold letters. Each guest at this time wrote a word of happiness in the book to the couple.

Then Julia Judd, a talented young lady, took her place among the guests and gave a lovely piece of original poetry in honor of the bride. After this a huge laundry basket filled with beautiful and useful linens was placed near the honoree's chair in the garden. Following the presentation of the gifts, Miss Mary Mhoon Noble in a white satin gown appeared singing from the window to the honoree, "Love Finds A Way."

At the close of the afternoon the hostess invited the guests into the house. The reception rooms were attractively decorated with pink roses and other blossoms. The dining table was arranged with a lace cloth and crystal vase. Mrs. M. W. Wooten and Mrs. T. A. Judd presided at the punch bowls on either side of the table.

Assisting in serving the assorted cake, lady fingers and macaroons, were Misses Margie Wooten, Pearle Chapman, Margurite Humble, Fay Brunson, and the Cooper twins of Rayville.

With the sunset reflecting through the two large windows with their heavy blue draperies and fish net panels, and the guests wearing fashionable costumes, varying lovely colors, and colorful flowers placed about the room, while little Susan Ford in her smart organdy strewing confetti from a basket of yellow and gold made the new home very picturesque.

West Monroe Boy's Trip To Woods Halted By Accident

C. E. Wiggins, Jr., Receives Knife Wound While Riding In Auto

Vacation time brings its manifold pleasures into the sphere of boyhood, but it also brings its pain and suffering—such as a "stumped" toe and the loss of a toe nail, stone bruises, cuts on the hands received while making things with a knife, and bruises or broken bones received in falls while running at play.

C. E. Wiggins, Jr., 14, son of a West Monroe barber, suffered one of those painful vacation mishaps. Yesterday a knife wound in his arm marked the place where he was hurt while in the eager pursuit of boyhood pleasure.

In company with his pal, H. A. Brownlee, Jr., Wiggins was walking up Trenton street, bound for the woods and bluffs above the river north of West Monroe, where they planned to explore and cut some small limbs for use in making bows that would throw arrows with greater force than limbs of the city's shade trees. They were barefooted and hatless. They carried a small axe and a hunter's knife.

They flagged a newspaperman who was driving north in his automobile, and he gave them a ride northward up Trenton street.

When the car reached the 1700 block of the street, where the boys were to meet another pal, W. J. Dykes, the two boys asked the driver to stop the car so that they could get out. The request was complied with, and immediately after the boys had left the car, the Wiggins lad's arm dripped blood from a five-inch wound just above his elbow.

The boy had been seated in the car between the driver and young Brownlee. Brownlee's hunting knife, without a sheath, was in his left pocket with the blade pointing upward. In rising from the seat, Brownlee accidentally forced the knife blade against the arm of his friend.

The accident happened in front of the home of Mrs. J. Pace Davis, who upon being asked if she had any germicidal application in her home responded in the affirmative and invited the boys and their acquaintance to hurry at once into the bathroom of her dwelling. Mrs. Davis quickly found some material for bandages, while the newspaperman applied the disinfectant. She tied the bandages, and young Wiggins then was carried downtown to the barbership where his father is employed.

Taken by his father to a doctor, with his two pals, Brownlee and Dykes at his side, Wiggins experienced the sensation of having four stitches taken in his arm.

He bore up manfully throughout the experience, from the moment he was wounded until the physician finished his task.

The most unpleasant thing about the injury, according to the lad, was that he was "figuring on starting in on his swimmin' tomorrow."

The motion picture film is becoming an increasingly important factor in the Swedish educational system, about 4,000,000 persons viewing selected educational films in the last year.

Mrs. W. V. Garnier extended a delightful social courtesy to Mrs. Sam Houston of Hammond, La., and Mrs. Jo Linthicum of Los Angeles, when she entertained Tuesday evening at her home on West Hickory avenue, with a bridge party. Mrs. James Madison received a cigarette box and tray of glazed white pottery for high score, while Mrs. George Goodwin was presented with a dainty white boudoir tray for second high score. The consolation prize, two lovely white vases, was awarded to Mrs. W. C. Hornsby. Mrs. Garnier's gifts to her honor guests were exquisite white evening bags.

Following the games, an ice course, reflecting the chosen colors of white and green, was served to Mesdames Sam Houston, Jo Linthicum, R. H. Williams, E. L. Gladney, Jr., C. J. Goodwin, George H. Beekman, A. C. Volk, Clifton Ingram, James Madison, J. B. Tisdale, Ferd Wolff, Field Montgomery, Arthur Ross, E. S. Trippe, W. C. Hornsby, W. P. Douglass, H. Webb Madison, Leo Terzia, W. B. Mrs. C. J. Goodwin, Mrs. R. H. Williams, Mrs. E. V. Loftin and Mrs. J. B. Bennett were the gracious hostesses at the regular meeting of the ladies' auxiliary of the Morehouse Country club. Baskets and vases filled with gorgeous roses were used to decorate the lounge of the club. After a delicious luncheon, the members and their guests spent a most enjoyable afternoon at bridge and on the links. Daintily wrapped packages of soap were presented as table prizes, and Mrs. C. E. Barthel received a box of finger tip towels for highest score in the bridge games.

2 KINDS OF CHECKS

IN planning your life insurance, you may assume that if the postman brings checks at regular intervals for years to come, your family's financial problems will be few.

But "checks" of another kind are needed equally; checks against unwise investment of insurance proceeds; checks against over-generosity and extravagance.

An insurance trust provides checks of both types. In addition, funds are always available for unforeseen emergencies.

There is no part of our trust work that gives us deeper satisfaction than cooperating with insurance men and their clients to create this type of protection.

DOCTORS HONOR DAFOE

While the American and Canadian Medical associations showered honors on him at their joint convention at Atlantic City, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe (right), physician to the Dionne quintuplets, found time for a sight-seeing ride along the boardwalk with Mayor Harry Bacharach. The celebrated doctor kept in touch by telephone with experts left in charge of the hospital at Callander, Ont.

Mrs. George Beekman won the golf prize, a golf brll.

The members present were Mesdames Fred Coats, W. P. Douglass, George Beekman, W. V. Garner, E. V. Loftin, E. L. Gladney, Jr., W. B. Gladney, George H. Goodwin, R. E. Holladay, Jr., George T. Madison, James Madison, A. L. Ross, H. I. Seligman, Charles Snyder, Leo Terzia, C. J. Goodwin, R. H. Williams, J. B. Bennett, A. C. Volk, Ferd Wolff, George Ludlum, F. L. Billington, J. C. Young, H. Webb Madison, F. K. Pettiss and Don Quinn.

The guests who enjoyed the hospitality of the various members of the club were Mesdames Archie Bane McBride, Isaac Chapman, H. F. Madison, David I. Garrett of Monroe, John Coats, Estelle B. Harris, Sallie Meredith of Monroe, L. E. Pagan, Thomas Higginbotham of Geneso, Ill., C. E. Bartell of Lexington, Va., Jo Linthicum of Los Angeles and B. N. Bone and Misses Dorothy Todd of New Orleans, Sadie Wanger of Houston, Texas, Julia Bowden of Baton Rouge and Lucie Jane Harris.

A wedding of widespread interest was solemnized June 8, when Miss Emma Johnston and Mr. Travis Culp were united in marriage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ward in Sterlington, with Rev. R. W. Loftin, pastor of the Baptist church officiating. A few intimate friends and members of the families witnessed the impressive ceremony.

Miss Johnston is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Johnston of Bastrop. Mr. Culp is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Y. Culp of Hamburg, Ark., and is connected with a dairy company in this city. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Culp will make their home in Bastrop.

Of interest to their many friends is the marriage of Miss Dorothy Waters to Mr. C. D. Gunn, solemnized June 7 in Trogo, La., at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. N. Murry. The bride was becomingly attired in an ensemble of navy blue sheer with white accessories. Miss Waters is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Waters of Trogo, and for the past four years has been a popular member of the Beekman school faculty. Mr. Gunn is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Gunn of San Antonio, and is co-owner of the Purity creamery in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Gunn are now at home to their friends at the Louisiana hotel.

Mrs. Charles A. Kroemer's home on West Pine street was artistically decorated with spring flowers in pastel shades of pink, yellow and green, when she entertained at a bridge party Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. F. P. Dobinson, Mrs. Leroy Loftin and Mrs. J. W. Gillen were each presented with exquisitely embroidered pillow cases for high score, consolation and cut prizes.

Following the interesting games of bridge, Mrs. Kroemer served a delectable salad course to Mesdames C. M. Solly, E. V. Loftin, W. V. Garnier, J. C. Young, T. A. Murchie, Alex Pettiss, Joe Tinney, F. P. Robinson, Leroy Loftin, John Coats, F. L. Billington, Ferd Wolff ,C. L. Gill, P. L. Givens, Hunter Patterson, Boysie Spear, S. G. Lucky, A. B. Andrews, L. C. Ingram, Fred Coats, Dan Files, A. L. Ross, V. H. Reitzell, John Eldridge, J. W. Gillen, E. S. Trippe, J. W. McFadden, L. E. Pagan, Dick Norris, Robert Todd Morris, C. A. Colburn, Ed David, S. M. Stelling, George Khouri, Misses Marguerite Colburn and Tina Collins.

Money Asked Of Public Before 2 O'Clock Monday Afternoon

The Home of the Good Samaritan is confronted with the serious financial necessity of raising $1,000 by 2 p.m. Monday or the home will have to be closed, Superintendent J. R. Downs said yesterday.

This institution at present cares for 20 unfortunate girls and their babies, all of whom will be homeless unless the money is forthcoming to assure the continuance of operation of the home, Rev. Downs said.

Rev. Downs is conceded to have done an important and necessary work for many years in the operation of this home. A mortgage on the place is past due and an ultimatum has been given.

"In all my many years I have never before asked for immediate relief as I am forced to do now," Rev. Downs said, "and I am most regretful to be compelled to do so now, but it is forced upon me for the sake of these unfortunate girls and their innocent babies."

Rev. Downs is asking all persons of Monroe to aid him if they can do so with cash, be it a large or small sum, for all will be thankfully received. The money should be left at either the Central Savings Bank and Trust company or at the Ouachita National bank. What money is forthcoming should be donated at once, for after 2 o'clock tomorrow it will be too late.

Mangham

Mrs. C. Noble Hatch was hostess at a garden party and linen shower Wednesday afternoon given at her home in Mangham honoring Mrs. Claude Frey, a recent bride.

Upon arrival of the honoree accompanied by her mother, Mrs. T. W. Stark and mother-in-law, Mrs. Will Frey, Sr., a corsage of sweet peas was presented them by the hostess. The honoree was lovely in a silk sport model dress of light blue crepe with a short length coat of lace. She wore a small white hat with blue accessories that completed the costume.

A puzzle of gold letters arranged by the bride upon a silver card board read: "Love, Honor and Obey."

The gift to the honoree from the hostess was a beautiful book, "Bridal Chimes," engraved in gold letters. Each guest at this time wrote a word of happiness in the book to the couple.

Then Julia Judd, a talented young lady, took her place among the guests and gave a lovely piece of original poetry in honor of the bride. After this a huge laundry basket filled with beautiful and useful linens was placed near the honoree's chair in the garden. Following the presentation of the gifts, Miss Mary Mhoon Noble in a white satin gown appeared singing from the window to the honoree, "Love Finds A Way."

At the close of the afternoon the hostess invited the guests into the house. The reception rooms were attractively decorated with pink roses and other blossoms. The dining table was arranged with a lace cloth and crystal vase. Mrs. M. W. Wooten and Mrs. T. A. Judd presided at the punch bowls on either side of the table.

Assisting in serving the assorted cake, lady fingers and macaroons, were Misses Margie Wooten, Pearle Chapman, Margurite Humble, Fay Brunson, and the Cooper twins of Rayville.

With the sunset reflecting through the two large windows with their heavy blue draperies and fish net panels, and the guests wearing fashionable costumes, varying lovely colors, and colorful flowers placed about the room, while little Susan Ford in her smart organdy strewing confetti from a basket of yellow and gold made the new home very picturesque.

Did you take the skyride at the Chicago World's fair? Then breathe a sigh of relief that you're not still on it, for here is the end of that spectacular creation of engineering genius. The west tower of the ride is shown falling after charges of dynamite wrecked the base. This was one of the most difficult feats connected with demolition of the fair buildings.

C. E. Wiggins, Jr., Receives Knife Wound While Riding In Auto

Vacation time brings its manifold pleasures into the sphere of boyhood, but it also brings its pain and suffering—such as a "stumped" toe and the loss of a toe nail, stone bruises, cuts on the hands received while making things with a knife, and bruises or broken bones received in falls while running at play.

C. E. Wiggins, Jr., 14, son of a West Monroe barber, suffered one of those painful vacation mishaps. Yesterday a knife wound in his arm marked the place where he was hurt while in the eager pursuit of boyhood pleasure.

In company with his pal, H. A. Brownlee, Jr., Wiggins was walking up Trenton street, bound for the woods and bluffs above the river north of West Monroe, where they planned to explore and cut some small limbs for use in making bows that would throw arrows with greater force than limbs of the city's shade trees. They were barefooted and hatless. They carried a small axe and a hunter's knife.

They flagged a newspaperman who was driving north in his automobile, and he gave them a ride northward up Trenton street.

When the car reached the 1700 block of the street, where the boys were to meet another pal, W. J. Dykes, the two boys asked the driver to stop the car so that they could get out. The request was complied with, and immediately after the boys had left the car, the Wiggins lad's arm dripped blood from a five-inch wound just above his elbow.

The boy had been seated in the car between the driver and young Brownlee. Brownlee's hunting knife, without a sheath, was in his left pocket with the blade pointing upward. In rising from the seat, Brownlee accidentally forced the knife blade against the arm of his friend.

The accident happened in front of the home of Mrs. J. Pace Davis, who upon being asked if she had any germicidal application in her home responded in the affirmative and invited the boys and their acquaintance to hurry at once into the bathroom of her dwelling. Mrs. Davis quickly found some material for bandages, while the newspaperman applied the disinfectant. She tied the bandages, and young Wiggins then was carried downtown to the barbership where his father is employed.

Taken by his father to a doctor, with his two pals, Brownlee and Dykes at his side, Wiggins experienced the sensation of having four stitches taken in his arm.

He bore up manfully throughout the experience, from the moment he was wounded until the physician finished his task.

The most unpleasant thing about the injury, according to the lad, was that he was "figuring on starting in on his swimmin' tomorrow."

Bastrop

Mrs. W. V. Garnier extended a delightful social courtesy to Mrs. Sam Houston of Hammond, La., and Mrs. Jo Linthicum of Los Angeles, when she entertained Tuesday evening at her home on West Hickory avenue, with a bridge party. Mrs. James Madison received a cigarette box and tray of glazed white pottery for high score, while Mrs. George Goodwin was presented with a dainty white boudoir tray for second high score. The consolation prize, two lovely white vases, was awarded to Mrs. W. C. Hornsby. Mrs. Garnier's gifts to her honor guests were exquisite white evening bags.

Following the games, an ice course, reflecting the chosen colors of white and green, was served to Mesdames Sam Houston, Jo Linthicum, R. H. Williams, E. L. Gladney, Jr., C. J. Goodwin, George H. Beekman, A. C. Volk, Clifton Ingram, James Madison, J. B. Tisdale, Ferd Wolff, Field Montgomery, Arthur Ross, E. S. Trippe, W. C. Hornsby, W. P. Douglass, H. Webb Madison, Leo Terzia, W. B. Gladney, George Goodwin, Misses Beryl Madison, Edith Hobbs, Irma Robinson, Mildred Shell and Fannie Hobbs.

Mrs. C. J. Goodwin, Mrs. R. H. Williams, Mrs. E. V. Loftin and Mrs. J. B. Bennett were the gracious hostesses at the regular meeting of the ladies' auxiliary of the Morehouse Country club. Baskets and vases filled with gorgeous roses were used to decorate the lounge of the club. After a delicious luncheon, the members and their guests spent a most enjoyable afternoon at bridge and on the links. Daintily wrapped packages of soap were presented as table prizes, and Mrs. C. E. Barthel received a box of finger tip towels for highest score in the bridge games.

NUDE BODY OF WOMAN IS FOUND IN CISTERN

BANGOR, Pa., June 15.—(AP)—The nude body of a woman, strangled to death with a heavy wire, was found at the bottom of a cistern today, bound hand and foot and weighted with a heavy rock.

Dr. Theodore Reichbaum, deputy coroner, said the woman was between 25 and 35 years of age. The body had been in the water of the cistern for between two weeks and a month, he said.

The body was discovered by Miss Olga Dithomas, 18, when she dipped a bucket into the cistern in the rear of her home.

2 KINDS OF CHECKS

IN planning your life insurance, you may assume that if the postman brings checks at regular intervals for years to come, your family's financial problems will be few.

But "checks" of another kind are needed equally; checks against unwise investment of insurance proceeds; checks against over-generosity and extravagance.

An insurance trust provides checks of both types. In addition, funds are always available for unforeseen emergencies.

There is no part of our trust work that gives us deeper satisfaction than cooperating with insurance men and their clients to create this type of protection.

DAIRY DAY CELEBRATION HELD IN CLAIBORNE PARISH

HOMER, La., June 15.—(Special)—The second annual Dairy day celebration in Claiborne parish, held in Homer Thursday, was attended by approximately 7,000 persons from six parishes. The event is sponsored yearly by the Homer Lions club as an encouragement to dairying and diversified farming.

The program for the day included parades and band concerts by bands of Homer, Haynesville and Hodge; an address of welcome by Mayor Harry McKenzie, addresses by E. W. Neasham, extension dairyman of Louisiana State university; Miss Mary Mims, extension sociologist of Louisiana State university, and I. W. Duggan, AAA official of Washington, D. C.; an aerial show by army aviators frim Barksdale field, Shreveport, and a terrapin derby.

SCENES FROM SHREVEPORT'S CENTENNIAL PAGEANT

The above illustrate characteristic scenes from Shreveport's centennial pageant, and constitute part of the tableau representation of one hundred years of Shreveport progress.

Historic Pageant Planned As Shreveport Celebrates

City's First Centennial Will Be Observed From June 29 To July 4

SHREVEPORT, June 15.—(Special)—In the history of Louisiana, nothing more spectacularly beautiful and artistic has been presented than the historic pageant which will mark the forthcoming celebration of this city's first centennial. The observance will begin June 29 and will run through July 4. There is an intensive program of entertainment for each day. Alone of all the other features, the historic pageant will be repeated. It will open on Monday, July 1 and run four nights.

Miss Maud S. Gill, salutatorian of Neville High school graduating class, will represent Monroe as one of the duchesses of the "Queen's Court" in the centennial pageantry at Shreveport's celebration. Miss Joyce Feinstein, also one of the honor students at Neville High, will appear as maid to the "Duchess of Monroe." The two Monroe girls will be royally feted at Shreveport during the centennial festivities.

One hundred years ago (on July 1, 1835, to be precise) the Caddo Indians sold part of northwest Louisiana to the United States for $80,000. The tract disposed of embraced a large portion of what is now southwest Arkansas and northwest Louisiana, but it did not include the site of the city of Shreveport. In the purchase treaty, 640 acres were reserved to Larkin Edwards, interpreter and friend of the Caddo tribe. Edwards afterwards sold this acreage to Henry Miller Shreve, eminent army engineer and steamboat pioneer, and six others, and upon it the city of Shreveport was built. Some idea of what the Caddo Indians parted with for $80,000 may be gathered from the statement that up to January 1 last, Caddo parish alone had produced crude oil valued at nearly $178,000,000.

The historic pageant will illustrate 100 years of Shreveport progress. It is beautiful in conception and lovely in execution. For its presentation the centennial committee engaged the services of the Rogers Co., of Fostoria, Ohio, nationally known producers. The scenario constitutes a number of colorful episodes and events beginning even before the transfer of ownership from the Caddo Indians and running through to the present time. Over 2000 persons will be in the pageant cast.

Beautiful as it may confidently be expected to be, the pageant is but one of the many attractive features of the centennial celebration. On the opening day there will be a military parade and aerial display provided largely by the 100 army aviators of Barksdale field, the world's largest airport. In this parade a number of allegorical floats will appear, all symbolizing the advent and growth of aviation. Band concerts through the afternoon and evening, supplied by several of the twenty-four famous bands engaged for the centennial; opening of a historical exhibit in the municipal auditorium; establishment of a Caddo Indian village, where Indian life of primitive days will be revealed by 20 or more Caddo Indians brought from Oklahoma for the purpose; unveiling and judging of retail show windows; broadcasting of centennial addresses over Shreveport's three stations; semi-finals of the Gulf States tennis tournament; a golf tournament, and finally the coronation of the centennial queen, will be other opening day features. The queen, with her royal consort, will sit enthroned in a royal court comprising princesses, duchesses, maids, pages and other attendants. The ceremony will have all of the pomp and grandeur of a royal investiture.

Sunday, June 30, will be open house day at Barksdale field. There will be special religious services commemorating the centennial in all Shreveport churches, and in the evening Dr. Charles C. Selecman, president of the Southern Methodist university at Dallas, will deliver an address at the Byrd high school stadium. Dr. Selecman is one of the south's greatest orators. The tennis finals, renewal of the golf tournament and a motor boat regatta in which racers from every part of the south will participate, will be other Sunday features. The historic exhibit and Indian village will be shown every day of the centennial.

Monday there will be band concerts, a lunch for pioneers and their descendants, a historic parade in the evening and later on, the pageant. The parade will consist of moving tableaux, which are being built by New Orleans experts. Many beautiful girls, wearing lovely costumes, will add to the color and brilliancy of the parade.

Tuesday, three tablets placed in the foyer of the courthouse and marking three important events in Shreveport's history, will be dedicated. The events referred to are the signing of the Caddo Indian treaty, the founding of Shreveport and the history of Shreveport as the Confederate capital of Louisiana.

There is no parade Tuesday, but a series of outdoor events will help make up the program, and on Wednesday an industrial arts parade, illustrating Shreveport's progress in business and industry, will be added to the other attractions. Thursday July 4, there will be a special Independence day program and a civic arts parade, comprising floats expressive of that theme. The pageant in the evening and a vaudeville program by prominent radio and recording stars will bring the great celebration to a close.

"It is impossible," said Leon I. Kahn, executive director of the centennial celebration, "to convey in a single statement an adequate idea of the magnitude and beauty of the observance. There will be six days of continuous entertainment, indoors and outdoors. An effort has been made to gratify every possible taste for wholesome and educational diversion, and I think our visitors will agree that we have succeeded.

"With the knowledge that it will be another hundred years before Shreveport can extend a second invitation for an observance of this kind, the business men and citizens resolved to leave nothing undone to make the forthcoming celebration beautiful, gigantic and spectacular. We are looking for the largest attendance of outside visitors in the history of this section. Thirty-six cities and towns have sent duchesses and maids to the coronation.

"The queen's ball, at the municipal auditorium Wednesday, July 22, is being looked forward to by socialites from Texarkana to Alexandria and from Tyler, Texas, to Monroe. The king and queen will be present at this function in person and it will easily be the outstanding social feature of the celebration. There will, however, be other dances. Votaries of Terpsichore will lack nothing to make them happy and satisfied.

"Shreveport is inviting the world to its centennial celebration. There will be pleasure and entertainment, and good living accomodations, for all."

Lake Providence

Mr. Gordon Irving Gordon, fiance of Miss Bernice Kaufman, has arrived from Memphis to be a guest in the Kaufman home until after his marriage to Miss Kaufman, which will be solemnized in Vicksburg today.

INDIGENT CHILDREN GIVEN TREATMENT AT TALLULAH

TALLULAH, La., June 15.—(Special)—The first of a series of clinics for the correction of defects in indigent children who will enter school for the first time next fall was held at the Tallulah hospital here this week, with Dr. C. J. Edwards of Vicksburg performing tonsil and adenoid operations on 28 children. He was assisted by Dr. L. Stevens and Dr. C. J. Edwards, Jr. Preceding the operations, Drs. W. P. Yerger, H. C. Sevier, E. C. Edgerton, A. T. Palmer, G. W. Gaines, L. Stevens, and Provine examined the children.

During their stay in Tallulah, the children, who were from the eighth ward of Madison parish, were guests of R. L. Baily at the Baily theater, and were treated to ice cream cones by R. S. Gayle of the Tallulah Ice Cream factory.

The work, which is sponsored by the Tallulah Parent-Teacher association in cooperation with the American Legion auxiliary, Red Cross, Salvation Army and parish health unit, is being financed by the Madison parish police jury and other agencies. As the result of the recent survey by the summer round-up committee of the P.-T. A., 150 cases of diseased tonsils and adenoids, 50 cases of defective vision and a number of cases of defective teeth were found. Plans for their corrections are being made by the committee.

Normal life of a set of pistons has been placed at 40,000 miles, and of rings at 20,000.

DAIRY DAY CELEBRATION HELD IN CLAIBORNE PARISH

HOMER, La., June 15.—(Special)—The second annual Dairy day celebration in Claiborne parish, held in Homer Thursday, was attended by approximately 7,000 persons from six parishes. The event is sponsored yearly by the Homer Lions club as an encouragement to dairying and diversified farming.

The program for the day included parades and band concerts by bands of Homer, Haynesville and Hodge; an address of welcome by Mayor Harry McKenzie, addresses by E. W. Neasham, extension dairyman of Louisiana State university; Miss Mary Mims, extension sociologist of Louisiana State university, and I. W. Duggan, AAA official of Washington, D. C.; an aerial show by army aviators frim Barksdale field, Shreveport, and a terrapin derby.

SCENES FROM SHREVEPORT'S CENTENNIAL PAGEANT

The above illustrate characteristic scenes from Shreveport's centennial pageant, and constitute part of the tableau representation of one hundred years of Shreveport progress.

Historic Pageant Planned As Shreveport Celebrates

City's First Centennial Will Be Observed From June 29 To July 4

SHREVEPORT, June 15.—(Special)—In the history of Louisiana, nothing more spectacularly beautiful and artistic has been presented than the historic pageant which will mark the forthcoming celebration of this city's first centennial. The observance will begin June 29 and will run through July 4. There is an intensive program of entertainment for each day. Alone of all the other features, the historic pageant will be repeated. It will open on Monday, July 1 and run four nights.

Miss Maud S. Gill, salutatorian of Neville High school graduating class, will represent Monroe as one of the duchesses of the "Queen's Court" in the centennial pageantry at Shreveport's celebration. Miss Joyce Feinstein, also one of the honor students at Neville High, will appear as maid to the "Duchess of Monroe." The two Monroe girls will be royally feted at Shreveport during the centennial festivities.

One hundred years ago (on July 1, 1835, to be precise) the Caddo Indians sold part of northwest Louisiana to the United States for $80,000. The tract disposed of embraced a large portion of what is now southwest Arkansas and northwest Louisiana, but it did not include the site of the city of Shreveport. In the purchase treaty, 640 acres were reserved to Larkin Edwards, interpreter and friend of the Caddo tribe. Edwards afterwards sold this acreage to Henry Miller Shreve, eminent army engineer and steamboat pioneer, and six others, and upon it the city of Shreveport was built. Some idea of what the Caddo Indians parted with for $80,000 may be gathered from the statement that up to January 1 last, Caddo parish alone had produced crude oil valued at nearly $178,000,000.

The historic pageant will illustrate 100 years of Shreveport progress. It is beautiful in conception and lovely in execution. For its presentation the centennial committee engaged the services of the Rogers Co., of Fostoria, Ohio, nationally known producers. The scenario constitutes a number of colorful episodes and events beginning even before the transfer of ownership from the Caddo Indians and running through to the present time. Over 2000 persons will be in the pageant cast.

Beautiful as it may confidently be expected to be, the pageant is but one of the many attractive features of the centennial celebration. On the opening day there will be a military parade and aerial display provided largely by the 100 army aviators of Barksdale field, the world's largest airport. In this parade a number of allegorical floats will appear, all symbolizing the advent and growth of aviation. Band concerts through the afternoon and evening, supplied by several of the twenty-four famous bands engaged for the centennial; opening of a historical exhibit in the municipal auditorium; establishment of a Caddo Indian village, where Indian life of primitive days will be revealed by 20 or more Caddo Indians brought from Oklahoma for the purpose; unveiling and judging of retail show windows; broadcasting of centennial addresses over Shreveport's three stations; semi-finals of the Gulf States tennis tournament; a golf tournament, and finally the coronation of the centennial queen, will be other opening day features. The queen, with her royal consort, will sit enthroned in a royal court comprising princesses, duchesses, maids, pages and other attendants. The ceremony will have all of the pomp and grandeur of a royal investiture.

Sunday, June 30, will be open house day at Barksdale field. There will be special religious services commemorating the centennial in all Shreveport churches, and in the evening Dr. Charles C. Selecman, president of the Southern Methodist university at Dallas, will deliver an address at the Byrd high school stadium. Dr. Selecman is one of the south's greatest orators. The tennis finals, renewal of the golf tournament and a motor boat regatta in which racers from every part of the south will participate, will be other Sunday features. The historic exhibit and Indian village will be shown every day of the centennial.

Monday there will be band concerts, a lunch for pioneers and their descendants, a historic parade in the evening and later on, the pageant. The parade will consist of moving tableaux, which are being built by New Orleans experts. Many beautiful girls, wearing lovely costumes, will add to the color and brilliancy of the parade.

Tuesday, three tablets placed in the foyer of the courthouse and marking three important events in Shreveport's history, will be dedicated. The events referred to are the signing of the Caddo Indian treaty, the founding of Shreveport and the history of Shreveport as the Confederate capital of Louisiana.

There is no parade Tuesday, but a series of outdoor events will help make up the program, and on Wednesday an industrial arts parade, illustrating Shreveport's progress in business and industry, will be added to the other attractions. Thursday July 4, there will be a special Independence day program and a civic arts parade, comprising floats expressive of that theme. The pageant in the evening and a vaudeville program by prominent radio and recording stars will bring the great celebration to a close.

"It is impossible," said Leon I. Kahn, executive director of the centennial celebration, "to convey in a single statement an adequate idea of the magnitude and beauty of the observance. There will be six days of continuous entertainment, indoors and outdoors. An effort has been made to gratify every possible taste for wholesome and educational diversion, and I think our vistiors will agree that we have succeeded.

"With the knowledge that it will be another hundred years before Shreveport can extend a second invitation for an observance of this kind, the business men and citizens resolved to leave nothing undone to make the forthcoming celebration beautiful, gigantic and spectacular. We are looking for the largest attendance of outside visitors in the history of this section. Thirty-six cities and towns have sent duchesses and maids to the coronation.

"The queen's ball, at the municipal auditorium Wednesday, July 23, is being looked forward to by socialites from Texarkana to Alexandria and from Tyler, Texas, to Monroe. The king and queen will be present at this function in person and it will easily be the outstanding social feature of the celebration. There will, however, be other dances. Votaries of Terpsichore will lack nothing to make them happy and satisfied.

"Shreveport is inviting the world to its centennial celebration. There will be pleasure and entertainment, and good living accomodations, for all."

Lake Providence

Mr. Gordon Irving Gordon, fiance of Miss Bernice Kaufman, has arrived from Memphis to be a guest in the Kaufman home until after his marriage to Miss Kaufman, which will be solemnized in Vicksburg today.

Outstanding in interest and charm was the lovely bridge party Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Charles J. Wyly as hostesses. Members of Mrs. Wyly's club to accept her hospitality were Mrs. R. A. Rentz, Mrs. W. F. Trieschman, Mrs. L. H. Richards, Mrs. W. D. Brown, Jr., Mrs. Herman Stein, Mrs. Vail Delony, Mrs. F. H. Schneider, Jr., and J. E. Brown. Additional guests to enjoy the games were Mesdames J. N. Hill, Jr., Roland Smith, James Marion Gilfoil of Omega, Arnold Shields of Alsatia, J. H. Guenard, Hugh King, W. H. Hamley, J. P. Brown, S. H. Houston of Hammond, John Rodge, B. R. Burgoyne, Ernest Parra and Misses Narcisse Brown, Marie Louise Gross, Mildred Nelson and Neva Marie Carothers, of West Point, Miss. Mrs. J. P. Brown won the guest prize, Mrs. W. D. Brown, Jr., cut consolation, and the club prizes were won by Mrs. Trieschman and Mrs. Stein. Mrs. J. R. Adams and Mrs. J. F. Montgomery of Bastrop were tea guests.

Mrs. B. R. Pinkston was hostess to the Thursday Night Bridge club. Mrs. J. C. Bass, Mrs. W. D. Brown, and Mrs. Charles Hart were substitute players. Members of the club to enjoy an evening of cards with the hostess were Mrs. J. C. Gross, Mrs. W. H. Maben, Mrs. J. C. Hamley and Miss Mary Pearl. The highest score was made by Miss Pearl.

A congenial group to participate in an afternoon of bridge Thursday with Mrs. C. E. Newman as hostess were Mrs. J. L. Johnson, Mrs. C. M. Bass, Mrs. Sterling Merrill, Mrs. Roy Abernethy, Mrs. J. C. Surles, Mrs. Leon Harbin, Mrs. A. G. Frost and Mrs. C. B. Mitchell. The high score prize was won by Mrs. Harbin and the second high by Mrs. Surles.

Dr. G. S. Hopkins, as the principal speaker at the meeting of the Wesley brotherhood on Thursday evening, used "Child Behavior Problems" as his topic.

With a representative attendance of the membership, plans were arranged to observe "Big Brothers" month during the coming 30 days, with the period to be closed with a special meeting for boys of the Methodist Sunday school and church.

The organization pledged its cooperation with the young peoples' organization in entertaining the Wesley union at the next meeting.

Strange things often happen to substances under great pressure. Water, for instance, heated to 180 degrees Fahrenheit has been quickly frozen by a pressure of 145 tons to the square inch.

The Automobile

During the entire period of the depression, the one industry that pressed determinedly on, ignoring pessimism, surmounting difficulties, achieving progressive results, was that of motor car manufacturing. When the story of the great economic cataclysm is finally written, the tale of the automobile industry will illumine the pages like a shaft of sunshine piercing dark clouds.

The spirit that kept the motor car makers on the job throughout those trying years, achieving in spite of every handicap, communicated itself to automobile dealers throughout the country. Monroe is indebted to these valiant leaders in the business world for what they have done to sustain the morale of the community and the public at large.

The industry in this city is one of the important factors of our business stability and economic progress. The resolution and courage of the automobile distributors, as well as the accessory and supply dealers, kept hundreds of workers employed and through their payrolls contributed substantially to that purchasing power which enabled other business concerns to weather the storm of depression.

The personnel of the automobile and accessory business in this city are worthy exponents of American fortitude and thorough-going business efficiency. They have done a big job in a big way and to them is due enthusiastic encomiums for their accomplishments.

When they hold their first annual automobile show the coming week-end, the event should attract the wholehearted interest of the people throughout Northeast Louisiana. They deserve a "big hand" from a grateful and appreciative public.

Reaction And Reason

One thing that throws us into much confusion and conflict—and which causes us much perplexity—is that we assume people are acting according to judgment, according to brains.

When persons do things that do not square with sound judgment and good brain usage, then we become disturbed or disappointed or angry as the case may be.

It would help us a lot in our relations with people if we could realize that there are more reactors than reasoners—that is, that more people do things from nerve impulses than from brain impulses.

Strike a spirited horse with a whip and he will jump. Sometimes he will tear things to pieces. He may rip himself open on a barbed wire fence or jump off a precipice. He has simply reacted to the blow of the whip. He has not reasoned. A great many people are like that—and practically all people are like that under some circumstances.

Do something that offends a man and he is more likely to react than to reason. Because of a trifling incident that has wounded his vanity and which he has magnified into an insult, he may do something that may strap him to the electric chair or dangle him at the end of a rope, beggar his family and wreck their lives. His action has been analagous to that of a spirited horse with a whip. Had his brains got to work before his nerves did, he would have avoided difficulty.

Some people—like mules—have no nerves. You rarely see a mule run away and hurt himself. He knows all the time what he is doing. Hit him with a whip and he seldom jumps. He simply moves up a little, if he thinks he has to. Otherwise he ignores the incident.

A horse may go into a frenzy when mistreated. But a mule keeps his head and waits a year for a chance to kick the offender.

Of course this is not to say that a man should pattern after a mule. The ideal man is one who is high-strung, but who governs his nerves with his head; who has plenty of mettle, but who never permits mere reaction to rule him.

We can make life much easier for ourselves and others when we learn to distinguish between the reasoner and the reactor. The reactor needs our understanding and our sympathy. He is more a victim of jerky nerves than of wrong intent—and after all it is the intention that should count when we pass judgment on people. Even the law in its hard boiled impartiality places emphasis on the question of intent.

Incidentally we can profitably engage in self-examination to find out whether we are reactors or reasoners.

MR. CAT

He rubs his fur upon my knees
He makes mute, little, purring pleas.

He hopes by some dark, feline, spell
To get me to remove the bell,

That warns as plain as any words
The troubled little singing birds.

An innocent he seems to be,
But when a bird is in a tree

He mews and yowls and runs about,
And faintly hopes I'll let him out.

He seems to say: "I won't molest
A single birdling in its nest.

I have a kind and gentle heart
And would not rend a bird apart.

I rather like to hear them sing
Their pretty little songs of spring.

My heart is warm, I'm tame and mild.
I would not hurt a little child.

Those birds need never feel alarm
I'm wholly innocent of harm.

I only want a little fun."
But cats are liars—every one.

Their souls are black, and, furthermore,
You cannot trust them past the door.

WHEN LENGTH IS PROTECTION

In Australia earthworms sometimes attain a length of six feet. Not even the earliest early bird ever attempts to catch one of them.

We Honor The Finest

By BRUCE CATTON

In the last decade New York City has held two of those hysterical, ear-shattering receptions which set a high-water mark for the outburst of popular enthusiasm.

One was to celebrate the return of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh after his great flight to Paris.

The other, held just the other day, marked the arrival in New York harbor of the French ocean liner Normandie.

By contrasting the two events which were able to summon forth this melange of screaming whistles, swirling storms of ticker tape and cheering of massed thousands of people, you can get a pretty fair line on the kind of things which really touch off our enthusiasm these days.

In its greeting to the Normandie New York was paying the homage that we all feel to a great mechanical triumph.

This is an age of machinery, as some thousands of solemn commentators (including this one) have frequently remarked. It is a machine age, that is, not merely because it has a great many intricate and ingenious machines, but because it lives through them and by them. New York itself, for instance, could not survive a fortnight if it had to return to the horse and buggy age.

So it is only natural that the Normandie's arrival should provoke a storm of cheers and a deep intensity of interest. A great ship of this kind sums up the mechanical age as well as any contrivance ever built. In the mere details of its construction there is a series of near-miracles; and the final fitting touch is supplied by the fact that for all its size and perfection of detail, the big ship probably will never pay.

So much for the Normandie. Now for the other demonstration—the one held some eight years ago in honor of Col. Lindbergh.

That, too, was part of our mechanical age, inasmuch as the airplane itself is one of the most characteristic bits of machinery of this generation. But the celebration honored the man, not the machine. It was a people's instinctive tribute to a demonstration of man's power to confront danger, hardship and fear, single-handed, without faltering.

And when you contrast that feat with the one represented by the liner Normandie you can draw a little moral for yourself.

Two things are able to touch off our enthusiasm these days; fine machines—and fine men. Everything considered, we seem to be able to produce about as many of one as of the other. And we have the saving grace to realize that the machines are the less important of the two.

SO THEY SAY

I recognize the right of the law to condemn me, but I cannot recognize its right to take possession of my conscience.—Philippe Vernier, jailed in France for defying compulsory conscription law.

There is good reason to believe that our national pastime is not baseball or football, but the all-year game of, in rough phase, "passing the buck."—Rear Admiral S. K. Evans, naval chaplain.

I regard the NRA as dead. Inspired propaganda will not bring it back, and straw votes will not scrap the American constitution.—Governor Hoffman of New Jersey.

I am very happy. My husband is a sportsman, but he cares more for me than he does for polo.—Countess von Haugwitz-Reventlow (formerly Barbara Hutton).

Opportunity for youth is restricted by the machine age, by the rise and dominance of capital in the world—William Allen White, Kansas publisher.

BARBS

Now that business men are acting in partnership to preserve certain NRA principles, let's hope none of them adopt the slogan, "We Do Our Partners."

New Deal In Washington

This article, analyzing the political significance of the G. O. P. grass roots convention, takes the place today of Rodney Dutcher's "Behind the Scenes in Washington" column.—Editor.

By Bruce Catton
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 15.—If the Republicans were the victims of a "smear Hoover" campaign in 1932, they seem to be getting ready to return the compliment, with interest added, in 1936.

By putting your ear to the ground at the "grass roots" convention of Republicans here, you could get a fair idea of the general line of attack which the G. O. P. will follow in the next presidential campaign.

It will be an aggressive campaign, and President Roosevelt will be the principal target.

If speeches delivered at the convention are a god indication, Republican strategy is shaping itself for a grand assault on dictatorship and bureaucracy, with Mr. Roosevelt cast in the role of chief dictator and head bureaucrat.

If there was a time when it was considered good policy to attack members of the "brain trust" rather than Roosevelt himself, that time has gone forever. The speakers here outdid themselves in attacking him.

Lashes At Roosevelt

Consider, for instance, the way in which Robert G. Simmons, former congressman from Nebraska, described to the delegates President Roosevelt's comments on the U. S. supreme court's overthrow of NRA.

In these remarks, said Simmons, the president was attacking, not the court, but "the Constitution that stands as the bulwark between the independence of a people and the collectivist state which the president now seeks to set up."

And he added:

"Make the question of giving to the national government the dictatorial powers over the states, local communities and individuals that the president seeks the major issue of the 1936 campaign."

Lincoln Spirit Invoked

Nor was Simmons alone in this kind of denunciation. John Hamilton, Republican national committeeman from Kansas, declared that Lincoln—Lincoln figured pretty largely in this convention, Springfield being his home town—"would stand shoulder to shoulder with us in this fight to preserve American democracy."

Hamilton, describing the present administration as "a bureaucratic despotism, set upon a fixed course to destroy this government of the people," suggested that what really displeased President Roosevelt about the supreme court's decision was the fact that it denied "the right of congress to delegate to him the powers of dictatorship."

Held Peril To Liberty

Then Harrison Spangler, national committeeman from Iowa, gave the delegates this to think about:

"For the first time in history, free institutions are in need of defense against the attacks of a national administration which has taken oath to uphold them. For the first time, American liberty and the hitherto inviolable rights of citizens are under assault by our own government."

That a large segment of Republican thought sees in this kind of compaign an attack on Roosevelt in his most vulnerable point became evident from conversations with delegates as well as from the speeches delivered on the floor.

There seemed to be evident a widespread feeling that the NRA case marked a turning point in the history of the present administration.

Borrow "State Rights"

It was suggested repeatedly that the court decision merely climaxed a growing popular disillusionment with the blue eagle, and that the president, in his remarks about the decision, laid himself open to the charge that he seeks to change our form of government in such way as to make the president himself more powerful than either the legislative or the judicial branch of the government.

Coupled with this, there was displayed in some quarters a disposition to believe that the Republican party next year might well appropriate an ancient battle cry of the Democrats and campaign for state rights. Mr. Spangler hinted at it when he told the delegates:

"The rights of the states as independent units of self-government have been impaired. The jurisdiction of the states has been invaded. Government funds are held out as lures to induce the states to surrender rights which otherwise could not be coerced.

"The governors of the sovereign states stand, hat in hand, fawningly before petty bureaucrats to beg that funds bludgeoned by taxation from their own people be spent in their states."

Two Outstanding Issues

If the attitude evident at the grass roots convention wins the support of Republican leaders on a national scales, it is apparent that the Republican party in 1936 will campaign:

1—Against dictatorship and bureaucracy, and for the constitutional guarantees of freedom to states and individuals.

2—Against Roosevelt personally as an autocrat who would transform our traditional form of government in his quest for power.

TWO BICYCLES STOLEN OFF DOWNTOWN STREET

Two bicycles were stolen off a downtown street Saturday, both from in front of theaters, according to a report at police headquarters.

Lorne Mayberry, 607 Orange street, reported that his bicycle was stolen from in front of the Capitol theater between 9:30 and 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning while he was attending the theater. It is described as being of Iver Johnson make, red in color and having balloon tires.

Sixten Swanburg, 212 Rochelle avenue, told police that his bicycle was stolen from in front of the Paramount theater Saturday night. It is of Elton make, painted red and white, has short handle bars and has a luggage carrier on the rear.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

Lights Of New York

By Paul Harrison

LONDON.—The things I mainly don't like about this town are the coffee and the climate. But there are a few other little items.

For example, there's the misguided practice of serving a "savory." You wade through a dinner from caviar to ice cream and sliced peaches, and are feeling pretty optimistic about everything. Suddenly you are confronted by another course, or "savory," consisting, perhaps, of a dispirited sardine draped on a catafalque of cold, leathery toast. It's a terrible experience.

The English have their own unique method of preparing toast. Pieces of stale bread are scorched over a soft-coal fire, and then are laid away between slices of thick London fog to age for several days and absorb humidity. Last any trace of crispness or warmth remain, the toast is brought to the table on little silver racks, or coolers.

Your correspondent never has been able to learn the recipe for English coffee. Except, of course, that it isn't coffee at all, but chicory and charred wormwood prepared according to a formula discovered by Lucrezia Borgia and used by her with great success at some of her intimate little farewell parties . . . As for Yorkshire pudding, concomitant of roast beef, bubble-and-squeak, and any and all other typically English foods—you can have them.

The passion of these people for being literal is something that often depresses me. Beets are called beet roots because, botanically, they're the root of the plant. Ask for a rare steak and you run the risk of being told that there are plenty of steaks in London, hence none that are rare. "Underdone" is the word. Whenever I seek an elevator, I'm sternly directed to the lift. "Hi can helevate you only hup," said a sassy cockney operator. "But Hi can lift you hup or Hi can lift you down."

To this American's notion, "That's not cricket!" fails to qualify as a phrase of opprobrium because anything that isn't cricket is just that much better off. Yet the English not only like to play it, but seem to enjoy watching it—watching it for hours, week-ends and fortnight holidays. Batters bat and run until the tally-keepers get writers' cramp, stopping only for meals while the papers bring out sports extras with the lunch-time scores.

When a professional team has met an amateur team, the pros go to a dressing room marked "Players" and the amateurs retire to a locker room labeled "Gentlemen." Maybe that's cricket, but I don't call it sporting.

Your correspondent has no wish to set himself up as a professional fault-finder, nor to create an impression that he hasn't been having fun in London. I say it's a beautiful town, though dampish; and saturated with glamor and proud age and delightful vistas, if somewhat shy on creature comforts. It still seems funny to see chunks of ice for cocktail parties being bought at fishmongers' shops. And well-to-do householders dragging guests to the kitchen to inspect the mechanical refrigerator before they're shown the ancestral portraits in the drawing room.

I like London's politeness—for instance, the gracious little park signs with a simple, admonitory "Please," instead of our blustering "Keep Off" notices threatening fines and imprisonment . . . New Yorkers must be continually amazed by the absence of rude jostling in London's crowded places, and the patience of commuters waiting their turns to enter or leave the underground trains.

I like the calm, competent, articulate policemen, who look like college men—and many of them are . . . I'm impressed by each new evidence of lawfulness—such as a truck full of money parked at a curb and unattended except by a mousey little clerk nearsightedly peering into a notebook . . . I'm fascinated by the Hyde Park mall, where malcontents blow off steam at a rate that would land them in pokey if they tried it in the Land of the Free.

I think King George has as friendly a radio personality as Franklin D. Roosevelt. And they say he writes his own stuff . . . It's pleasant to go to afternoon teas and be given real tea instead of cocktails. I like, too, the London custom of sparing party guests interminable rounds of introductions . . . I enjoy the strolling bands of pipers and singers on the streets by day. But no noise by night—not even a taxi horn after sundown.

I envy the English their stout, proud nationalism, and am beginning to understand the cohesive influence wielded by a revered but almost powerless king . . . When the palace guard is changed, the soldiers—whom you might expect to be the toughest hombres in the realm—march away under guard of a cordon of London police! . . . I sympathize with the bucolic urge of the millions who leave for a country week-end each Saturday noon.

Of course I like London.

The Automobile

During the entire period of the depression, the one industry that pressed determinedly on, ignoring pessimism, surmounting difficulties, achieving progressive results, was that of motor car manufacturing. When the story of the great economic cataclysm is finally written, the tale of the automobile industry will illumine the pages like a shaft of sunshine piercing dark clouds.

The spirit that kept the motor car makers on the job throughout those trying years, achieving in spite of every handicap, communicated itself to automobile dealers throughout the country. Monroe is indebted to these valiant leaders in the business world for what they have done to sustain the morale of the community and the public at large.

The industry in this city is one of the important factors of our business stability and economic progress. The resolution and courage of the automobile distributors, as well as the accessory and supply dealers, kept hundreds of workers employed and through their payrolls contributed substantially to that purchasing power which enabled other business concerns to weather the storm of depression.

The personnel of the automobile and accessory business in this city are worthy exponents of American fortitude and thorough-going business efficiency. They have done a big job in a big way and to them is due enthusiastic encomiums for their accomplishments.

When they hold their first annual automobile show the coming week-end, the event should attract the wholehearted interest of the people throughout Northeast Louisiana. They deserve a "big hand" from a grateful and appreciative public.

Reaction And Reason

One thing that throws us into much confusion and conflict—and which causes us much perplexity—is that we assume people are acting according to judgment, according to brains.

When persons do things that do not square with sound judgment and good brain usage, then we become disturbed or disappointed or angry as the case may be.

It would help us a lot in our relations with people if we could realize that there are more reactors than reasoners—that is, that more people do things from nerve impulses than from brain impulses.

Strike a spirited horse with a whip and he will jump. Sometimes he will tear things to pieces. He may rip himself open on a barbed wire fence or jump off a precipice. He has simply reacted to the blow of the whip. He has not reasoned. A great many people are like that—and practically all people are like that under some circumstances.

Do something that offends a man and he is more likely to react than to reason. Because of a trifling incident that has wounded his vanity and which he has magnified into an insult, he may do something that may strap him to the electric chair or dangle him at the end of a rope, beggar his family and wreck their lives. His action has been analagous to that of a spirited horse with a whip. Had his brains got to work before his nerves did, he would have avoided difficulty.

Some people—like mules—have no nerves. You rarely see a mule run away and hurt himself. He knows all the time what he is doing. Hit him with a whip and he seldom jumps. He simply moves up a little, if he thinks he has to. Otherwise he ignores the incident.

A horse may go into a frenzy when mistreated. But a mule keeps his head and waits a year for a chance to kick the offender.

Of course this is not to say that a man should pattern after a mule. The ideal man is one who is high-strung, but who governs his nerves with his head; who has plenty of mettle, but who never permits mere reaction to rule him.

We can make life much easier for ourselves and others when we learn to distinguish between the reasoner and the reactor. The reactor needs our understanding and our sympathy. He is more a victim of jerky nerves than of wrong intent—and after all it is the intention that should count when we pass judgment on people. Even the law in its hard boiled impartiality places emphasis on the question of intent.

Incidentally we can profitably engage in self-examination to find out whether we are reactors or reasoners.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

MR. CAT

He rubs his fur upon my knees
He makes mute, little, purring pleas.

He hopes by some dark, feline, spell
To get me to remove the bell,

That warns as plain as any words
The troubled little singing birds.

An innocent he seems to be,
But when a bird is in a tree

He mews and yowls and runs about,
And faintly hopes I'll let him out.

He seems to say: "I won't molest
A single birdling in its nest.

I have a kind and gentle heart
And would not rend a bird apart,

I rather like to hear them sing
Their pretty little songs of spring.

My heart is warm, I'm tame and mild.
I would not hurt a little child.

Those birds need never feel alarm
I'm wholly innocent of harm.

I only want a little fun."
But cats are liars—every one.

Their souls are black, and, furthermore,
You cannot trust them past the door.

We Honor The Finest

By BRUCE CATTON

In the last decade New York City has held two of those hysterical, ear-shattering receptions which set a high-water mark for the outburst of popular enthusiasm.

One was to celebrate the return of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh after his great flight to Paris.

The other, held just the other day, marked the arrival in New York harbor of the French ocean liner Normandie.

By contrasting the two events which were able to summon forth this melange of screaming whistles, swirling storms of ticker tape and cheering of massed thousands of people, you can get a pretty fair line on the kind of things which really touch off our enthusiasm these days.

In its greeting to the Normandie New York was paying the homage that we all feel to a great mechanical triumph.

This is an age of machinery, as some thousands of solemn commentators (including this one) have frequently remarked. It is a machine age, that is, not merely because it has a great many intricate and ingenious machines, but because it lives through them and by them. New York itself, for instance, could not survive a fortnight if it had to return to the horse and buggy age.

So it is only natural that the Normandie's arrival should provoke a storm of cheers and a deep intensity of interest. A great ship of this kind sums up the mechanical age as well as any contrivance ever built. In the mere details of its construction there is a series of near-miracles; and the final fitting touch is supplied by the fact that for all its size and perfection of detail, the big ship probably will never pay.

So much for the Normandie. Now for the other demonstration—the one held some eight years ago in honor of Col. Lindbergh.

That, too, was part of our mechanical age, inasmuch as the airplane itself is one of the most characteristic bits of machinery of this generation. But the celebration honored the man, not the machine. It was a people's instinctive tribute to a demonstration of man's power to confront danger, hardship and fear, single-handed, without faltering.

And when you contrast that feat with the one represented by the liner Normandie you can draw a little moral for yourself.

Two things are able to touch off our enthusiasm these days; fine machines—and fine men. Everything considered, we seem to be able to produce about as many of one as of the other. And we have the saving grace to realize that the machines are the less important of the two.

SO THEY SAY

I recognize the right of the law to condemn me, but I cannot recognize its right to take possession of my conscience.—Philippe Vernier, jailed in France for defying compulsory conscription law.

There is good reason to believe that our national pastime is not baseball or football, but the all-year game of, in rough phase, "passing the buck."—Rear Admiral S. K. Evans, naval chaplain.

I regard the NRA as dead. Inspired propaganda will not bring it back, and straw votes will not scrap the American constitution.—Governor Hoffman of New Jersey.

I am very happy. My husband is a sportsman, but he cares more for me than he does for polo.—Countess von Haugwitz-Reventlow (formerly Barbara Hutton).

Opportunity for youth is restricted by the machine age, by the rise and dominance of capital in the world—William Allen White, Kansas publisher.

BARBS

Now that business men are acting in partnership to preserve certain NRA principles, let's hope none of them adopt the slogan, "We Do Our Partners."

New Deal In Washington

This article, analyzing the political significance of the G. O. P. grass roots convention, takes the place today of Rodney Dutcher's "Behind the Scenes in Washington" column.—Editor.

By Bruce Catton
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 15.—If the Republicans were the victims of a "smear Hoover" campaign in 1932, they seem to be getting ready to return the compliment, with interest added, in 1936.

By putting your ear to the ground at the "grass roots" convention of Republicans here, you could get a fair idea of the general line of attack which the G. O. P. will follow in the next presidential campaign.

It will be an aggressive campaign, and President Roosevelt will be the principal target.

If speeches delivered at the convention are a god indication, Republican strategy is shaping itself for a grand assault on dictatorship and bureaucracy, with Mr. Roosevelt cast in the role of chief dictator and head bureaucrat.

If there was a time when it was considered good policy to attack members of the "brain trust" rather than Roosevelt himself, that time has gone forever. The speakers here outdid themselves in attacking him.

Lashes At Roosevelt

Consider, for instance, the way in which Robert G. Simmons, former congressman from Nebraska, described to the delegates President Roosevelt's comments on the U. S. supreme court's overthrow of NRA.

In these remarks, said Simmons, the president was attacking, not the court, but "the Constitution that stands as the bulwark between the independence of a people and the collectivist state which the president now seeks to set up."

And he added:

"Make the question of giving to the national government the dictatorial powers over the states, local communities and individuals that the president seeks the major issue of the 1936 campaign."

Nor was Simmons alone in this kind of denunciation. John Hamilton, Republican national committeeman from Kansas, declared that Lincoln—Lincoln figured pretty largely in this convention, Springfield being his home town—"would stand shoulder to shoulder with us in this fight to preserve American democracy."

Hamilton, describing the present administration as "a bureaucratic despotism, set upon a fixed course to destroy this government of the people," suggested that what really displeased President Roosevelt about the supreme court's decision was the fact that it denied "the right of congress to delegate to him the powers of dictatorship."

Held Peril To Liberty

Then Harrison Spangler, national committeeman from Iowa, gave the delegates this to think about:

"For the first time in history, free institutions are in need of defense against the attacks of a national administration which has taken oath to uphold them. For the first time, American liberty and the hitherto inviolable rights of citizens are under assault by our own government."

That a large segment of Republican thought sees in this kind of compaign an attack on Roosevelt in his most vulnerable point became evident from conversations with delegates as well as from the speeches delivered on the floor.

There seemed to be evident a widespread feeling that the NRA case marked a turning point in the history of the present administration.

Borrow "State Rights"

It was suggested repeatedly that the court decision merely climaxed a growing popular disillusionment with the blue eagle, and that the president, in his remarks about the decision, laid himself open to the charge that he seeks to change our form of government in such way as to make the president himself more powerful than either the legislative or the judicial branch of the government.

Coupled with this, there was displayed in some quarters a disposition to believe that the Republican party next year might well appropriate an ancient battle cry of the Democrats and campaign for state rights. Mr. Spangler hinted at it when he told the delegates:

"The rights of the states as independent units of self-government have been impaired. The jurisdiction of the states has been invaded. Government funds are held out as lures to induce the states to surrender rights which otherwise could not be coerced.

"The governors of the sovereign states stand, hat in hand, fawningly before petty bureaucrats to beg that funds bludgeoned by taxation from their own people be spent in their states."

Two Outstanding Issues

If the attitude evident at the grass roots convention wins the support of Republican leaders on a national scales, it is apparent that the Republican party in 1936 will campaign:

1—Against dictatorship and bureaucracy, and for the constitutional guarantees of freedom to states and individuals.

TWO BICYCLES STOLEN OFF DOWNTOWN STREET

Two bicycles were stolen off a downtown street Saturday, both from in front of theaters, according to a report at police headquarters.

Lorne Mayberry, 607 Orange street, reported that his bicycle was stolen from in front of the Capitol theater between 9:30 and 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning while he was attending the theater. It is described as being of Iver Johnson make, red in color and having balloon tires.

Sixten Swanburg, 212 Rochelle avenue, told police that his bicycle was stolen from in front of the Paramount theater Saturday night. It is of Elton make, painted red and white, has short handle bars and has a luggage carrier on the rear.

Lights Of New York

By Paul Harrison

LONDON.—The things I mainly don't like about this town are the coffee and the climate. But there are a few other little items.

For example, there's the misguided practice of serving a "savory." You wade through a dinner from caviar to ice cream and sliced peaches, and are feeling pretty optimistic about everything. Suddenly you are confronted by another course, or "savory," consisting, perhaps, of a dispirited sardine draped on a catafalque of cold, leathery toast. It's a terrible experience.

The English have their own unique method of preparing toast. Pieces of stale bread are scorched over a soft-coal fire, and then are laid away between slices of thick London fog to age for several days and absorb humidity. Lest any trace of crispness or warmth remain, the toast is brought to the table on little silver racks, or coolers.

Your correspondent never has been able to learn the recipe for English coffee. Except, of course, that it isn't coffee at all, but chicory and charred wormwood prepared according to a formula discovered by Lucrezia Borgia and used by her with great success at some of her intimate little farewell parties . . . As for Yorkshire pudding, concomitant of roast beef, bubble-and-squeak, and any and all other typically English foods—you can have them.

The passion of these people for being literal is something that often depresses me. Beets are called beet roots because, botanically, they're the root of the plant. Ask for a rare steak and you run the risk of being told that there are plenty of steaks in London, hence none that are rare. "Underdone" is the word. Whenever I seek an elevator, I'm sternly directed to the lift. "Hi can helevate you only hup," said a sassy cockney operator. "But Hi can lift you hup or Hi can lift you down."

To this American's notion, "That's not cricket!" fails to qualify as a phrase of opprobrium because anything that isn't cricket is just that much better off. Yet the English not only like to play it, but seem to enjoy watching it—watching it for hours, week-ends and fortnight holidays. Batters bat and run until the tally-keepers get writers' cramp, stopping only for meals while the papers bring out sports extras with the lunch-time scores.

When a professional team has met an amateur team, the pros go to a dressing room marked "Players" and the amateurs retire to a locker room labeled "Gentlemen." Maybe that's cricket, but I don't call it sporting.

Your corresponden' has no wish to set himself up as a professional fault-finder, nor to create an impression that he hasn't been having fun in London. I say it's a beautiful town, though dampish; and saturated with glamor and proud age and delightful vistas, if somewhat shy on creature comforts. It still seems funny to see chunks of ice for cocktail parties being bought at fishmongers' shops. And well-to-do householders dragging guests to the kitchen to inspect the mechanical refrigerator before they're shown the ancestral portraits in the drawing room.

I like London's politeness—for instance, the gracious little park signs with a simple, admonitory "Please," instead of our blustering "Keep Off" notices threatening fines and imprisonment . . . New Yorkers must be continually amazed by the absence of rude jostling in London's crowded places, and the patience of commuters waiting their turns to enter or leave the underground trains.

I like the calm, competent, articulate policemen, who look like college men—and many of them are . . . I'm impressed by each new evidence of lawfulness—such as a truck full of money parked at a curb and unattended except by a mousey little clerk nearsightedly peering into a notebook . . . I'm fascinated by the Hyde Park mall, where malcontents blow off steam at a rate that would land them in pokey if they tried it in the Land of the Free.

I think King George has as friendly a radio personality as Franklin D. Roosevelt. And they say he writes his own stuff . . . It's pleasant to go to afternoon teas and be given real tea instead of cocktails. I like, too, the London custom of sparing party guests interminable rounds of introductions . . . I enjoy the strolling bands of pipers and singers on the streets by day. But no noise by night—not even a taxi horn after sundown.

I envy the English their stout, proud nationalism, and am beginning to understand the cohesive influence wielded by a revered but almost powerless king . . . When the palace guard is changed, the soldiers—whom you might expect to be the toughest hombres in the realm—march away under guard of a cordon of London police! . . . I sympathize with the bucolic urge of the millions who leave for a country week-end each Saturday noon.

Of course I like London.

CATTLE MEETINGS SLATED IN UNION

Farmers To Make Plans For Eradicating Tuberculosis In Stock

FARMERVILLE, June 15.—(Special)—Meetings of Union parish farmers will be held in various communities of the parish during the next two weeks for the purpose of discussing a campaign for the eradication of tuberculosis in cattle, it was announced by J. V. Rabb, parish agricultural agent.

Assembly places for testing cattle for tuberculosis will be selected at the meetings. The testing of the cattle is compulsory under the law, it was stated, and the parish program is a part of the statewide program which is being conducted without cost to the farmer.

Mr. Rabb announced that the meetings of farmers will be held next week as follows:

Monday, Ward 1: Farmerville High school, 9 a. m.; Hopewell school, 11 a. m.; Sam Taylor's store, 1:30 p. m.; Salem, 3:30 p. m.

Tuesday, Ward 2: Union school 9 a. m.; Marion High school, 11 a. m.; Sadie school, 1:30 p. m.; Linville High school, 3:30 p. m.

Wednesday: Zion Hill church, 9 a. m.; Central school, 11 a. m.; Mount Union school, 1:30 p. m.; Camp Creek school, 3:30 p. m.

Thursday: Canaan school, 9 a. m.; Beach Grove school, 11 a. m.; Blocker's dipping vat (ward 10), 1:30 p. m.; Spearsville High school, 3:30 p. m.

Friday, Ward 4: Mount Tabor church, 9 a. m.; Union Gin school house, 11 a. m.; Evergreen church, 1:30 p. m.; Pine Grove church, 3:30 p. m.

Saturday: Pisgah church, 9 a. m.; Weldon church, 11 a. m.; J. C. Davis' farm (Bernice-Lisbon road) 1:30 p. m.; Bernice Grammar school auditorium, 3:30 p. m

ANNUAL DAIRY FIELD DAY HELD IN CALHOUN

Annual dairy field day was conducted at the North Louisiana experiment station Friday when a large number of people were present. R. H. Lush, of the dairy research department of Louisiana State university, made a talk in which he praised the work of the station which is managed by Sidney Stewart.

Harry D. Wilson, Louisiana commissioner of agriculture and immigration, also talked to the assemblage.

Inspection was made of the model dairy and of the pasture crops and experiments that are being conducted.

Scant Warning Of Horror Is Expected In Paris If Germany Strikes From The Air

90 Minutes Is All French Capital Will Have To Prepare For Raid

(Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

PARIS, June 15.—Ninety minutes from any given minute is all the time Paris expects to get to prepare for the first air attack in case of war with Germany.

That is the approximate flying time from German air bases at Stuttgart, Frankfort, and Cologne. Some make it less than that, for no military staff counts any longer on the old-fashioned declaration of war.

First warning of future wars, military men assume, will come when a fleet of war planes crosses the border. The winner will be the country which "jumps the gun" the fastest. And "the next war" might even be pretty well decided in an hour and a half.

But despite, or perhaps because of, those fatal 90 minutes, Paris lags in the careful preparations for defense against air attack that mark life in Berlin, which is much farther from the frontier. The civil population of Paris—take it from a spokesman of the National Union for Air Defense—is in a state of magnificent unpreparedness.

"Our most serious handicap," said this spokesman, "is the Frenchman's proverbial 'je-m'en fichisme'." Which might be translated, his "What-the-hell-ism."

Parisian won't "play"

Your Frenchman in Paris won't be pushed, and he won't be bothered. He won't be stood in line, he won't say, "Yes, sir," and he won't play drill-against-gas.

Furthermore, the Parisian has a certain fatalism that makes him realize that all he can do, facing an air attack, is too little. If he thinks of it at all, he probably admits, "Paris is a doomed city—under certain circumstances, just as all European civilization is doomed under those same circumstances."

If somebody says, "You must build bombproof shelters," he inquires, "How long will that take?" And if the answer comes back, "Six months, or a year, or 150 years"—as one visionary plan requires—the Frenchman shrugs and thinks of the 90 minutes that separate him from German hangars.

Berlin Ready on Defense

In this view, the National Union points out, the Frenchman is the opposite of the German, who almost revels in the exactness of his measures for air defense of civilians.

Every building in Berlin has a leader appointed in case of air raids. He is in supreme control and has a nurse, a fireman, and a shelter-boss to see that everything is ready for gas and bomb defense. Five million such people have been trained in Germany for their part in possible air raids.

But in France the National Union has succeeded in enlisting only 300,000 "monitors," or men specially trained to take instantaneous charge of civilians under air attack.

Every Cellar Checked

Berlin has made a careful census of every cellar. But nothing of the sort has been done in Paris. The National Union states that a few cellars are suitable to hide in as bombproofs but that only a handful are built to withstand gas.

A vague plan is discussed to turn the famous old catacombs beneath Paris into bombproof shelters. But they have crumbled so far that it might cost a billion francs to repair them as shelter for more than 30,000 people.

Military authorities are convinced that probably no major city can be saved from extensive damage in case of a European war. So the only really safe bet to protect civilians is to get them out of there—evacuation.

Residents remember that the government was on the very point of sacrificing Paris to the advancing Germans in 1914, moving out the government offices and evacuating the people.

The military authorities have a plan—on paper—for removing old people, women and children from Paris in time of danger. But Parisians think of those 90 minutes, and shrug.

In Germany, rehearsals for evacuation of whole cities have already been held.

Refuse to Worry

But in Paris the national temperament has prevented any public rehearsals of passive air defense. Some first-aid teams have worked out publicly, but only a few, not a tenth of the 250,000 women nurses whom the National Union has already enlisted for this work.

So the National Union, whose president is Gaston Doumergue, ex-president of the republic and former premier, is struggling to do by educational means what it cannot accomplish by actual rehearsal.

It keeps drumming home certain simple rules as to what the individual should do to protect himself in case of gas attack.

Americans can scarcely realize what this 90 minutes means in the state of people's minds in mid-Europe.

"Today 100 planes, each carrying a ton of gas bombs, could cover Paris with a layer of gas 60 feet thick. It could be done in an hour, and if there were no wind, Paris would be annihilated." So writes an eminent French chemist, Prof. P. Langevin of the College de France.

Fire Is Added Horror

He does not add the horrors of incendiary and high-explosive bombs, and the picture of a city not only layered by 60 feet of gas, but crippled by sporadic fires, and clogged by debris from shattered buildings.

All this a possibility, at least, of the first hour and a half after the beginning of a war.

Tests here and in London indicate that none of the home defenses of cities against air attack is completely effective. The only genuine defense is to destroy the enemy's air squadrons before they have taken to the air. But no one can guarantee that this would happen.

What is more likely is that everybody would hop off more or less simultaneously, would haggle about in the air for a time, and would trickle through to their various objectives with variable success.

Waits Like Fatalist

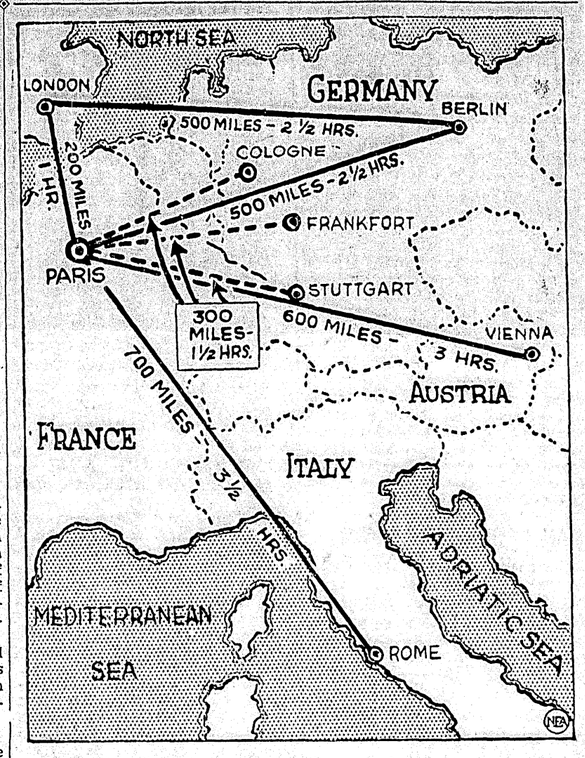
What percentage of Professor Langevin's 100 planes would get through to Paris under war conditions is a matter of guesswork. Meanwhile—if that were any satisfaction to the unhappy Parisians—some French bombers might have gotten through to Berlin.

So there might be stupefying destruction in both capitals, which would be little consolation to the victims in either.

Thus Paris prepares fatalistically for "the next war," and considers with a shrug the possibility of an air raid with 90 minutes' warning.



Only hours lie between great cities and destruction, with distance annihilated by aviation advance.

BAPTIST REVIVAL IN WEST MONROE TO END

Today will mark the close of the revival services that have been in progress in the First Baptist church in West Monroe. There have been 54 additions to the church membership to date as a result of the series of services, Rev. E. E. Huntsberry, pastor, announced. He is optimistic that there may be as many as 75 as a total of new members at the close of the services today.

Rev. Huntsberry said there has been an unusual interest shown and that his assistants have been unusually successful. Dr. H. E. Kirkpatrick, of Minden, has been the evangelist in charge and he has been assisted in the singing by Rev. B. B. Cox of Carlisle, Ark.

SERVICES IN HODGE

HODGE, La., June 15.—(Special)—Regular services are being held here in St. Henry's Catholic church by Rev. J. C. Marsh, pastor. The services are scheduled as follows: Holy mass every Sunday at 9 a.m.; week day masses every day at 7 a.m.; Sunday devotions and benediction every Sunday at 7:30 p.m.; daily religious instructions for children every morning at 9 o'clock; religious study club at the rectory every Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

IMMUNIZATION IS PLANNED IN CITY

Efforts To Be Exerted To Stamp Out Diphtheria Here

A concerted drive to stamp out diphtheria in Louisiana which at present ranks among the states with the highest death rate, will be waged here through the Forty and Eight which has immunization against this disease as a national project.

As planned locally, no less than 2,500 doses of toxoid will be given locally, stated Dr. A. G. McHenry, who has been named local chairman of the campaign by Dr. C. L. Mengis, chairman of a special Forty and Eight committee.

The doses will be given to children from six months to 12 years of age and one treatment is all that will be reqquired, Dr. McHenry said.

The toxoid will be administered through the local health unit and local physicians.

It was expected that the medicine would be here the past week, but it had not arrived up to Saturday night, according to Dr. McHenry.

Two great objectives of the American Legion, child welfare and community service, are incorporated in this immunization program.

PERMITS ARE ISSUED FOR DRILLING WORK

Nineteen drilling permits were issued during the week by the minerals division of the Louisiana conservation commission. Of the number, three are located in Jackson parish and one in Ouachita parish.

Those in Jackson parish are as follows:

C. M. Johnson, Dallas, No. 1, Lusk, unsectionalized.

John Glessell, trustee, Shreveport, No. 1, L. I. M. company, section 2-9-4 west. No. 1 A, L. I. M. company, section 1-8-4 west.

Humble Oil Refining company, Houston, No. 4, J. W. DeVilbiss, section 14-9-4 west.

Permit issued in Ouachita parish is as follows:

C. M. Johnson, Dallas, No. 1, estate of D. Golsen, section 25-17-1 east.

Drivers who find it necessary to change a tire on the road should park off the pavement and avoid the possibility of an accident.

Farmers To Make Plans For Eradicating Tuberculosis In Stock

FARMERVILLE, June 15.—(Special)—Meetings of Union parish farmers will be held in various communities of the parish during the next two weeks for the purpose of discussing a campaign for the eradication of tuberculosis in cattle, it was announced by J. V. Rabb, parish agricultural agent.

Assembly places for testing cattle for tuberculosis will be selected at the meetings. The testing of the cattle is compulsory under the law, it was stated, and the parish program is a part of the statewide program which is being conducted without cost to the farmer.

Mr. Rabb announced that the meetings of farmers will be held next week as follows:

Monday, Ward 1: Farmerville High school, 9 a. m.; Hopewell school, 11 a. m.; Sam Taylor's store, 1:30 p. m.; Salem, 3:30 p. m.

Tuesday, Ward 2: Union school 9 a. m.; Marion High school, 11 a. m.; Sadie school, 1:30 p. m.; Linville High school, 3:30 p. m.

Wednesday: Zion Hill church, 9 a. m.; Central school, 11 a. m.; Mount Union school, 1:30 p. m.; Camp Creek school, 3:30 p. m.

Thursday: Canaan school, 9 a. m.; Beach Grove school, 11 a. m.; Blocker's dipping vat (ward 10), 1:30 p. m.; Spearsville High school, 3:30 p. m.

Friday, Ward 4: Mount Tabor church, 9 a. m.; Union Gin school house, 11 a. m.; Evergreen church, 1:30 p. m.; Pine Grove church, 3:30 p. m.

Saturday: Pisgah church, 9 a. m.; Weldon church, 11 a. m.; J. C. Davis' farm (Bernice-Lisbon road) 1:30 p. m.; Bernice Grammar school auditorium, 3:30 p. m.

ANNUAL DAIRY FIELD DAY HELD IN CALHOUN

Annual dairy field day was conducted at the North Louisiana experiment station Friday when a large number of people were present. R. H. Lush, of the dairy research department of Louisiana State university, made a talk in which he praised the work of the station which is managed by Sidney Stewart.

Harry D. Wilson, Louisiana commissioner of agriculture and immigration, also talked to the assemblage.

Inspection was made of the model dairy and of the pasture crops and experiments that are being conducted.

Scant Warning Of Horror Is Expected In Paris If Germany Strikes From The Air

90 Minutes Is All French Capital Will Have To Prepare For Raid

(Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

PARIS, June 15.—Ninety minutes from any given minute is all the time Paris expects to get to prepare for the first air attack in case of war with Germany.

That is the approximate flying time from German air bases at Stuttgart, Frankfort, and Cologne. Some make it less than that, for no military staff counts any longer on the old-fashioned declaration of war.

First warning of future wars, military men assume, will come when a fleet of war planes crosses the border. The winner will be the country which "jumps the gun" the fastest. And "the next war" might even be pretty well decided in an hour and a half.

But despite, or perhaps because of, those fatal 90 minutes, Paris lags in the careful preparations for defense against air attack that mark life in Berlin, which is much farther from the frontier. The civil population of Paris—take it from a spokesman of the National Union for Air Defense—is in a state of magnificent unpreparedness.

"Our most serious handicap," said this spokesman, "is the Frenchman's proverbial 'je-m'en fichisme'." Which might be translated, his "What-the-hell-ism."

Parisian won't "play"

Your Frenchman in Paris won't be pushed, and he won't be bothered. He won't be stood in line, he won't say, "Yes, sir," and he won't play drill-against-gas.

Furthermore, the Parisian has a certain fatalism that makes him realize that all he can do, facing an air attack, is too little. If he thinks of it at all, he probably admits, "Paris is a doomed city—under certain circumstances, just as all European civilization is doomed under those same circumstances."

If somebody says, "You must build bombproof shelters," he inquires, "How long will that take?" And if the answer comes back, "Six months, or a year, or 150 years"—as one visionary plan requires—the Frenchman shrugs and thinks of the 90 minutes that separate him from German hangars.

Berlin Ready on Defense

In this view, the National Union points out, the Frenchman is the opposite of the German, who almost revels in the exactness of his measures for air defense of civilians.

Every building in Berlin has a leader appointed in case of air raids. He is in supreme control and has a nurse, a fireman, and a shelter-boss to see that everything is ready for gas and bomb defense. Five million such people have been trained in Germany for their part in possible air raids.

But in France the National Union has succeeded in enlisting only 300,000 "monitors," or men specially trained to take instantaneous charge of civilians under air attack.

Every Cellar Checked

Berlin has made a careful census of every cellar. But nothing of the sort has been done in Paris. The National Union states that a few cellars are suitable to hide in as bombproofs but that only a handful are built to withstand gas.

A vague plan is discussed to turn the famous old catacombs beneath Paris into bombproof shelters. But they have crumbled so far that it might cost a billion francs to repair them as shelter for more than 30,000 people.

Military authorities are convinced that probably no major city can be saved from extensive damage in case of a European war. So the only really safe bet to protect civilians is to get them out of there—evacuation.

Residents remember that the government was on the very point of sacrificing Paris to the advancing Germans in 1914, moving out the government offices and evacuating the people.

The military authorities have a plan—on paper—for removing old people, women and children from Paris in time of danger. But Parisians think of those 90 minutes, and shrug.

In Germany, rehearsals for evacuation of whole cities have already been held.

Refuse to Worry

But in Paris the national temperament has prevented any public rehearsals of passive air defense. Some first-aid teams have worked out publicly, but only a few, not a tenth of the 250,000 women nurses whom the National Union has already enlisted for this work.

So the National Union, whose president is Gaston Doumergue, ex-president of the republic and former premier, is struggling to do by educational means what it cannot accomplish by actual rehearsal.

It keeps drumming home certain simple rules as to what the individual should do to protect himself in case of gas attack.

Americans can scarcely realize what this 90 minutes means in the state of people's minds in mid-Europe.

"Today 100 planes, each carrying a ton of gas bombs, could cover Paris with a layer of gas 60 feet thick. It could be done in an hour, and if there were no wind, Paris would be annihilated." So writes an eminent French chemist, Prof. P. Langevin of the College de France.

DEPUTY GUNTER IS SLASHED BY GORDON ZIEGLER

received a complaint from a residential neighborhood of the community that Ziegler was there and was so cursing and disturbing the peace that he was objectionable. Residents asked that he be placed under arrest.

The deputy went to the scene determined to take Ziegler to Jonesboro. When he approached the man and told him he was under arrest, Ziegler darted his hand into his trouser pocket and jerked out his knife, it was said.

Before Gunter could draw his revolver, Ziegler stabbed him in the throat, severing the jugular vein, witnesses asserted.

As he fell to the ground, Gunter drew his gun and fired two shots. Because of the amount of blood on Ziegler's clothes, it was at first thought that one or both of the bullets had taken effect. The blood was from Gunter's wound.

Another ambulance was ordered from Monroe but upon arrival found that its services were not needed.

Sheriff Thomas told The Morning World that Ziegler had a bad cut on his forehead, believed to have been caused by a blow of a revolver. He said that it had either been inflicted by Gunter before the stabbing or by some friend of the deputy after Gunter had been taken to Monroe and before the arrival of Sheriff Thomas in Eros.

To make sure Ziegler was not badly hurt, Sheriff Thomas had him examined by a Jonesboro physician in the jail. A stitch or two was taken in his head but examination revealed he had no other injuries.

Not knowing that Gunter had already died in Monroe, Ziegler continued to curse the officer while en route to jail with Sheriff Thomas. "I hope I killed him. I hope the so-and-so dies," he kept muttering over and over, Sheriff Thomas said.

Ziegler would not give the sheriff any information as to why he had stabbed the deputy and other than muttering under his breath and curses was uncommunicative.

Sheriff Thomas said Gunter had served under him for two years and was a fearless and faithful officer. He declared that Gunter had kept unusually good order in Eros and the surrounding territory assigned to him and that the Jackson parish sheriff's department lost a fine member with his death.

The sheriff said Ziegler had given authorities trouble on numerous occasions.

Ziegler resided about four miles north of Eros and has many relatives in that section, according to the sheriff.

The deputy's body was being held in a local undertaking establishment Saturday night. Funeral arrangements had not been completed Saturday night.

HUGE CLIPPER SHIP COMPLETES FLIGHT TO MIDWAY ISLAND

ALAMEDA, Calif., June 15.—(AP)—The Pan-American clipper plane alighted at Midway Island at 8:40 p.m. Eastern Standard time, completing its 1,323-mile flight from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The big seaplane reported by wireless to its base here that it sighted the island twenty minutes previously and was first seen by the Pan-American crew at Midway at 8:28 p.m. Eastern Standard time, eight minutes later.

The overseas journey to this mid-Pacific island was completed in nine hours and 13 minutes of flying time. The craft took off from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, at 11:27 a.m., Eastern Standard time.

Today's flight marked the first commercial air venture west of Hawaii, although the trip was made several years ago by a mass flight of some 20 American naval planes.

Water-cooled engines, widely used in commercial planes about 1929, have practically disappeared. This type of power plant appeared in only about 10 per cent of the planes produced in 1934.

HAIL JOAN OF ARC!

BIG AUTOMOBILE SHOW IS PLANNED

it will represent and will include some of the most startling innovations that have made the recent output of motor manufacturers conspicuous for courageous achievement.

The showing of motor cars will be held during the first three days of "Automobile Week," and will be held at a downtown location to be announced later this week. There will be individual displays of cars at the show rooms of the local dealers all through the week, and in addition accessory houses, tire dealers and service stations will hold special displays at their places of business.

The motor car show will be opened with appropriate ceremonies on Saturday, June 22, when Mayor Arnold Bernstein of Monroe and Mayor C. C. Bell of West Monroe will make the formal opening speeches.

A special feature of the event will be the award of cash prizes to those in attendance at the auto show. The awards will include $50 for first prize, $25 for second; $15 for third, and $10 for fourth. Everyone attending any session of the show is entitled to participate in the awards, which will be made at the final session Monday night, June 24. The affair is expected to attract thousands of visitors from all sections of the Monroe trade area.

HEMORRHAGE FATAL TO WELL KNOWN CARTOONIST

CHICAGO, June 15.—(AP)—Gaar Williams, widely known newspaper cartoonist, died at Passavant hospital today, several hours after he had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 54 years old.

Williams, who was called the "Hoosier cartoonist," was known for the whimsical portrayals of "Plain Folks." His drawings were syndicated nationally. He originated "Mort Green" in a "Strain on the Family Tie," "Zipper," the amiable little dog character, and the features, "Our Secret Ambition" and "Among the Folks in History."

TODAY

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

three millions and retired saying, "someone else can have the championship," was walking toward the Braddock-Baer prize fight, along the farthest outer rim of the bowl, to his "ringside" seat.

There came what reporters call "a thud and a flop." A "preliminary fighter," the weaker of two large, blond, human lumps hired to amuse the crowd while it waited, had been knocked down.

After scarcely a glance, across the wide bowl Mr. Tunney observed "he's out, he will not get up." He was out, and did not get up. "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings." Tunney was diligent in his business. Learned to know it thoroughly and now stands before kings, at least, money kings. It is very important to know one thing thoroughly. Mr. Tunney also knows Shakespeare.

FOR REASONS that cause speculation Max Baer did not win the fight, or hurt Mr. Braddock, his opponent. Some that believe in human nature said: "Do you think Baer could be cold-blooded enough to 'K. O.' Braddock, after seeing the photographs of Braddock's wife and three little kids, and all on the dole so recently?" That may explain it. Others think there was a more practical reason. The management said Baer had broken both hands in the fight, and that is why he patted Mr. Braddock instead of hitting him. But, the management would not exhibit ex-rays of the broken hands, nor permit ex-Rays to be taken for reporters. So, perhaps it was the heart of Mr. Baer that broke, at the thought of putting back on the dole Mr. Braddock and his three little kiddies, one of them clasping a doll to her chest.

There will be another fight, with possibly greater gate receipts. The crop of ticket-buyers never fails.

JESSE JONES, who understands business and has distributed much money for the government, says the public should understand the present conditions of railroads and the necessity of strengthening them. Railroads must be helped to "meet increasing competition from highway and airway carriers, and their unprofitable mileage must be eliminated, if railroads are to continue in private hands." The question is, can they continue in private hands?

Mr. Jones reminds the country that railroads "have provided greater employment, directly and indirectly than any other industry," and their gross income has been cut in half.

A FACTORY EXPLOSION in a small German village, destroying everything, killing many, is attributed by some to an overwhelmingly high-powered explosive hitherto unknown. That, if true, might interest Germany's neighbors.

What the explosive did accidentally to a German village, it might do, purposely, to Berlin or London.

The mayor of the village writing for the Associated Press about the terrible destruction and death concludes his story with "Heil Hitler." That might seem tactless, following such a disaster.

INSTEAD OF being returned to their parents at once, the Dionne quintuplets, according to the chairman of their board of guardians will probably not go home until "they are about nine years old."

"It must be certain," says the guardian, "that the babies will not be used for exhibition purposes."

tween police and strike sympathizers in which one man was killed and more than 35 others were injured.

Mayor Roy N. Towl of Omaha and Sheriff John Hopkins of Douglas county had telegraphed Jurgensen:

"Situation in Omaha beyond control of local authorities. Hundreds are arming and planning attack on car barns and business establishments. One killed and 90 injured last night. Police and sheriff's force wholly inadequate to cope with the situation. Intervention of national guards forthwith imperatively necessary to prevent serious loss of life and property. We hereby respectfully request such intervention in time to prevent rioting tonight."

Their plea was relayed to Gov. Cochran, who had attended the conference of governors at Biloxi, Miss. He answered with telegraphed instructions to summon the military.

Paul and Jurgensen announced their step was taken solely to protect lives of citizens and indicated they would not permit street cars to operate in the trouble zone—the south Omaha area, largely populated by stockyard workers.

There it was that the riots of the last three nights occurred, each growing in violence.

Jurgensen rejected a suggestion from Gov. Cochran that only a small detachment of troops be sent and summoned the entire armed forces of the state.

Paul announced a military court would try rioters, warned women and children out of the riot zone, and said tear gas would be discarded in favor of regular war gases to quell any trouble.

teristics which predominate among our people, and it is for this reason the community has made vast strides forward where we have seen others fall back. It is on this foundation that we build so surely for the future.

Our civic organizations have given repeated demonstrations of this spirit. It has been shown in the united efforts that have made possible our great public institutions. The building of our parish courthouse and our junior college were directly due to initiation and cooperation by the civic clubs.

Our churches, of all creeds and beliefs, have similarly displayed a spirit of broad understanding and mutual helpfulness that has served to promote friendship and fellowship which in turn has developed a maximum of service for the welfare of the community. This cooperation is emphasized in the gatherings of the ministers' club, composed of pastors of virtually all congregations of the city; in the mutual exchange of pulpits, and in the brotherhood service held each year in different churches.

This makes for a common union of spiritual forces that is deeply significant in its implications of a sound community structure and assurance of solid growth for the future.

Monroe occupies an enviable position in the educational field, through its great public school systems and its connection with the state university through the Northeast Center. Seldom does one see so many fine school buildings in one community as we do in Monroe. So impressive are these structures that not long ago Joshua L. Johns, then president of Kiwanis International, on a visit to Monroe, asked for the plans of one of our high schools with the idea that it could be duplicated for Appleton, Wis., his home. That was a fine compliment to the educational vision of our people, who have provided so magnificently for the future.

The cultural advantages and opportunities of Monroe offer a glowing picture of what the future holds in store for us, as we build on what has already been accomplished. Through our music organizations, our Little Theater, our fine arts club, the literary groups, the sketch club and other institutions of like character we have a reflection of the spirit of the people in evaluating and cultivating the finer and richer things of life.

These are the influences that give to us confidence, courage and a valid hope for the future. It is because of these qualities, inspiring faith and vision and determination, that we behold today the ample evidences of our material prosperity. We see our great public and business buildings; our municipal departments devoted to public welfare, protection and advancement; our great industrial enterprises, furnishing employment and commercial opportunities of great importance; our business houses, filled with the commodities that contribute to the comfort and happiness of the community; our systems of transportation, which have played so large a part in the city's development, and which promise to figure in even a larger way in the future—and in the whole picture we visualize the evidences of a loyal, united people, giving their energies, their abilities, their talents, to the promotion, the progress, the achievements of the community at large.

It is these who by right of their interest, their service and their civic fealty, speak with affectionate pride of proprietorship and with a full sense of the citizen's responsibility, when they say:

"Monroe—that's my town."

CONGRESS LEADERS FEAR UTILITY BILL WON'T PASS HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 15.—(AP)—New information raising fresh doubt of their ability to jam through a bill abolishing "unnecessary" utility holding companies today prompted a decision by congressional chiefs to ask President Roosevelt if he would be satisfied with something less than abolition.

As they reached that determination, both house and senate were foregoing their usual Saturday recess to speed other "must" measures on the president's program. The senate worked its way through a batch of minor amendments to the social security bill; the house was rushing through miscellaneous measures to make room for the nuisance tax extension and AAA amendment measures Monday.

The new information was a closely guarded survey of sentiment in the house on abolition of utility holding companies. It was learned authoritatively, however, the poll showed sentiment so closely divided as to presage a stiff battle when the issue is brought to the floor.

MAN LOSES LIFE WHEN FIRE HALTS WEDDING

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—One man was fatally burned and 30 other persons were burned or injured in a fire which swept an East Side ballroom where 250 guests had assembled for a wedding.

The dead man was identified from cards in his pockets as Paul Stricker, 23, of Brooklyn. He lost his life after he had made several trips in and out of the burning building, a five-story structure, carrying children to safety.

The guests had assembled for the wedding of Louis Shein, 2, and Pearl Sokolow, 21, both of New York. Almost without warning flames swept the building, located in an old section of the city just off First avenue.

CHINESE MOVE IS AWAITED BY JAPS

Apprehension Subsides In Tientsin Despite State Of Affairs

TIENTSIN, June 15.—(AP)—Japan, her north China garrisons reenforced, waited calmly today for China's next move in the current Sino-Japanese crisis.

Despite continued non-settlement of the "Changpei incident" and the national government's delay in replying to demands presented May 29, apprehension in this area visibly subsided and an exodus of frightened Chinese residents southward lessened.

A Japanese army plane flew over Peiping again, presumably to oversee the continued outward movement of Chinese, but reports from that ancient capital said it attracted little attention.

The Nipponese military men, who said the detention of four Japanese at Changpei, Chawar province, Wednesday was "engaging our most serious attention," awaited Governor Sung Chei-Yuan's reply to demands for cessation of anti-Japanese activities there, punishment of those responsible, apologies and assurances against repetition.

As to Hopei province, Lt.-Col. Gennosuke Matsui of Japan's Kwantung army, said military preparedness would not be relaxed until China accepted in writing the May 29 demands for removal of all anti-Japanese elements and influences.

Choudrant

Several entertainments in honor of Miss Mary O'Neal, who married Lamar Bryant on June 13, were given prior to the wedding. Among them was a linen shower given by Mrs. D. F. O'Neal, a buffet supper given by Mrs. C. L. Madden and a miscellaneous shower given by Miss Mattie Lee Donald.

The Temple Baptist W. M. U. of Ruston entertained the Choudrant W. M. U. at its monthly royal service meeting. Nine members of the Choudrant society attended. Refreshments were served.

Games and contests were enjoyed when Mrs. C. L. Mondart entertained recently. Refreshments were served. Among those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bagly, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Kidd and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Colvin.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Madden spent several days with relatives in Mississippi recently.

Mrs. H. E. Beeger and Mrs. Cascie Beeger of Houston, Texas, visited relatives here last week.

Mrs. M. E. Kidd had as a weekend guest recently her brothers and their families: C. V. Cook of Lafayette, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cook of Monroe and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Cook of Monroe and Mrs. Cook's sister, Mrs. J. G. Hicks of Olla.

Mr. H. C. Lacour and daughter, Katherine, of Lafayette has arrived here to spend the summer with relatives.

Mrs. W. M. Bagwell was visited last week by her sister, Mrs. Frank Bell of Mer Rouge.

Mrs. Hattie Geiger has been appointed a member of the faculty of the Folk school to be held in Ruston soon. She will look after the interests and welfare of the children of this community.

liam J. O'Hara, in criminal district court.

Judge O'Hara granted permission for the attorney general to supercede the district attorney in prosecution of the case and Sullivan's petition charged that this act amounted to the "removal of an honest man for a dishonest purpose."

The petition charged that the state forces were attempting to "create a new tribunal for the parish of Orleans contrary to the constitution," which has designated five criminal court judges here.

It charged that both Judge O'Hara and Judge Pickrel were "placed on the bench by Senator Huey P. Long" and that the "said Judge Pickrel is controlled by said Senator Long."

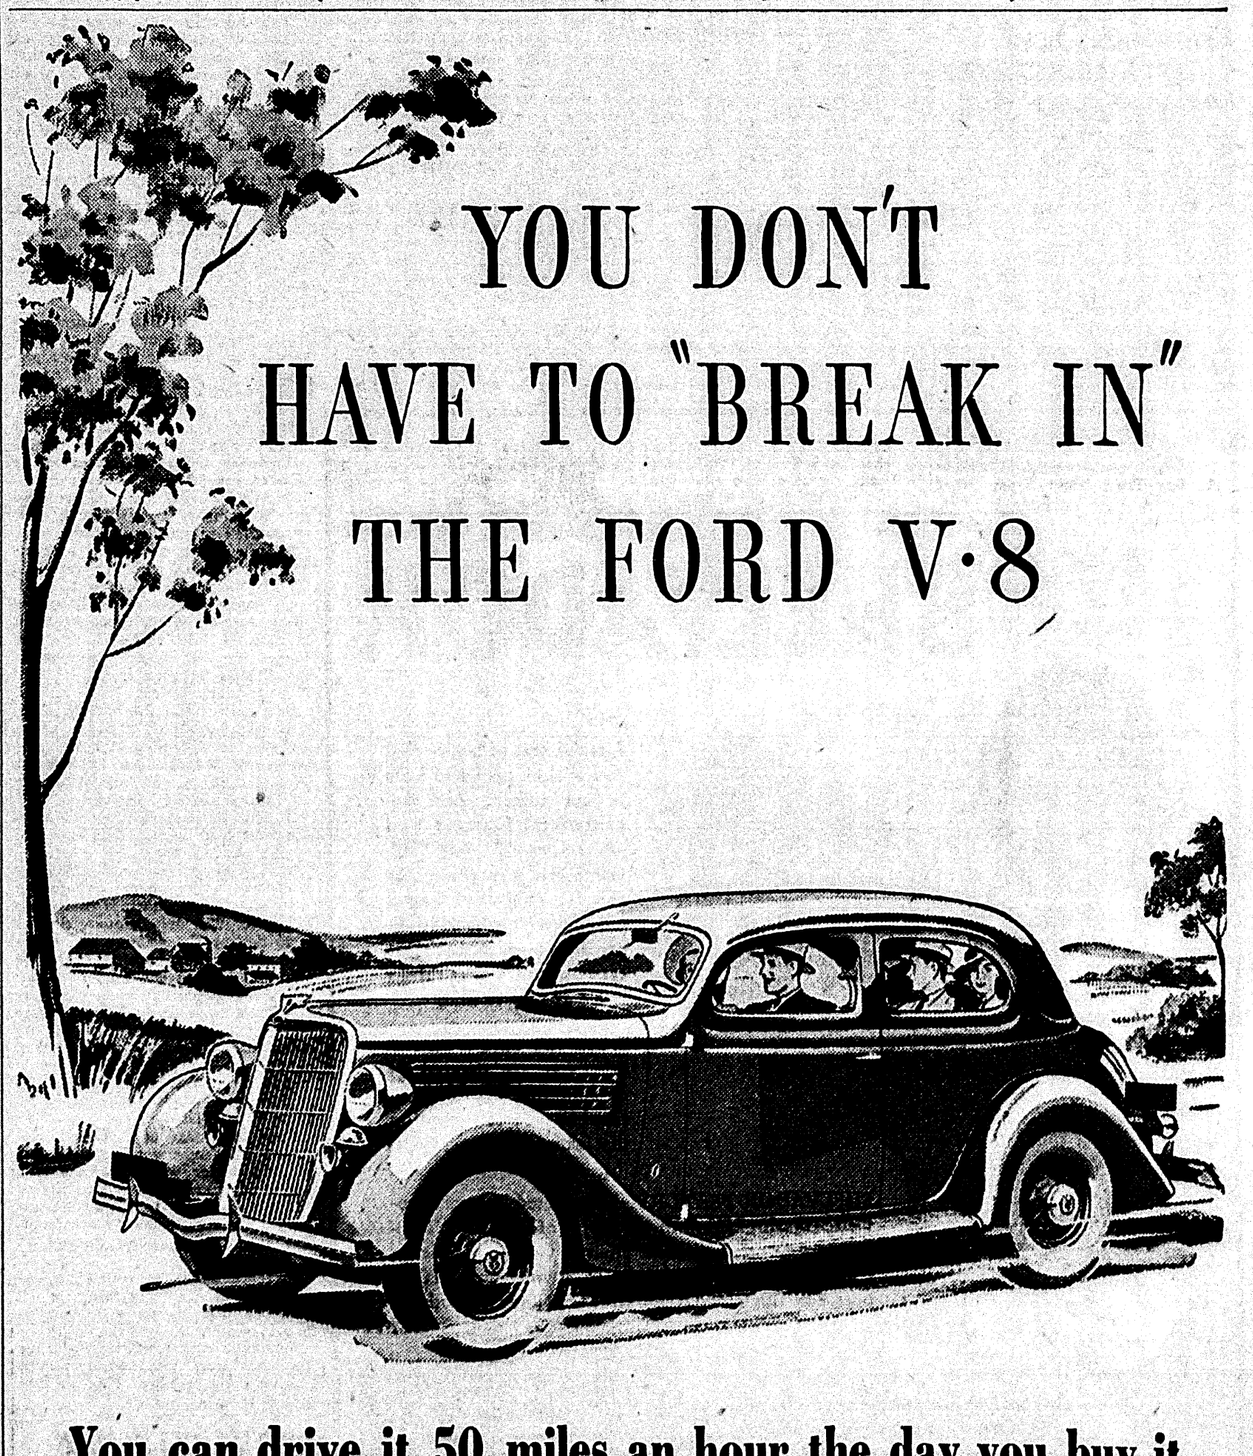
"That the board of jury commissioners for the parish of Orleans were all three appointed by said Governor Allen (O. K. Allen, political ally of Long) at the dictation of said Senator Long, and that said jury commissioners blindly obey his orders, whether just or unjust.

"That for the past seven years the said Senator Long has in every way done all he could to ruin the good name of your petitioner, to destroy his property, and to confine and hamper his political activities."

In conclusion, the petition contended, the charges which Sullivan said were "utterly baseless," were illegally brought because of prescription.

Should his petition be denied, it was understood, Sullivan planned to apply directly to federal court.

Many veteran troupers of the vaudeville circuits say they dislike playing in their home towns because the "home folks" usually receive their acts coolly.



YOU DON'T HAVE TO "BREAK IN" THE FORD V·8

You can drive it 50 miles an hour the day you buy it

THE FORD V-8 is ready for normal driving when you buy it. There is no tedious period of breaking-in for 500 or 1000 miles. You can drive it up to 50 miles an hour the first day. And after the first hundred miles you can drive it as fast as you desire.

That means greater motoring enjoyment for every motorist. It is especially important to motorists who are thinking about a new car for a vacation trip — to physicians, salesmen and all those who use a car for business. Instead of dragging along at slow speeds for days, you can make good time from the start.

The reason for this is as important as the result. The Ford V-8 needs no breaking-in because of unusual accuracy in the manufacture of moving parts and the smoothness of bearing surfaces. Clearances are correct when you buy the car. It is not necessary to depend on a long wearing-in period to eliminate tightness and insure smooth running. Longer life, greater economy and better performance are bound to result from such precision methods. They are further proof of the care and quality that go into the Ford V-8.

Formerly only the most expensive cars could be driven at normal speeds from the beginning. That still holds true today — except in the case of the Ford V-8. It gives you fine-car construction, along with fine-car performance, comfort, safety and beauty.

DEPUTY GUNTER IS SLASHED BY GORDON ZIEGLER

received a complaint from a residential neighborhood of the community that Ziegler was there and was so cursing and disturbing the peace that he was objectionable. Residents asked that he be placed under arrest.

The deputy went to the scene determined to take Ziegler to Jonesboro. When he approached the man and told him he was under arrest, Ziegler darted his hand into his trouser pocket and jerked out his knife, it was said.

Before Gunter could draw his revolver, Ziegler stabbed him in the throat, severing the jugular vein, witnesses asserted.

As he fell to the ground, Gunter drew his gun and fired two shots. Because of the amount of blood on Ziegler's clothes, it was at first thought that one or both of the bullets had taken effect. The blood was from Gunter's wound.

Another ambulance was ordered from Monroe but upon arrival found that its services were not needed.

Sheriff Thomas told The Morning World that Ziegler had a bad cut on his forehead, believed to have been caused by a blow of a revolver. He said that it had either been inflicted by Gunter before the stabbing or by some friend of the deputy after Gunter had been taken to Monroe and before the arrival of Sheriff Thomas in Eros.

To make sure Ziegler was not badly hurt, Sheriff Thomas had him examined by a Jonesboro physician in the jail. A stitch or two was taken in his head but examination revealed he had no other injuries.

Not knowing that Gunter had already died in Monroe, Ziegler continued to curse the officer while en route to jail with Sheriff Thomas. "I hope I killed him, I hope the so-and-so dies," he kept muttering over and over, Sheriff Thomas said.

Ziegler would not give the sheriff any information as to why he had stabbed the deputy and other than muttering under his breath and cursing was uncommunicative.

Sheriff Thomas said Gunter had served under him for two years and was a fearless and faithful officer. He declared that Gunter had kept unusually good order in Eros and the surrounding territory assigned to him and that the Jackson parish sheriff's department lost a fine member with his death.

The sheriff said Ziegler had given authorities trouble on numerous occasions.

Ziegler resided about four miles north of Eros and has many relatives in that section, according to the sheriff.

The deputy's body was being held in a local undertaking establishment Saturday night. Funeral arrangements had not been completed Saturday night.

HAIL JOAN OF ARC!

HUGE CLIPPER SHIP COMPLETES FLIGHT TO MIDWAY ISLAND

ALAMEDA, Calif., June 15.—(AP)—The Pan-American clipper plane alighted at Midway Island at 8:40 p.m., Eastern Standard time, completing its 1,323-mile flight from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The big seaplane reported by wireless to its base here that it sighted the island twenty minutes previously and was first seen by the Pan-American crew at Midway at 8:28 p.m., Eastern Standard time, eight minutes later.

The overseas journey to this mid-Pacific island was completed in nine hours and 13 minutes of flying time. The craft took off from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, at 11:27 a.m., Eastern Standard time.

Today's flight marked the first commercial air venture west of Hawaii, although the trip was made several weeks ago by a mass flight of some 40 American naval planes.

Water-cooled engines, widely used in commercial planes about 1929, have practically disappeared. This type of power plant appeared in only about 1 per cent of the planes produced in 1934.

it will represent and will include some of the most startling innovations that have made the recent output of motor manufacturers conspicuous for courageous achievement.

The showing of motor cars will be held during the first three days of "Automobile Week," and will be held at a downtown location to be announced later this week. There will be individual displays of cars at the show rooms of the local dealers all through the week, and in addition accessory houses, tire dealers and service stations will hold special displays at their places of business.

The motor car show will be opened with appropriate ceremonies on Saturday, June 22, when Mayor Arnold Bernstein of Monroe and Mayor C. C. Bell of West Monroe will make the formal opening speeches.

A special feature of the event will be the award of cash prizes to those in attendance at the auto show. The awards will include $50 for first prize, $25 for second; $15 for third, and $10 for fourth. Everyone attending any session of the show is entitled to participate in the awards, which will be made at the final session Monday night, June 24. The affair is expected to attract thousands of visitors from all sections of the Monroe trade area.

HEMORRHAGE FATAL TO WELL KNOWN CARTOONIST

CHICAGO, June 15.—(AP)—Gaar Williams, widely known newspaper cartoonist, died at Passavant hospital today, several hours after he had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 54 years old.

He originated "Mort Green" in a "Strain on the Family Tie," "Zipper," the amiable little dog character, and the features, "Our Secret Ambition" and "Among the Folks in History."

three millions and retired saying, "someone else can have the championship," was walking toward the Braddock-Baer prize fight, along the farthest outer rim of the bowl, to his "ringside" seat.

There came what reporters call "a thud and a flop." A "preliminary fighter," the weaker of two large, blond, human lumps hired to amuse the crowd while it waited, had been knocked down.

After scarcely a glance, across the wide bowl Mr. Tunney observed "he's out, he will not get up." He was out, and did not get up. "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings." Tunney was diligent in his business. Learned to know it thoroughly and now stands before kings, at least, money kings. It is very important to know one thing thoroughly. Mr. Tunney also knows Shakespeare.

FOR REASONS that cause speculation Max Baer did not win the fight, or hurt Mr. Braddock, his opponent. Some that believe in human nature said: "Do you think Baer could be cold-blooded enough to 'K. O.' Braddock, after seeing the photographs of Braddock's wife and three little kids, and all on the dole so recently?" That may explain it. Others think there was a more practical reason. The management said Baer had broken both hands in the fight, and that is why he patted Mr. Braddock instead of hitting him. But, the management would not exhibit ex-rays of the broken hands, nor permit ex-Rays to be taken for reporters. So, perhaps it was the heart of Mr. Baer that broke, at the thought of putting back on the dole Mr. Braddock and his three little kiddies, one of them clasping a doll to her chest.

There will be another fight, with possibly greater gate receipts. The crop of ticket-buyers never fails.

JESSE JONES, who understands business and has distributed much money for the government, says the public should understand the present conditions of railroads and the necessity of strengthening them. Railroads must be helped to "meet increasing competition from highway and airway carriers, and their unprofitable mileage must be eliminated, if railroads are to continue in private hands." The question is, can they continue in private hands?

Mr. Jones reminds the country that railroads "have provided greater employment, directly and indirectly than any other industry," and their gross income has been cut in half.

A FACTORY EXPLOSION in a small German village, destroying everything, killing many, is attributed by some to an overwhelmingly high-powered explosive hitherto unknown. That, if true, might interest Germany's neighbors.

What the explosive did accidentally to a German village, it might do, purposely, to Berlin or London.

The mayor of the village writing for the Associated Press about the terrible destruction and death concludes his story with "Heil Hitler." That might seem tactless, following such a disaster.

INSTEAD OF being returned to their parents at once, the Dionne quintuplets, according to the chairman of their board of guardians will probably not go home until "they are about nine years old."

"It must be certain," says the guardian, "that the babies will not be used for exhibition purposes."

It seems wise from the babies' point of view, rather hard on the father, who needs money.

tween police and strike sympathizers in which one man was killed and more than 35 others were injured.

Mayor Roy N. Towl of Omaha and Sheriff John Hopkins of Douglas county had telegraphed Jurgensen:

"Situation in Omaha beyond control of local authorities. Hundreds are arming and planning attack on car barns and business establishments. One killed and 90 injured last night. Police and sheriff's force wholly inadequate to cope with the situation. Intervention of national guards forthwith imperatively necessary to prevent serious loss of life and property. We hereby respectfully request such intervention in time to prevent rioting tonight."

Their plea was relayed to Gov. Cochran, who had attended the conference of governors at Biloxi, Miss. He answered with telegraphed instructions to summon the military.

Paul and Jurgensen announced their step was taken solely to protect lives of citizens and indicated they would not permit street cars to operate in the trouble zone—the south Omaha area, largely populated by stockyard workers.

There it was that the riots of the last three nights occurred, each growing in violence.

Jurgensen rejected a suggestion from Gov. Cochran that only a small detachment of troops be sent and summoned the entire armed forces of the state.

nothing was done about it, while minor offenders against the same law were being jailed.

Robinson jumped up and asserted: "There has been too much repetition of this. I do not feel the senator has any justification for that. It is offensive to everyone in the senate but himself when he makes that statement."

Long said he was just "trying to be judicious and courteous" in using the word "stolen."

"That's just it," Robinson replied. "The statement is untrue in every sense of the word and the senator knows it is not true."

Ashurst, in his speech, said that in "such a whirligig epoch as the present, many persons in normal times sensible become over-wrought and unjustly suspect and defame such of their fellow citizens as do not subscribe to their particular reforms and gyrations."

"Therefore, the suspiciousness of the senator from Louisiana and his intolerant attitude toward and his denunciations of his colleagues, are quite understandable."

The Arizonan told of an unpatented invention of a "curved telescope," through which a person could "see himself objectively as well as subjectively and hear and see precisely how he appears to the man across the street."

"I will venture the suggestion," he said, "that if the senator from Louisiana should look through this telescope objectively as he doubtless will do some day for he is of an inquiring mind, he will distinctly perceive a man frequently disrespectful of the rights and feelings of others, exalting himself with an unwarranted [illegible] of superiority over others less gifted and less fortunate than himself; a man too often taking undue advantage of his privileged position here; a man of reckless abandon in speech and relentless in his forays upon those who disagree with him."

Ashurst then told of Aeschylus, the earliest of the three "great tragic poets," who was born about 500 B. C.

"A legend of doubtful authenticity states that Aeschylus was killed by a large turtle which an eagle let fall upon the head of the poet, mistaking the poet's head for a large stone.

"I express the hope that the American eagle will not be required to drop something on the head of the senator from Louisiana before he takes the hint and recognizes his true relation to the senate and the country."

called to see him at the Phoenix Drug store, 348 DeSiard street, this city. His courteous and painstaking attitude with every one is said to be causing many local sufferers to realize how fortunate they are to have this amazing new medical discovery explained to them in such a manner.

Read what Mrs. C. R. Scroogs, 1014 Erion street, Pineville, La. (just across the river from Alexandria), said in the following remarkable statement of praise made to the Gly-Cas man who is now at the Phoenix Drug company, 348 DeSiard street:

"Gly-Cas is the first and only medicine to give me the results I expected," said Mrs. Scroogs, "It was for many years before that I had been troubled with constipation and also with indigestion and dyspepsia. My stomach was in such condition that I would spit up food after each meal and it seemed everything I ate turned to vinegar it was so sour. Gas formed so badly that I thought I had some kind of heart trouble, palpitation was so severe at times. I would become terribly nervous, a good nights sleep was impossible and my kidneys became so effected that my back ached continually. I spent much money—doing my best to find relief—but all in vain—I was always disappointed with the results of medicines—until I began Gly-Cas."

"Having seen and known so many intimate friends who had taken Gly-Cas with such surprising results I too decided to give it a trial," she continued, "And it was a happy experience for me when I began to show such wonderful improvement. My bowels were regulated almost at once and the poison gases removed from my system as they have never been before. I am now eating and enjoying the most substantial foods, not only without ill effects but I relish every bite I take. My kidney disorder, backache and nervousness have all been corrected and I am enjoying perfect sleep and rest at night. There should be no doubt as to Gly-Cas' merit for it gives results where all else before had failed to make an impression."

Boy Scouts Having Great Time At Camp Ki-Ro-Li

Eighty-Three Lads Are Leaving Today To Make Way For New Group

The Boy Scout encampment at Camp Ki-Ro-Li goes into its second week today as 83 youths who attended the first week's camping period roll their packs to take the homeward trail, and scouts of five other troops of the Ouachita Valley council move into Ki-Ro-Li for the next seven days.

The camp was filled to its capacity during the past week, said Olan H. Black, executive of the Ouachita Valley council and camp director, and the number of scouts to enroll today is expected to be even as large as the number that attended the opening period.

Scouts taking over the camp today will be from the following troops: Troop 1, Catholic church, Father M. R. Gremillion in charge; Troop 29, First Baptist church, Monroe, Scoutmaster L. B. Pettit in charge; Troop 33, Louisiana Training institute, Scoutmaster J. D. Rice; Troop 16, Farmerville, Scoutmaster Hall Terry; and Troop 38, Oak Grove, Scoutmastef Sidney M. Harris.

Troops departing from the camp are Troop 31, Monroe; Troop 34, Monroe; Troop 56, Tallulah; and Troop 67, Sterlington.

The camp is in the charge of a responsible and capable staff, headed by Executive Black. J. D. Bice, of the Louisiana Training institute, is assistant camp director. Ed LaSalle, New Iberia, member of the Louisiana state conservation department, has charge of the nature study group. George Jackson, a Red Cross life saving examiner of Monroe, has charge of the waterfront. B. B. McClendon, senior patrol leader of Troop 31, is camp clerk; and Mrs. Olan H. Black is camp dietician in charge of the kitchen and all foodstuffs. Three capable negro cooks assist Mrs. Black in preparing meals for the scouts.

One of the first persons the youths meet as they enter camp and one they will long remember is the colorful old character, Chief William Red Fox, head of the Sioux Indian tribe of Rosebud, South Dakota. The Chief, now in his "sixties," was six years old when his tribesmen fought in what is known as Custer's Last Stand, and one of his best stories is the Indians' version of that fight.

Besides his fame as an authority in Indian lore and woodcraft, Chief Red Fox is a well-known rodeo rider, motion picture actor, Boy Scout organizer and Chautauqua speaker. The Chief's major screen roles were in "The Vanishing American" and "The Covered Wagon." Red Fox is the only member of his tribe in camp and he has his own tepee.

The Chief, however, will not take up all the scouts' time, as they will find many things of interest in the surrounding woods, the stream that ripples through the camp's wooded valley, in camp activities and the swimming pool. The pool is the favorite recreation spot of the camp and is something going on all the time to keep the scouts' interest alive.

After being shown to their quarters, it does not take the youths long to get acquainted with their surroundings.

The swimming pool, one of the biggest attractions at Ki-Ro-Li, was just recently cleaned and improved and is in great shape for the swimmers. The pool is fed from several springs and the cold spring water makes the spot more important to the scouts themselves on hot sultry days.

George Jackson, life guard and examiner, directs all activities along the waterfront. Four classes in swimming and life saving, two for non-swimmers and two for swimmers, are conducted each morning and afternoon, with the exception of Sundays. Mr. Jackson is an accredited Red Cross Life Saving examiner and scouts who earned their life saving or swimming merit badges at the past week's encampment did so under his supervision.

A first aid station is also maintained at the camp and mothers need not worry about whether or not their sons are being cared for properly. Medical attention is available for the youths each day and Dr. W. L. Bendel makes a special trip to the camp each afternoon to look after the welfare of the campers.

The scouts' water supply is good. The water is supplied from one of the best artesian wells in this part of the state and a continuous flow of cool, clear water that is healthful and free from bad taste is maintained by a pump installed on the premises.

The favorite spot of all the boys around meal time is the mess hall, an important factor in the maintainance of the camp. The mess hall, consisting of a kitchen and one long hall, screened and surrounded by hedges, is up-to-date in its equipment, and fed the 80-odd boys who attended last week's camp three well-balanced meals each day. Mrs. Black keeps the campers well contented in the way of pleasing their appetites, and, to the delight of all, they get as many helpings at one sitting as required.

There are ten tables in the hall, capable of seating eight boys and more if necessary. During the past week there was not an empty seat at a single table at meal time.

The care that is manifested in preparing the scouts' food is also evident in the arrangement of their sleeping quarters. There are eight cabins on the camp ground. All of them are compactly built and well screened against mosquitoes and other insects.

Each scout has his own cot and an alloted amount of space, the neat appearance of which is his responsibility. The scouts vie with one another in keeping their spot in the cabin the cleanest, and likewise each patrol or troop strives to make their group outstanding in the eyes of the others.

Camping life is conducted on a troop basis with each troop going about its work under the supervision of its scoutmaster or other responsible leader.

Throughout the day, when the scouts are not required at some special meeting, the boys may be seen grouped off, passing tests, the tests that will boost them a little higher in the ranks of scoutdom. They play games, too, and their principal get-to-gether hour is at the campfire circle each night. Programs by individual scouts, patrols and troops are given at the campfire programs, and Chief Red Fox is always a capable entertainer at these gatherings.

The Sunday service is a fixed part of the camp life and practically the first get-to-gether of the scouts after entering camp. The services this morning will be given at 8 o'clock by Rev. Thomas Jett, pastor of the First Christian church of Monroe, and services of this nature are undenominational in character.

CHIEF RED FOX

In it, he said, were two men, one of whom was the man they were tipped was Mahan. N. B. Powell, Kirbyville night marshal, approached the machine and the other man, a 21-year-old Kirbyville youth, shouted, "Wake up, here comes the law!" while the other man, firing an automatic pistol, sped away. Officers said they had seen a sub-machine gun in the car.

Neither would discuss the case, although one of the men, who was lodged in the Newton county jail, said the man sought as Mahan went under the alias of "Peewee" Roberts, and had said he was headed for New Orleans.

Officers said they could not see the man well that they had been tipped was Mahan, but that he weighed between 135 and 140 pounds. Constable H. F. Malone of Kirbyville said the man appeared to fit descriptions of Mahan.

sedan (Plymouth) bearing license plates with the last three numbers 153 Texas. He and three other officers located such a car early this morning parked in front of the CCC camp, where a dance was in progress.

In it, he said, were two men, one of whom was the man they were tipped was Mahan. N. B. Powell, Kirbyville night marshal, approached the machine and the other man, a 21-year-old Kirbyville youth, shouted: "Wake up, here comes the law!" while the other man, firing an automatic pistol, sped away. Officers said they had seen a sub-machine gun in the car.

Neither would discuss the case, although one of the men, who was lodged in the Newton county jail, said the man sought as Mahan went under the alias of "Peewee" Roberts, and had said he was headed for New Orleans.

Officers said they could not see the man well that they had been tipped was Mahan, but that he weighed between 135 and 140 pounds. Constable H. F. Malone of Kirbyville said the man appeared to fit descriptions of Mahan.

THANKS EXTENDED BY RAIL OFFICIAL

Railroad Week Was Great Success, Asserts Superintendent Roll

W. M. Roll, superintendent of the Missouri Pacific railroad, on Saturday issued a statement voicing the thanks of the Illinois Central, the Arkansas and Louisiana Missouri, as well as the Missouri Pacific to the people of Monroe for their cooperation in making "Railroad Week" the success it proved to be. The celebration culminated Friday in a parade through the downtown district in which 346 automobiles loaded with representatives of virtually every business and industrial establishment of the city, participated, in addition to the various railroad organizations.

Mr. Roll's statement follows:

"I feel that we should publicly express the appreciation of the three railroads in Monroe for the co-operation of the city officials, their staff and employes, the merchants and business people of Monroe, and the various organizations which took part in doing this. I think we should publicly thank the chairman of our parade committee, who was Mr. Joe Sanders, chief clerk to our master mechanic at Monroe. He was assisted in this by Mr. B. B. Logan of the A. & T. M. railway and Mr. R. C. St. John of the Y. & M. V. railroad.

"To my mind, the parade was a great success and I feel sure will do more than anything else to awaken the interest of our citizens in their railroads."

DARWIN WRONG?

If there's anything to the Darwinian theory that man is distantly related to the ape, you'll have to admit, after glancing at this picture, that the relationship must be very distant. The scene above, presenting the acme of feminine beauty in both species, depicts beauteous Maxine Doak of Fort Worth, Texas, and her girl chum from the zoo, Patsy, the Chimp.

Tallulah

The June meeting of the Tallulah Book club was held in the club house on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. E. O. Edgerton presiding and Mrs. W. C. Starrett serving as secretary. Following a short business session, when reports were made, Mrs. R. N. Ware and Mrs. W. H. Hale gave most interesting talks on the dams of the United States, Mrs. Hale confining her discussions to those east of the Mississippi river, with special emphasis on the Tennessee Valley authority, and Mrs. Ware those west of the Mississippi.

Mrs. R. K. Boney, in well chosen words, presented Mrs. Edgerton with the past president's pin in token of the club's appreciation of her efficient services during the past two years. Mrs. Edgerton responded with an appropriate talk and the new president asked for the support of the club for the coming year, urging that the membership be increased.

Miss Lillie May Long, fifth district president then installed the new officers, who are Mrs. R. T. Starrett, president; Mrs. M. T. Young, vice-president; Mrs. G. L. Garrison, secretary; Mrs. R. S. Gayle, parliamentarian; Mrs. J. H. Collins, librarian; Mrs. R. N. Ware, sergeant at arms. In response to an appeal to the club to lend its assistance in the series of clinics for the correction of defects in indigent children, made by Mrs. R. N. Ware, it voted to give the movement its support.

An exhibit of Japanese prints presented by Mrs. R. K. Boney was an interesting feature.

At the conclusion of the session, a delightful buffet tea was served by the hostesses, Mrs. G. L. Garrison, Mrs. Horace Maxwell, Mrs. H. H. Collins, Mrs. R. S. Gayle.

The Eveready circle of the Methodist Missionary society met with Mrs. W. Huckabay on Monday afternoon for a study lesson from "Suzuki Looks at Japan" by Mrs. George C. Purvis. The devotional was led by Mrs. Richard Almond and the business session presided over by Mrs. G. L. Smith. The circle voted to adopt the Godwin plan for raising funds, with Mrs. Huckabay as the leader.

Those enjoying the meeting, which was held on the lovely lawn of the Almond home, and the delicious refreshments were Mesdames Will Harvey, G. L. Smith, A. T. Palmer, George C. Purvis, L. G. Storey, Richard Almond, J. W. Rogillio, G. L. Garrison, C. H. Billett, J. R. Medlin, J. W. Huckabay, A. J. Cranford, J. C. Lee, C. H. Calhoun, Wray Bowie, H. B. Lancaster, Misses Eva Smith, of Bentonia, Miss., Alma Goza and Mrs. Henry Sneed, of Vicksburg.

Misses Elizabeth and Eula Gilfoil entertained with a delightful bridge party complimentary to Mrs. James Gilfoil, whose recent marriage was celebrated in Lake Providence. The high score prize was won by the honoree, who was also presented with a guest prize. Mrs. Fay Conroy received the cut prize. A delectable plate luncheon was served after the games. Those in attendance were Mrs. James Gilfoil, Miss Marianne Ward, Miss Elizabeth Bettis, Mrs. Fay Conroy, Miss Elise Clark, Miss Georgette Ziegler, Miss Dorothy Fairly, Mrs. Randolph Berry, Mrs. Tom Bomar, Mrs. Al Adams, Mrs. R. L. Moncrief, Mrs. Arnold Shields, Mrs. Will Adams, Miss Amelia Scott, Miss Elizabeth Holt and Mrs. Della Dudley of Memphis.

The Woman's Missionary union of the Baptist church met at the church for a program on "The Margaret Fund and the W. M. U. Training School." Mrs. R. S. Gayle was the leader and Mrs. C. W. Bonner gave the devotional. Talks were contributed by Mrs. Gayle, Mrs. W. C. Purdy, Mrs. Oliver, Miss Katye Vance and Mary Lou Gandy, and prayers were offered by Mrs. Davis, Mrs. H. B. Day, Mrs. Purdy and Mrs. L. A. Nettles. There was a good attendance.

The Saturday club was entertained by Mrs. W. P. Sevier, the bridge tables meeting in Mrs. Will Adams' home. The high score prize, A reception plate luncheon was enjoyed after one of the games by Mrs. [illegible], Miss Katherine [illegible], Miss Jane Johnson, Mrs. Albert [illegible], Mrs. Tom Bomar, Mrs. Will [illegible], Mrs. Maxwell Yerger and Miss [illegible].

The monthly business meeting of the Baptist aid was held at the home of Mrs. A. G. Bray, with Miss Florence Pierson presiding in the absence of the chairman, Mrs. Lawrence Yerger. At the conclusion of the session, a social hour was enjoyed. The hostess served sandwiches and tea. Those present were Miss Florence Pierson, Mesdames A. J. Sevier, P. O. Benjamin, G. H. Osbourne, N. T. Holt, Mary Wilson, Jessie Bonney, T. P. Kell and Miss Ida Shields.

At the meeting of the Presbyterian auxiliary, Mrs. J. S. Agee conducted the Bible lesson on "The Holy Spirit." There was a good attendance, including Mesdames George Ketchum, J. H. Collins, Henry Sevier, George Eggleston, H. N. Alexander, E. H. Ayres, H. Gannon, R. E. Gilbert, R. K. Boney, J. S. Agee, W. C. Malone and Miss Amy Holmes.

Mrs. C. H. Calhoun was hostess to the members of her bridge club the games resulting in Mrs. Wray Bowie's winning the high score prize and Mrs. Clark Brown's capturing second prize. A delightful salad course was attractively served after the games to the guests: Mesdames T. Ed. Williams, Clark Brown, Strickland, Wray Bowie, J. C. Lee, J. D. Halbach, Paul Schwartz and John Fridge.

Circle one of the Methodist Missionary society met at the church, with the study lesson from "Open Gate to Prayer" as the feature of the session. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Allen, the vice-president, Mrs. D. Fortner, presided over the short business session. Prayer by Mrs. C. K. Smith was followed by response to roll call by scripture verses. Mrs. M. L. Piper discussed "Thy Will Be Done" and Mrs. J. N. Heflin "Daily Bread." Those in attendance were Mesdames J. R. Linton, G. E. Lanehart, A. B. Kelly, C. S. Pierce, T. W. Jones, J. E. Bethea, Bryan Foster, F. D. Naylor, D. Fortner, J. L. Coleman, J. L. Land, C. K. Smith, J. N. Heflin, Charles Coltharp, M. L. Piper and Kimbrough.

The Girl Scout troop of which Mrs. E. B. Frierson is leader motored to Lake Providence for a swim Thursday afternoon. They were accompanied by Mrs. Frierson, Mrs. Richard Almond, Mrs. W. P. Yerger, Mrs. C. E. Hester and Miss Georgette Ziegler. The girls were Roberta Sevier, Joyce Hurd, Anne Bowie, Katherine and Mary Elizabeth Wilkins, Loraine Smith, Alice Gilbert, Mary Hilma Dale, Virginia Piper, Alice Lou Linton and Mignon Griffing of Monroe.

Mrs. C. E. Hester has returned from Detroit where she went as a delegate from Louisiana to the convention of the General Federations of Women's Clubs.

Clarks

Contract bridge games were played when the Bridgette club was entertained by Miss Doyne Buffington. Mrs. P. C. Yonge received a linen bridge set as high score prize. # Mae West Goes Modern In Latest Film, 'Goin' To Town'

Music, Wise Cracks Fill New Picture

Hilarious Story Of Blonde Star's Adventures At Paramount

As a girl who knows what she wants and thrives on opposition, the new and modern Mae West returns to the screen in Paramount's "Goin' to Town," now at the Paramount theater. The blonde star's new vehicle tops all her previous efforts for comedy, intrigue and vocal efforts.

Glittering arrayed in the styles of 1935, Mae West plays a cattle baron's widow with money to burn and warm affections. And to get her man she transports herself from a small midwestern mining town to Buenos Aires and Southampton, and through a series of gay and hectic adventures.

Paul Cavanagh, playing a handsome Englishman, is the man. When Mae West discovers that beauty, wealth and racing stables can't get him, she decides to become a lady, in the society manner.

With her characteristic directness and brevity sets about acquiring manners and a background. But there is a rival, Marjorie Gateson, and a number of fortune hunters, including Ivan Lebedeff, and between them they make a lot of trouble for the blonde charmer.

Mae West bests them in the end, however, and when she does Cavanagh returns to tell her that he has loved her all the time.

Sam Fain and Irving Kahal composed the popular tunes for "Goin' to Town," two of which you will find hard to forget; they are "Love Is Love" and "He's a Bad Man." And Mae West extends her repertoire with an operatic selection from "Samson Delilah," which astounded society and delighted the audience.

Cavanagh, who has been seen on the screen before, turns in a faultless performance opposite Miss West. Others of the cast include Monroe Owsley, Fred Kohler, Sr., Marjorie Gateson, Gilbert Emery and Grant Withers.

The dialogue of "Goin' to Town," written by Miss West, fairly bristles with the brilliant Westicisms that made her first pictures so delightful. You'll enjoy the picture, so waste no time in going to see it.

Some Of The Screen Attractions At Local Theaters This Week

In his latest starring comedy, "Life Begins at 40," Will Rogers interprets a double fisted, tender hearted country editor who sends his enemies down in a gale of mirth. This fun picture is at the Capitol Thursday and Friday.

Wheeler and Woolsey, genial dispensers of sorrow and emissaries of joy cavort gaily in their new laugh film, "The Nitwits," melodically assisted by Betty Grable, at the Paramount Thursday and Friday. On the stage, Mrs. Harry W. Rice will present her pupils in "Novelties of 1935." It's a 45-minute song and dance revue.

Mae West is "doing 'em wrong" in modern style in her latest picture "Goin' To Town," at the Paramount theater today and Monday. Mae crashes society, struts right into the best homes and dares them to throw her out. And just wait until you hear her sing grand opera.

"Dracula" was just a sissie compared to "The Werewolf of London," an amazingly realistic story of a human being, a famous doctor, who terrorized a city of seven million people by slowly turning into a wolf. This supreme shocker plays at the Capitol today with Henry Hull, Warner Oland and Valerie Hobson starred.

Over the border into the sun-kissed Mexican paradise of girls, laughter and song goes Dolores Del Rio and a score more of Hollywood's favorites, including Pat O'Brien, Edward Everett Horton and Glenda Farrell, in "In Caliente," Warner Brothers' gayest musical. It's at the Paramount Tuesday and Wednesday. Also "March of Time."

Screen Life In Hollywood

By Hubbard Keavy

HOLLYWOOD.—This abbreviated course in Do's and Don't's in Hollywood presents six examples of one kind and a half dozen of another. We concern ourselves today only with the female of the acting species.

Anna won some kind of contest. She thought that the way to get on in pictures was to "vamp" every man she met. Silly kid, she annoyed directors no end, who refused to have her in their pictures. Her best friends tried to tell her, but she didn't catch on. Now Anna doesn't work here any more. . . .

Joan was a happy-go-lucky gum-chewer whom everyone immediately liked. But as for going places in the cinema, you didn't hand her much—at first. After you got to know her a little better, you changed your mind because in addition to her long stage experience, she had a remarkable spirit of determination beneath her airy exterior. Blondell is the last name.

Too Much Mother

Jane's mother insisted that Janie should be playing star parts, not bits at $50 weekly. Jane's mother got in everyone's hair. Too much mother cost Jane her contract.

Jean came here with no success behind her, but she showed good sense. She dressed sensibly, talked sensibly, and acted sensibly, most important, she had ability which wasn't long in being uncovered. That's enough to say about Jean Muir.

Betty was a neat trick, but she giggled too much—and before long she became known as Brainless Betty. Word got around. . . .

Katharine, a little misguided at first, became a show-off. Wore overall and rode in trucks and made ridiculous statements. But the Hepburn girl came through because she has the right stuff.

Alice didn't mind her caloric P's and Q's. That's enough of Alice.

Minds P's And Q's

Another Alice minded all her P's and Q's, sang sweetly, did as she was told. Being an especially attractive blonde helped Alice Faye also.

Weird Film Plays Today At Capitol

'Werewolf Of London', Starring Henry Hull, Is Real Thriller

THE most difficult task ever given the makeup department at Universal studios was that of turning Henry Hull from a man into a wolf in "Werewolf of London," which comes to the Capitol theater today.

The difficulty is that Hull changes gradually from man to wolf and from wolf back to man. This gradual transition made it necessary to create a series of makeups, each of which was slightly more completely wolf-like than the other. Finally the complete wolk makeup was donned and Hull was the wolf.

In this story, Henry Hull plays the role of an English scientist who is bitten by a werewolf while in the mountains of Tibet. According to legend, those thus bitten turn into wolves during the full of the moon each month. This is what happens to Hull when he gets back in England.

But before he reaches the actual transformation point, hair begins to grow in great abudance on Hull's face and hands. Even the palms of his hands become covered with hair. He is shown desperately shaving the palms of his hands in an effort to conceal from his wife what is happening to him. The makeup artists had to keep putting this hair back on, and making it gradually thicker as the transition point arrived. Naturally, the facial features had to be changed and the nose gradually made pointed, the teeth made into fangs and the ears changed to the pointed ones of the wolf. But it had to be done by easy stages.

In the closing scene of the film came the hardest work for the makeup artists. Hull is in the form of a wolf. He tries to kill his wife and is shot. He is shown lying on the ground—just a wolf. Then very gradually we see him change into Hull, the man. That was the most ticklish bit of work both the makeup men and the cameraman had to do in the entire film.

Mae West Goes Modern In Latest Film, 'Goin' To Town'

Music, Wise Cracks Fill New Picture

Hilarious Story Of Blonde Star's Adventures At Paramount

As a girl who knows what she wants and thrives on opposition, the new and modern Mae West returns to the screen in Paramount's "Goin' to Town," now at the Paramount theater. The blonde star's new vehicle tops all her previous efforts for comedy, intrigue and vocal efforts.

Glittering arrayed in the styles of 1935, Mae West plays a cattle baron's widow with money to burn and warm affections. And to get her man she transports herself from a small midwestern mining town to Buenos Aires and Southampton, and through a series of gay and hectic adventures.

Paul Cavanagh, playing a handsome Englishman, is the man. When Mae West discovers that beauty, wealth and racing stables can't get him, she decides to become a lady, in the society manner.

With her characteristic directness and brevity sets about acquiring manners and a background. But there is a rival, Marjorie Gateson, and a number of fortune hunters, including Ivan Lebedeff, and between them they make a lot of trouble for the blonde charmer.

Mae West bests them in the end, however, and when she does Cavanagh returns to tell her that he has loved her all the time.

Sam Fain and Irving Kahal composed the popular tunes for "Goin' to Town," two of which you will find hard to forget; they are "Love Is Love" and "He's a Bad Man." And Mae West extends her repertoire with an operatic selection from "Samson Delilah," which astounded society and delighted the audience.

Cavanagh, who has been seen on the screen before, turns in a faultless performance opposite Miss West. Others of the cast include Monroe Owsley, Fred Kohler, Sr., Marjorie Gateson, Gilbert Emery and Grant Withers.

The dialogue of "Goin' to Town," written by Miss West, fairly bristles with the brilliant Westicisms that made her first pictures so delightful. You'll enjoy the picture, so waste no time in going to see it.

Some Of The Screen Attractions At Local Theaters This Week

In his latest starring comedy, "Life Begins at 40," Will Rogers interprets a double fisted, tender hearted country editor who sends his enemies down in a gale of mirth. This fun picture is at the Capitol Thursday and Friday.

Wheeler and Woolsey, genial dispensers of sorrow and emissaries of joy cavort gaily in their new laugh film, "The Nitwits," melodically assisted by Betty Grable, at the Paramount Thursday and Friday. On the stage, Mrs. Harry W. Rice will present her pupils in "Novelties of 1935." It's a 45-minute song and dance revue.

Mae West is "doing 'em wrong" in modern style in her latest picture "Goin' To Town," at the Paramount theater today and Monday. Mae crashes society, struts right into the best homes and dares them to throw her out. And just wait until you hear her sing grand opera.

"Dracula" was just a sissie compared to "The Werewolf of London," an amazingly realistic story of a human being, a famous doctor, who terrorized a city of seven million people by slowly turning into a wolf. This supreme shocker plays at the Capitol today with Henry Hull, Warner Oland and Valerie Hobson starred.

Over the border into the sun-kissed Mexican paradise of girls, laughter and song goes Dolores Del Rio and a score more of Hollywood's favorites, including Pat O'Brien, Edward Everett Horton and Glenda Farrell, in "In Caliente," Warner Brothers' gayest musical. It's at the Paramount Tuesday and Wednesday. Also "March of Time."

Screen Life In Hollywood

By Hubbard Keavy

HOLLYWOOD.—This abbreviated course in Do's and Don't's in Hollywood presents six examples of one kind and a half dozen of another. We concern ourselves today only with the female of the acting species.

Anna won some kind of contest. She thought that the way to get on in pictures was to "vamp" every man she met. Silly kid, she annoyed directors no end, who refused to have her in their pictures. Her best friends tried to tell her, but she didn't catch on. Now Anna doesn't work here any more. . . .

Joan was a happy-go-lucky gum-chewer whom everyone immediately liked. But as for going places in the cinema, you didn't hand her much—at first. After you got to know her a little better, you changed your mind because in addition to her long stage experience, she had a remarkable spirit of determination beneath her airy exterior. Blondell is the last name.

PRIMOS STRESSES VALUE OF BREAD

Electrik Maid Shop's Owner Says Baker Lessens Cares Of The Day

"Your baker, willingly and gladly, works while you sleep. His labors lessen the cares of your day—greatly lightens the work in home and restaurant kitchens. If your baker did not perform this great service, your family's diet might easily become unbalanced because of a lack of that vital essential which good bread provides—food-energy."

This was the statement of G. K. Primos, owner and operator of the Electrik Maid Bake Shop, 404 DeSiard street. Mr. Primos' statement was made in connection with an educational campaign being conducted in the Morning World and News-Star by a group of leading local bakers. The campaign locally blends into a national campaign which familiarizes the public with the importance of bread in the diet and which is endorsed by the highest authority on nutrition as related to health—the committee on foods of the American Medical association.

"Your baker makes the work of serving delicious, economic meals an easy task, and adds greatly to the pleasure of that task," Mr. Primos said. "He gives you many hours of leisure, or hours for pursuits outside the kitchen.

"He is your unfailing source of the completely wholesome food—bread, an inexpensive food with a high nutritive value.

"Abundant vitality demands endurance energy, and bread supplies this energy. Vitality is enhanced by proper diet, and bread is our outstanding source of the largest single need in the balanced diet—food-energy.

"Your baker works while you sleep—so that you may live a happier, healthier life."

2 MEN NABBED IN WEST MONROE WHISKY RAIDS

Officers Wimberly and Seeley of the state bureau of investigation, assisted by members of the sheriff's force and West Monroe police department made several liquor raids in West Monroe Saturday, confiscating a small quantity of illegal whisky and placing two men under arrest.

A quart of illegal liquor was found in the home of Roy Jordan, 1004 Montgomery street, and Jordan was placed under arrest.

Several bottles each containing a small quantity of untaxed intoxicants were found at the home of Charles Walker, Ransom addition, and he also was arrested.

Several other raids failed to net any seizure or arrests.

L. T. Hastings, Pastor

The Pastor and Mrs. Hasting will be home for the services Sunday. They arrived late Thursday from a trip into several states. They attended the graduation of their son, Brownlow, who complete his work at Mars Hill junior college, Mars Hill, N. C. After that, they visited with Brother Hastings' parents and other relatives of both the pastor and Mrs. Hastings in Tennessee. The pastor will bring two special messages Sunday. Attendance upon all the services is being stressed in all the organizations. It will be the first time the pastor has preached in the new tabernacle auditorium and it is expected that there will be a record crowd to hear him. Mrs. Hastings will teach her class of women Sunday morning. They are striving for a very large representation in this class. The pastor will teach the Major Memorial class, which now meets on the platform of the tabernacle auditorium. They had a record attendance last Sunday, with 53 present. Fully that number is expected again Sunday. There are a goodly number of out-of-town visitors in the community at this season. We extend a most cordial invitation for these guests to be present in our services. The new auditorium is the coolest place in town and the services will be pleasing and helpful. Other visitors are always welcome. Members are expected to attend in great number. The special number by the choir Sunday will be selected from the hymn book, due to the fact that no choir rehearsal was held this week. Members are earnestly urged to be in their places. Others who plan to sing during the summer are also urged to be in the choir for both morning and evening services. The Vacation Bible school will continue through the coming week. Others may be registered Monday, but after that there will be no further registration. This is possible since much of the work taken up on Monday will be new. A picture of the school will be taken Wednesday and the principal and faculty are very anxious to have the largest possible number for the picture. Boys and girls are urged to stay through. Parents are urged to cooperate with the school by keeping their boys and girls coming.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST

Sunday service at 11 a.m. Sunday school 9:30 a.m. Wednesday evening testimony meeting 8 o'clock. Reading room, 1108 Ouachita Bank building, open daily except Sundays and holidays, 1 to 5 p.m. The public is welcome to all services and the use of the reading room. "God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the lesson sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, June 16. Among the citations which comprise the lesson sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them. The Lord preserveth all them that love him." (Ps. 145). The lesson sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine mind that made man maintains his own image and likeness. All that really exists is the divine mind and its idea, and in this mind the entire being is found harmonious and eternal. The straight and narrow way is to see and acknowledge this fact, yield to this power, and follow the leadings of truth." (p. 151).

In the July issue of the American Magazine a young man writes to the editor asking for something to believe. He said, "I want in the worst way to believe in something and, frankly, I don't." Now, isn't that a tragic state of affairs, especially in the life of youth, who are just beginning? And yet there are many in his position today, believing in nothing. The pastor is going to speak on this subject Sunday morning for the benefit of those locally who may feel the same way about life. His subject will be "In What Do I Believe?" At the evening worship service the pastor will speak on the subject "Discipleship." The time schedule for the day will be: Church school at 9:30 a.m.; morning worship at 10:50; youth expanded session at 6:30 p.m.; evening worship at 8 o'clock.

CHURCH OF THE NAZERENE

At the Sunday school hour, 9:45 a. m., Mr. S. P. Quigley, the superintendent, has arranged for the cradle roll department to render an interesting program. Mrs. Wallace Joiner will have charge. All mothers and their babies are requested to be present. Preaching at 11 a. m., and 7:45 p. m. Subjects: "Preparing for a Revival" and "Clay in the Potter's Hands." The intermediate N. Y. P. S. will meet at 6 p. m., with Miss Madge Kelly in charge. The senior N. Y. P. S. will meet at 6:30 p. m., with Mrs. S. P. Quiggley directing. Mrs W. M. S. meets each Monday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Prayer meetings each Wednesday evening at 7:45. The public is invited to attend all of these services.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Corner Catalpa and Grammont Sts.
Ernest D. Holloway, Minister

Regular services will be held in all departments of the church Sunday. Church school begins at 9:45 a.m., including primary, intermediate, junior and young people's departments. Bible class for adult ladies meets in the church. The Frank P. Stubbs Memorial Bible class for men meets in Paramount theater at 9:45 o'clock. Dr. Charles E. Kenney will be the speaker. All are cordially invited to attend these services.

The regular morning church service will be held at 11 o'clock. The pastor will speak on the subject, "Entering Into Life: What must I do to inherit eternal life?" The evening service will begin at 6 o'clock. The pastor's subject will be, "Enduring Hardness." You are earnestly invited to join with us in fellowship and worship of God at these services of the church.

HARVEY COUCH MAKES INSPECTION TRIP HERE

Harvey C. Couch, president of the Louisiana Power and Light company and other associated companies, paid a brief trip of inspection here Friday, leaving later for Mississippi where he inspected the Mississippi Power and Light company.

He stated that he was well pleased with the business outlook of his company here and assured that indications are that steady progress is being made.

The program of extension of lines to tap existing power and light lines in the Monroe area will be carried on, he said, with an effort to bring these facilities to innumerable farm homes.

Already four or five such extensions have been completed and many more of similar nature are in prospect, Mr. Couch assured.

PARISH GAS TAX FIGURES SHOWN

Hunt Reveals $20,939.60 Collected Here In Four-Month Period

The Ouachita parish one-cent tax on gasoline for January, February, March and April of this year totaled $20,939.60, it was learned yesterday from C. A. Hunt, collector of the tax.

The amount of gasoline sold in the parish in the four-month period was 245 freight car loads, 16,695 miscellaneous gallons, and 43,095 gallons delivered in truck loads by 55 trucks having permits, or a total of 2,093,960 gallons.

Mr. Hunt computed the average daily consumption of gasoline in the parish at 17,449 gallons.

He reported that all companies or corporations handling bulk gasoline in the parish, and all independent gasoline operators, are cooperating with him by paying the tax promptly.

"There have been only a few violations of the gas tax ordinance, and they have been caused by operators being unfamiliar with the ordinance, which requires all trucking companies to secure a permit before unloading gasoline in the parish, and which requires all persons buying gasoline from trucks ascertaining that the operator of the truck has a permit issued by Mr. Hunt or Mrs. E. H. Hill secretary of the parish police jury," it was stated.

Electrik Maid Shop's Owner Says Baker Lessens Cares Of The Day

"Your baker, willingly and gladly, works while you sleep. His labors lessen the cares of your day—greatly lightens the work in home and restaurant kitchens. If your baker did not perform this great service, your family's diet might easily become unbalanced because of a lack of that vital essential which good bread provides—food-energy."

This was the statement of G. K. Primos, owner and operator of the Electrik Maid Bake Shop, 404 DeSiard street. Mr. Primos' statement was made in connection with an educational campaign being conducted in the Morning World and News-Star by a group of leading local bakers. The campaign locally blends into a national campaign which familiarizes the public with the importance of bread in the diet and which is endorsed by the highest authority on nutrition as related to health—the committee on foods of the American Medical association.

"Your baker makes the work of serving delicious, economic meals an easy task, and adds greatly to the pleasure of that task," Mr. Primos said. "He gives you many hours of leisure, or hours for pursuits outside the kitchen.

"He is your unfailing source of the completely wholesome food—bread, an inexpensive food with a high nutritive value.

"Abundant vitality demands endurance energy, and bread supplies this energy. Vitality is enhanced by proper diet, and bread is our outstanding source of the largest single need in the balanced diet—food-energy.

"Your baker works while you sleep—so that you may live a happier, healthier life."

2 MEN NABBED IN WEST MONROE WHISKY RAIDS

Officers Wimberly and Seeley of the state bureau of investigation, assisted by members of the sheriff's force and West Monroe police department made several liquor raids in West Monroe Saturday, confiscating a small quantity of illegal whisky and placing two men under arrest.

A quart of illegal liquor was found in the home of Roy Jordan, 1004 Montgomery street, and Jordan was placed under arrest.

Several bottles each containing a small quantity of untaxed intoxicants were found at the home of Charles Walker, Ransom addition, and he also was arrested.

Several other raids failed to net any seizure or arrests.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
Corner St. John and Grammont
L. T. Hastings, Pastor

The Pastor and Mrs. Hasting will be home for the services Sunday. They arrived late Thursday from a trip into several states. They attended the graduation of their son, Brownlow, who complete his work at Mars Hill junior college, Mars Hill, N. C. After that, they visited with Brother Hastings' parents and other relatives of both the pastor and Mrs. Hastings in Tennessee. The pastor will bring two special messages Sunday. Attendance upon all the services is being stressed in all the organizations. It will be the first time the pastor has preached in the new tabernacle auditorium and it is expected that there will be a record crowd to hear him. Mrs. Hastings will teach her class of women Sunday morning. They are striving for a very large representation in this class. The pastor will teach the Major Memorial class, which now meets on the platform of the tabernacle auditorium. They had a record attendance last Sunday, with 53 present. Fully that number is expected again Sunday. There are a goodly number of out-of-town visitors in the community at this season. We extend a most cordial invitation for these guests to be present in our services. The new auditorium is the coolest place in town and the services will be pleasing and helpful. Other visitors are always welcome. Members are expected to attend in great number. The special number by the choir Sunday will be selected from the hymn book, due to the fact that no choir rehearsal was held this week. Members are earnestly urged to be in their places. Others who plan to sing during the summer are also urged to be in the choir for both morning and evening services. The Vacation Bible school will continue through the coming week. Others may be registered Monday, but after that there will be no further registration. This is possible since much of the work taken up on Monday will be new. A picture of the school will be taken Wednesday and the principal and faculty are very anxious to have the largest possible number for the picture. Boys and girls are urged to stay through. Parents are urged to cooperate with the school by keeping their boys and girls coming.

Sunday service at 11 a.m. Sunday school 9:30 a.m. Wednesday evening testimony meeting 8 o'clock. Reading room, 1108 Ouachita Bank building, open daily except Sundays and holidays, 1 to 5 p.m. The public is welcome to all services and the use of the reading room. "God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the lesson sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, June 16. Among the citations which comprise the lesson sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them. The Lord preserveth all them that love him." (Ps. 145). The lesson sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine mind that made man maintains his own image and likeness. All that really exists is the divine mind and its idea, and in this mind the entire being is found harmonious and eternal. The straight and narrow way is to see and acknowledge this fact, yield to this power, and follow the leadings of truth." (p. 151).

Services on Sunday are at 11 a.m. and 745 p.m. In the absence of our pastor, who is conducting a revival in Arcadia, our pulpit will be filled by Rev. W. H. Giles from Bastrop at the morning hour, and by our presiding elder, Rev. H. L. Johns, at the evening hour. We are very fortunate to secure the service of these ministers and urge every member to show their appreciation by attending both services on Sunday. Church school meets every Sunday morning. Classes in the children's division meet promptly at 9:30 and in other departments at 9:45. Epworth league meets at the church every Sunday evening at 7 p.m. The Woman's Missionary society will meet at the church on Tuesday for the monthly program meeting, with circle 6 in charge. At the mid-week prayer services on Wednesday evening at 7:30, there will be a continuation of series of discussions on evangelism conducted by the pastor.

GRACE CHURCH
Fourth and Glenmar Streets
Edward Farren Hayward, Rector

Services for Trinity Sunday, the octave of Whitsunday, are as follows: The Holy Eucharist, 7:30 a.m.; church school, 9:30 a.m.; choral Eucharist and sermon, 11 a.m.; evensong and sermon at S. David's Rayville, 4:30 p. m. Services during the week: Monday, St. Barnabas Day (transferred from June 11), Holy Eucharist, 7:30 a. m.; Thursday after Trinity Sunday is Corpus Christi, celebration of the Holy Eucharist at 9 a. m.; Saturday, St. Alban's Day (The Proto-Martyr of England, 303 A. D.,) The Holy Eucharist at 7:30 a. m. The Catholic faith is this: That we worshop One God in Trinity and Trinity in Unity. "The Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is all one; the Glory equal, the Majecty co-eternal." "The Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Ghost is God." "And yet there are not three gods; but one God." Illustrations: the sun (heat, light and actinism), space (length, breadth and height), water (solid, liquid and gas). The Feast of the Holy Trinity (Octave of Pentecost) commemorates the consumation of God's saving work, and the perfect revelation to the church of the three persons in one God as the sole object of adoration. On the Feast of the Blessed Trinity all solemn subjects of belief are gathered into one act of worship, as the church militant looks through the door that is opened in Heaven, and bows down in adoration with the church triumphant, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord, God, Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come."

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH
3400 Lee Avenue
Roger M. Baxter, Pastor

The church closed a fine B. T. U. training school this week and looks forward to being able to do more in that way for the cause of the Lord. A fine group of people have taken some work that will help them be better workers for the Lord. There is just one more week after this one until the meeting the Baptist churches of Monroe are sponsoring will begin. Rev. A. D. Muse, the evangelist, will be with us on June 23, the fourth Sunday. Announcements will be made next week as to where he will place his tent the first time. The services of the church will be as follows: Bible school at 9:45 a.m.; morning worship at 10:50, B. T. U. at 6:45, evening service at 8. Come worship with us.

In the July issue of the American Magazine a young man writes to the editor asking for something to believe. He said, "I want in the worst way to believe in something and, frankly, I don't." Now, isn't that a tragic state of affairs, especially in the life of youth, who are just beginning? And yet there are many in his position today, believing in nothing. The pastor is going to speak on this subject Sunday morning for the benefit of those locally who may feel the same way about life. His subject will be "In What Do I Believe?" At the evening worship service the pastor will speak on the subject "Discipleship." The time schedule for the day will be: Church school at 9:30 a.m.; morning worship at 10:50; youth expanded session at 6:30 p.m.; evening worship at 8 o'clock.

YANKEES RALLY IN NINTH TO BEAT WHITE SOX, 5-3

Overthrow At Home Gives Yanks Victory In Series Opener

CHICAGO, June 15.—(AP)—A two-run rally in the ninth, in which Luke Appling's error played an important part, gave the New York Yankees a 5 to 3 decision over the Chicago White Sox today as the two leading teams in the American league met in the first of their five-game series.

Earl Combs

In handing Silent John Whitehead his third defeat of the season as compared to eight victories, the Yanks increased their lead over the Chicagoans to four and one-half games. Whitehead kept the Yanks 14 hits fairly well spaced but Fordham Johnny Murphy, making his first start of the year, was even more effective, holding Jimmy Dykes' men to nine hits.

With the score tied at three-all and one out in the ninth, Earl Combs crashed through with a single. Red Rolfe's drive to center went for a double, when Al Simmons, trying for a shoe-string catch, let the ball bounce off his shins. He retrieved the ball in time for a perfect relay to the plate but Appling, taking the throw from Simmons, threw high over Catcher Mervyn Shea's head and not only Combs but Rolfe also scored.

INDIANS BEAT RED SOX

CLEVELAND, June 15.—(AP)—Although Boston collected 17 hits off two Tribe hurlers, the Indians included home runs by Berger and Hale among their even dozen bingles today to defeat the Red Sox, 9 to 7, and keep in the American league's first division.

Wes Ferrell hurled the full route for the Red Sox. Winegarner started for the Indians but was replaced by Brown after two were out in Boston's half of the sixth.

TIGERS WIN PAIR

DETROIT, June 15.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers scored a double-barrelled triumph over Philadelphia today in a twin bill that opened the Athletics' current stand. The Bengals took the first to 1 and then ran up a count of 13 to 3 in the afterpiece.

The Tigers were outhit 9 to 8 in the first opener, but Elden Auker kept the visitors' hits scattered and two home runs helped fatten Detroit's tally. Hank Greenberg drove out his 15th circuit-bagger of the season in the second inning of the first game to go with a tie with Roy Johnson for home run honors. Charley Gehringer followed through with a circuit smash into the park when two were on in the eighth.

The Bengals pounded Johnny Mar-

AS BRADDOCK WON WORLD TITLE IN UPSET OF THE CENTURY

DIXIE GOLF MEET STARTS TUESDAY

Freddie Haas On Hand To Defend Southern Title At Richmond

RICHMOND, Va., June 15.—(AP)—Dixie's greatest golfing prize, the southern amateur championship, dangled before the eyes of many hopefuls tonight as they gathered for next week's test over the 6,708-yard James river course of the Country club of Virginia.

Despite lengthening of the course, the amateur record of par 72, held by Billy Howell of Richmond, has been equalled by Earl Stokes of Louisville, in a practice round. Fred Haas of New Orleans, the defending titleholder, turned in a 73 in his first effort.

Entries probably will not close until Monday noon, but already a fast field is assured. The qualifying play will begin Tuesday morning.

From the canebrakes of Louisiana to the tobacco fields of the Old Dominion the south sent its top-notchers. Charlie Yates of Atlanta, former intercollegiate champion and one of the best shotmakers in amateur ranks, is one of the few who will be missing.

Well liked before the battle is Sam Perry of Birmingham, a former champion, who will be hard to whip if hitting his shots with his usual machine-like precision.

Scudday Horner of Louisville, who was Tennessee champion last year, Berrien Moore, Crawford Rainwater and Charles Rainwater of Atlanta, Gene Vinson of Meridian, Miss., and Billy Howell of Richmond, all have their supporters.

The 32 players who survive the qualifying play Tuesday and Wednesday, will get their first match competition Thursday. Third and fourth rounds will be played Friday with the 36-hole finals Saturday.

THAT UPSET

Jimmy Braddock's surprising victory over Max Baer Thursday night completed the most amazing cycle in boxing history. A preliminary "boy" a year ago, Braddock got more breaks in 12 months than he could reasonably expect in his entire career.

Although Jimmy was the victim of hard luck for awhile, he hardly thought his fortunes would do such an abrupt about-face. It's a long jump from the relief roles to the heavyweight championship, with all its financial rewards.

One of the surprising things about the fight was that the odds against Braddock were 10 to 1. It's true that he was thought a second-rater and all that, but reports from the two training camps should have warned the Baer backers away from those long odds. Every story from Baer's camp told of Max's lackadaisical attitude toward the bout, and the resultant clowning through his daily training periods. On the other hand, Braddock was deadly serious about the whole business and all the experts agreed that he was in the pink of condition. There's no question but that Baer should have been the big favorite, and he probably would be again if they met next month, but certainly 10 to 1 in the champion's favor was too much.

Edward J. Neil, Associated Press sports writer who has followed Braddock throughout his entire career, was one of the few experts who gave the Irishman a chance. Neil, while not picking Braddock outright, told just how Jimmy would beat Baer, IF he did. He said the challenger would win the title if he could weather Baer's early attack because Braddock would be the stronger finisher of the two.

Just how long Braddock will hold the crown is something else again. His stock has taken a big climb in fistic circles but it's still debatable whether or not he's the best heavyweight of the present crop. If he doesn't fight again until next year, he'll make more dough than he ever dreamed of earning. He's learned what it means to be broke and he'll salt away a few of those shekels as insurance against any relief roles in the future.

Maybe it's not the year for favorites, Lefty Gomez, Schoolboy Rowe, Dizzy Dean and others of the big shots in baseball haven't been so impressive this year. And yesterday Glenn Cunningham lost a mile race and Slats Hardin was beaten in his 440 specialty. Perhaps the long shot boys are going to get a break after all.

PLAYING MARBLES

If you think you couldn't get a kick out of a game of marbles, you should have attended the finals in the Northeast Louisiana tournament here yesterday. Ask the gent who saw 'em.

Eleven of the best shooters in the entire section gathered at Central Grammar school to fight it out for a trip to Guilfport and other prizes, and it was a real battle. A number of the spectators remained for four hours, with an hour off for lunch, to see 'em through.

Several runs of seven straight were made, and that provided one of the big thrills. Then, too, it's quite a sight to watch two youngsters, each with six marbles to his credit, plunking away at that lone pee-wee in the middle of a 10-foot ring.

The marble tournament attracted an entry list of about three thousand youngsters under 15 years of age. The News-Star-World feels that it was a big success, and hopes the kids got as much fun out of playing in the tourney as we did in watching those final games.

THE RUN COUNTS

"Will you please answer the following baseball problem in your column," writes C. M. Bone, of Clayton. "Team A has men on first and third, with two out and a double steal is attempted. The runner going to second is thrown out but the man coming home scores before the putout. Does the run count? As official scorer, I counted the run, but it was contested."

You're right. The runner on first is sent down in an effort to score the man from third, even at the cost of an out. If the runner crossed the plate before the man on first was tagged out or run down, the run counts. The same thing would apply, for instance, to a batter who singles with a man on third, scoring the runner but himself getting put out in an attempt to stretch the hit into a double.

BRADDOCK TURNS DOWN $200,000 TO FIGHT GERMAN

Berlin Promoter Offers Big Sum For Battle With Schmeling

By Eddie Brietz
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Still a bit delirious over their good fortune, Jimmy Braddock, new world's heavyweight champion, and Joe Gould, his peppery manager, bustled about today and tried to discover what the future holds in the way of good hard dollars.

Just to prove he is a big time fight manager at last, Gould who swears he hasn't closed his eyes since Braddock won Max Baer's title, turned down a $200,000 offer to meet Max Schmeling in Germany as coolly as if he were picking up a 50-cent luncheon check.

Later he announced he is arranging to take Jimmy to England and Ireland in August for a series of exhibitions.

All day long the offers poured in. They want Braddock's endorsement for this and that. They want him on the stage, on the radio, for fights, exhibitions, for personal appearances and for a thousand and one other things.

"I'm still in a daze," said Gould, "and Jimmy can't believe it yet. It looks like a $150,000 year for him even if he doesn't fight."

The Schmeling offer came from Fred Kirsch, who authorized Jimmy Bronson, his American representative to offer Braddock a fight with the German champion in the Olympic stadium in Berlin in September.

"Nothing doing," Gould told Bronson. "We're not defending this title until next summer, and then it will be in New York for Madison Square Garden. We're under contract to the Garden and couldn't fight for any other promoters first if we wanted to, which we don't."

England and Ireland are all worked up over the Irishman's capturing the heavyweight crown and ten transatlantic telephone calls have been received from promoters in Dublin, London and Manchester, England, for personal appearances. Manchester is the home town of Jimmy's father.

"I told them to put their offers in writing," Gould said. "If they are acceptable we'll go across in the late summer or fall."

George Manteris Wins First Prize In Prize Fight Letter Contest

George Manteris, former Neville High school athlete who now is attending Tulane university, won first prize of $5 in the Ross-McLarnin letter contest, sponsored by the Capitol theater and News-Star—World, it was announced by the judges yesterday.

Second and third prizes of $2.50 each were won by Karl Swanke, Alvis hotel, and M. Michael, 607 Alexander street.

Fifteen pairs of guest tickets to the Capitol also were awarded. These will be mailed to the winners.

After viewing the fight picture at the Capitol Manteris wrote:

"The decision given Ross was correct, because aggressiveness and clean punches go a long way in rendering a decision. Ross outclassed McLarnin in both. He forced most of the fight, had his left hook and uppercut working to perfection and his straight right shook McLarnin repeatedly. It was close, but I think the judges were right."

Winners of the cash prizes get them from the sports editor of the World after 1 o'clock Monday afternoon.

GIANTS SCORE 3 RUNS IN 8TH TO NOSE OUT CARDS

League Leaders Stage Late Rally To Win First Of Series, 7-5

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Apparently beaten going into the eighth inning, where they found themselves trailing by one run and Bill Hallahan pitching fine ball, the New York Giants staged a three-run uprising to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 7 to 5 in the opening game of the series today.

Allyn Stout

The victory, achieved despite eleven hits by the Cards, including home runs by Jack Rothrock and Jimmy Collins, boosted the Giants' lead over the second-place Pirates, who lost to the Phillies, to four and one-half games and to five games over the third-place world champions.

Mark Koenig was the spearhead of the eighth-inning rally. Batting for Al Smith, the third of the four Giant hurlers to see service, the veteran infielder cracked out a single with the bases loaded. Hank Leiber and Travis Jackson scored, and when Joe Medwick's throw bounced over Delancey's head, Gus Mancuso also crossed the plate.

The Cards threatened in the ninth, however, but with men on first and third and only one out, Allyn Stout forced Delancey to hit into a double play. Smith received credit for the victory.

Foster's Cry Of Quitting Recalls Loyalty Of Manager And Fighter

By John J. Romano

Pop Foster is accused of being a poor sport because he did not accept the decision depriving Jimmy McLarnin of the world's welterweight title in good grace. Pop protested the award in favor of Barney Ross in heated words and declared Jimmy would retire rather than risk another such defeat to be charged against his fighter.

Foster was correct when he stated that the 147-pound class is barren of good fighters. Ross is the only one calculated to draw a decent size purse and Barney is out as far as Pop is concerned. Chicago would be the logical place to hold a fourth meeting between the pair and as that is Barney's home town, Pop could not expect any the best of it if the issue is drawn as fine as it was in their other three meetings.

The Lean Days

Foster is roundly criticized because he is supposed to know better. As one manager put it, "Why worry about what happens to one fighter in the ring? After he has passed out there are others to take his place and you can make up what you lost on the other fighter." That is the usual line of reasoning employed by the professional fight manager.

The party who spoke his piece about Foster did not take into consideration the lean years Pop and Jimmy toiled together. The days when the pocketbook was empty and they baited hooks and fished off Oakland piers to provide for a meal. He did not know of the two years Jimmy was sick with a stomach disorder and lived on greens until the trouble was corrected or the many discouragements when they could not get fights and Jimmy wanted to quit and go to work. The shrewd Foster suggested that they purchase a battered "flivver" and tour the big cities of this country before calling it "quits."

Two months later they visited a gym in Detroit to see Louis Kid Kaplan at work. A bystander remarked, "The guy who licks that fellow will be the next champion of the world!" It proved to be the prod reawakening the latent fighting spirit of the discouraged Irish fighter. Jimmy begged Pop to get a match with Kaplan. The result is fistic history. Kaplan was a knockout victim and McLarnin went on to provide more thrills than any little fellow of his time.

Blames Foster's Nature

A personal friend of Barney Ross, not directly connected with the boxing game and one who has made good money in a professional capacity for the champion, gave his version of the decision and his opinion why it was decided against McLarnin.

"I would naturally be inclined to favor Ross. When the bell ended the fight I was almost certain McLarnin would be rewarded for his fine efforts. It was to close to take the title from Jimmy. No matter what my personal feelings were in the matter I was surprised when it went the other way.

"Pop Foster is the reason why I think the title changed hands. McLarnin is well liked. He gave the fans a run for their money every time he entered the ring. The same goes for Ross. The reason Barney is better liked is because his managers are so different than Foster. Plan and Winch will step up and lay the money on the line to make friends. Any time Foster takes a nickel out of his pocket it will be rusted from long tenancy in his pocket.

"When you do business with Foster you are doing business with a cold, clammy fish. He will sit and listen to any proposition offered. After you get through talking, he will state his terms in a 'take it or leave it' tone. Plan and Winch are different. Tell them what you will give for Barney's services and if they do not think you can draw the money to make the venture a paying one, they will advise you to that effect. If they insist on gambling on their figures they have but to put it down in writing and the rest is up to the promoter.

"Foster has driven hard bargains for the past six years. He has gotten every cent the gate would bear. What did he expect when the fight was as close as it was? It was only natural for the officials to lean the other way! I think they voted honestly even though I thought McLarnin won. Pop is not 'regular.' Plan and Winch are. That is the only explanation I can offer for the decision."

Pop Always Honest

There is plenty of logic in that explanation. Nevertheless he was doing Foster an injustice. Had he known enough about the professional boxing game and the managers connected with it, he would have given Pop Foster the credit due for his honesty and faith in his charge.

Foster drove hard bargains but no promoter can truthfully say he lost money on a transaction. Neither did he have to worry about a signed contract. Once Foster agreed to terms he kept his word. He had but one fighter and lived for him. He did not bargain with a promoter with the future in mind and another fighter to consider. Pop's heart and soul was wrapped up in Jimmy McLarnin.

Neither has to worry about the future. This assurance proves Foster reckoned wisely and well. Nor did he leave a string of broken promises and unpaid bills in his wake, as did some of the old-timers, long gone now, did.

Pop and Jimmy may be through as fighter and manager. The record they leave behind is a credit to the game and one which those who rely on "pull" and other undercover dealings to advance their fighters would do well to follow.

Overthrow At Home Gives Yanks Victory In Series Opener

CHICAGO, June 15.—(AP)—A two-run rally in the ninth, in which Luke Appling's error played an important part, gave the New York Yankees a 5 to 3 decision over the Chicago White Sox today as the two leading teams in the American league met in the first of their five-game series.

Earl Combs

In handing Silent John Whitehead his third defeat of the season as compared to eight victories, the Yanks increased their lead over the Chicagoans to four and one-half games. Whitehead kept the Yanks 14 hits fairly well spaced but Fordham Johnny Murphy, making his first start of the year, was even more effective, holding Jimmy Dykes' men to nine hits.

With the score tied at three-all and one out in the ninth, Earl Combs crashed through with a single. Red Rolfe's drive to center went for a double, when Al Simmons, trying for a shoe-string catch, let the ball bounce off his shins. He retrieved the ball in time for a perfect relay to the plate but Appling, taking the throw from Simmons, threw high over Catcher Mervyn Shea's head and not only Combs but Rolfe also scored.

INDIANS BEAT RED SOX

CLEVELAND, June 15.—(AP)—Although Boston collected 17 hits off two Tribe hurlers, the Indians included home runs by Berger and Hale among their even dozen bingles today to defeat the Red Sox, 9 to 7, and keep in the American league's first division.

Wes Ferrell hurled the full route for the Red Sox. Winegarner started for the Indians but was replaced by Brown after two were out in Boston's half of the sixth.

TIGERS WIN PAIR

DETROIT, June 15.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers scored a double-barrelled triumph over Philadelphia today in a twin bill that opened the Athletics' Detroit stand. The Bengals took the first to 1 and then ran up a count of 13 to 3 in the afterpiece.

The Tigers were outhit 9 to 8 in the opener, but Elden Auker kept the visitors' hits scattered and two home runs helped fatten Detroit's tally. Hank Greenberg drove out his 15th four-bagger of the season in the second inning of the first game to go into a tie with Roy Johnson for home run honors. Charley Gehringer followed through with a circuit smash inside the park when two were on in the eighth.

AS BRADDOCK WON WORLD TITLE IN UPSET OF THE CENTURY

Freddie Haas On Hand To Defend Southern Title At Richmond

RICHMOND, Va., June 15.—(AP)—Dixie's greatest golfing prize, the southern amateur championship, dangled before the eyes of many hopefuls tonight as they gathered for next week's test over the 6,708-yard James river course of the Country club of Virginia.

Despite lengthening of the course, the amateur record of par 72, held by Billy Howell of Richmond, has been equalled by Earl Stokes of Louisville, in a practice round. Fred Haas of New Orleans, the defending titleholder, turned in a 73 in his first effort.

Entries probably will not close until Monday noon, but already a fast field is assured. The qualifying play will begin Tuesday morning.

From the canebrakes of Louisiana to the tobacco fields of the Old Dominion the south sent its top-notchers. Charlie Yates of Atlanta, former intercollegiate champion and one of the best shotmakers in amateur ranks, is one of the few who will be missing.

Well liked before the battle is Sam Perry of Birmingham, a former champion, who will be hard to whip if hitting his shots with his usual machine-like precision.

Scudday Horner of Louisville, who was Tennessee champion last year, Berrien Moore, Crawford Rainwater and Charles Rainwater of Atlanta, Gene Vinson of Meridian, Miss., and Billy Howell of Richmond, all have their supporters.

The 32 players who survive the qualifying play Tuesday and Wednesday, will get their first match competition Thursday. Third and fourth rounds will be played Friday with the 36-hole finals Saturday.

SPORTS Chatter

BY GEO. V. LOFTON

THAT UPSET

Jimmy Braddock's surprising victory over Max Baer Thursday night completed the most amazing cycle in boxing history. A preliminary "boy" a year ago, Braddock got more breaks in 12 months than he could reasonably expect in his entire career.

Although Jimmy was the victim of hard luck for awhile, he hardly thought his fortunes would do such an abrupt about-face. It's a long jump from the relief roles to the heavyweight championship, with all its financial rewards.

One of the surprising things about the fight was that the odds against Braddock were 10 to 1. It's true that he was thought a second-rater and all that, but reports from the two training camps should have warned the Baer backers away from those long odds. Every story from Baer's camp told of Max's lackadaisical attitude toward the bout, and the resultant clowning through his daily training periods. On the other hand, Braddock was deadly serious about the whole business and all the experts agreed that he was in the pink of condition. There's no question but that Baer should have been the big favorite, and he probably would be again if they met next month, but certainly 10 to 1 in the champion's favor was too much.

Edward J. Neil, Associated Press sports writer who has followed Braddock throughout his entire career, was one of the few experts who gave the Irishman a chance. Neil, while not picking Braddock outright, told just how Jimmy would beat Baer, IF he did. He said the challenger would win the title if he could weather Baer's early attack because Braddock would be the stronger finisher of the two.

Just how long Braddock will hold the crown is something else again. His stock has taken a big climb in fistic circles but it's still debatable whether or not he's the best heavyweight of the present crop. If he doesn't fight again until next year, he'll make more dough than he ever dreamed of earning. He's learned what it means to be broke and he'll salt away a few of those shekels as insurance against any relief roles in the future.

Maybe it's not the year for favorites, Lefty Gomez, Schoolboy Rowe, Dizzy Dean and others of the big shots in baseball haven't been so impressive this year. And yesterday Glenn Cunningham lost a mile race and Slats Hardin was beaten in his 440 specialty. Perhaps the long shot boys are going to get a break after all.

PLAYING MARBLES

If you think you couldn't get a kick out of a game of marbles, you should have attended the finals in the Northeast Louisiana tournament here yesterday. Ask the gent who saw 'em.

Eleven of the best shooters in the entire section gathered at Central Grammar school to fight it out for a trip to Guilfport and other prizes, and it was a real battle. A number of the spectators remained for four hours, with an hour off for lunch, to see 'em through.

Several runs of seven straight were made, and that provided one of the big thrills. Then, too, it's quite a sight to watch two youngsters, each with six marbles to his credit, plunking away at that lone pee-wee in the middle of a 10-foot ring.

The marble tournament attracted an entry list of about three thousand youngsters under 15 years of age. The News-Star-World feels that it was a big success, and hopes the kids got as much fun out of playing in the tourney as we did in watching those final games.

THE RUN COUNTS

"Will you please answer the following baseball problem in your column," writes C. M. Bone, of Clayton. "Team A has men on first and third, with two out and a double steal is attempted. The runner going to second is thrown out but the man coming home scores before the putout. Does the run count? As official scorer, I counted the run, but it was contested."

You're right. The runner on first is sent down in an effort to score the man from third, even at the cost of an out. If the runner crossed the plate before the man on first was tagged out or run down, the run counts. The same thing would apply, for instance, to a batter who singles with a man on third, scoring the runner but himself getting put out in an attempt to stretch the hit into a double.

MUNY GOLFERS PLAY TALLULAH

Inter-City Match To Be Staged At Local Course This Afternoon

Players of the Municipal Golf club enter their third inter-city match of the season today when they tackle the Tallulah Country club contingent in a battle over the Muny course here. The first foursome is scheduled to tee off at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Professional Winnie Cole announced last night that approximately 30 golfers will come here from Tallulah. The match will be the first between a local club and the Madison parish squad this season.

The feature match of the program will be played between Cole and Kenneth Holt, of the Municipal club, and Jimmy Fossick and Joe Halbach of Tallulah.

The following Muny club players have signed up for today's match:

Kenneth Holt, Dr. T. A. Brulte, Art Woodruff, C. S. Foster, W. A. Lovett, Capt. Harry Roberts, J. B. King, C. H. Scranton, Jordan Barton, Bobbie Oliver, Ben Downing, Jr., J. A. Pilcher, G. B. Gaar, F. V. Allison, W. Sherrard, L. E. Ducote, R. Schwantis, M. Cannon, P. E. Weldon, Vance Rhodes, D. Stewart, F. E. Hundley, John Holmes, A. L. Morgan, R. B. Wofford, Miss Elizabeth Kennedy and Miss Sara Beth Farmer.

Others who wish to play in today's event are asked to communicate with Professional Cole this morning.

The Muny club has played two inter-city matches so far this season, both with Ruston.

Waterproof Team Opens Season Against Clayton

WATERPROOF, La., June 15.—(Special)—The Waterproof Tigers will open their 1935 baseball season here Sunday when they meet the strong Clayton Ramblers.

Waterproof has a good team this season and a capacity crowd is expected to turn out for the home opener.

A change in management of the Ramblers has been announced. W. H. Davis is business manager and Fred Bone playing manager, succeeding Fred Hammett. C. M. Bone continues as publicity manager and official scorer.

BRADDOCK TURNS DOWN $200,000 TO FIGHT GERMAN

Berlin Promoter Offers Big Sum For Battle With Schmeling

By Eddie Brietz
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Still a bit delirious over their good fortune, Jimmy Braddock, new world's heavyweight champion, and Joe Gould, his peppery manager, bustled about today and tried to discover what the future holds in the way of good hard dollars.

Just to prove he is a big time fight manager at last, Gould who swears he hasn't closed his eyes since Braddock won Max Baer's title, turned down a $200,000 offer to meet Max Schmeling in Germany as coolly as if he were picking up a 50-cent luncheon check.

Later he announced he is arranging to take Jimmy to England and Ireland in August for a series of exhibitions.

All day long the offers poured in. They want Braddock's endorsement for this and that. They want him on the stage, on the radio, for fights, exhibitions, for personal appearances and for a thousand and one other things.

"I'm still in a daze," said Gould. "and Jimmy can't believe it yet. It looks like a $150,000 year for him even if he doesn't fight."

The Schmeling offer came from Fred Kirsch, who authorized Jimmy Bronson, his American representative to offer Braddock a fight with the German champion in the Olympic stadium in Berlin in September.

"Nothing doing," Gould told Bronson. "We're not defending this title until next summer, and then it will be in New York for Madison Square Garden. We're under contract to the Garden and couldn't fight for any other promoters first if we wanted to, which we don't."

England and Ireland are all worked up over the Irishman's capturing the heavyweight crown and ten transatlantic telephone calls have been received from promoters in Dublin, London and Manchester, England, for personal appearances. Manchester is the home town of Jimmy's father.

"I told them to put their offers in writing," Gould said. "If they are acceptable we'll go across in the late summer or fall."

George Manteris Wins First Prize In Prize Fight Letter Contest

George Manteris, former Neville High school athlete who now is attending Tulane university, won first prize of $5 in the Ross-McLarnin letter contest, sponsored by the Capitol theater and News-Star—World, it was announced by the judges yesterday.

Second and third prizes of $2.50 each were won by Karl Swanke, Alvis hotel, and M. Michael, 607 Alexander street.

Fifteen pairs of guest tickets to the Capitol also were awarded. These will be mailed to the winners.

After viewing the fight picture at the Capitol Manteris wrote:

"The decision given Ross was correct, because aggressiveness and clean punches go a long way in rendering a decision. Ross outclassed McLarnin in both. He forced most of the fight, had his left hook and uppercut working to perfection and his straight right shook McLarnin repeatedly. It was close, but I think the judges were right."

Winners of the cash prizes get them from the sports editor of the World after 1 o'clock Monday afternoon.

League Leaders Stage Late Rally To Win First Of Series, 7-5

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Apparently beaten going into the eighth inning, where they found themselves trailing by one run and Bill Hallahan pitching fine ball, the New York Giants staged a three-run uprising to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 7 to 5 in the opening game of the series today.

Allyn Stout

The victory, achieved despite eleven hits by the Cards, including home runs by Jack Rothrock and Jimmy Collins, boosted the Giants' lead over the second-place Pirates, who lost to the Phillies, to four and one-half games and to five games over the third-place world champions.

Mark Koenig was the spearhead of the eighth-inning rally. Batting for Al Smith, the third of the four Giant hurlers to see service, the veteran infielder cracked out a single with the bases loaded. Hank Leiber and Travis Jackson scored, and when Joe Medwick's throw bounced over Delancey's head, Gus Mancuso also crossed the plate.

The Cards threatened in the ninth, however, but with men on first and third and only one out, Allyn Stout forced Delancey to hit into a double play. Smith received credit for the victory.

Foster's Cry Of Quitting Recalls Loyalty Of Manager And Fighter

By John J. Romano

Pop Foster is accused of being a poor sport because he did not accept the decision depriving Jimmy McLarnin of the world's welterweight title in good grace. Pop protested the award in favor of Barney Ross in heated words and declared Jimmy would retire rather than risk another such defeat to be charged against his fighter.

Foster was correct when he stated that the 147-pound class is barren of good fighters. Ross is the only one calculated to draw a decent size purse and Barney is out as far as Pop is concerned. Chicago would be the logical place to hold a fourth meeting between the pair and as that is Barney's home town, Pop could not expect any the best of it if the issue is drawn as fine as it was in their other three meetings.

The Lean Days

Foster is roundly criticized because he is supposed to know better. As one manager put it, "Why worry about what happens to one fighter in the ring? After he has passed out there are others to take his place and you can make up what you lost on the other fighter." That is the usual line of reasoning employed by the professional fight manager.

The party who spoke his piece about Foster did not take into consideration the lean years Pop and Jimmy toiled together. The days when the pocketbook was empty and they baited hooks and fished off Oakland piers to provide for a meal. He did not know of the two years Jimmy was sick with a stomach disorder and lived on greens until the trouble was corrected or the many discouragements when they could not get fights and Jimmy wanted to quit and go to work. The shrewd Foster suggested that they purchase a battered "flivver" and tour the big cities of this country before calling it "quits."

Two months later they visited a gym in Detroit to see Louis Kid Kaplan at work. A bystander remarked, "The guy who licks that fellow will be the next champion of the world!" It proved to be the prod reawakening the latent fighting spirit of the discouraged Irish fighter. Jimmy begged Pop to get a match with Kaplan. The result is fistic history. Kaplan was a knockout victim and McLarnin went on to provide more thrills than any little fellow of his time.

Blames Foster's Nature

A personal friend of Barney Ross, not directly connected with the boxing game and one who has made good money in a profesisonal capacity for the champion, gave his version of the decision and his opinion why it was decided against McLarnin.

"I would naturally be inclined to favor Ross. When the bell ended the fight I was almost certain McLarnin would be rewarded for his fine efforts. It was to close to take the title from Jimmy. No matter what my personal feelings were in the matter I was surprised when it went the other way.

"Pop Foster is the reason why I think the title changed hands. McLarnin is well liked. He gave the fans a run for their money every time he entered the ring. The same goes for Ross. The reason Barney is better liked is because his managers are so different than Foster. Pian and Winch will step up and lay the money on the line to make friends. Any time Foster takes a nickel out of his pocket it will be rusted from long tenancy in his pocket.

"When you do business with Foster you are doing business with a cold, clammy fish. He will sit and listen to any proposition offered. After you get through talking, he will state his terms in a 'take it or leave it' tone. Pian and Winch are different. Tell them what you will give for Barney's services and if they do not think you can draw the money to make the venture a paying one, they will advise you to that effect. If they insist on gambling on their figures they have but to put it down in writing and the rest is up to the promoter.

"Foster has driven hard bargains for the past six years. He has gotten every cent the gate would bear. What did he expect when the fight was as close as it was? It was only natural for the officials to lean the other way! I think they voted honestly even though I thought McLarnin won. Pop is not 'regular.' Pian and Winch are. That is the only explanation I can offer for the decision."

Pop Always Honest

There is plenty of logic in that explanation. Nevertheless he was doing Foster an injustice. Had he known enough about the professional boxing game and the managers connected with it, he would have given Pop Foster the credit due for his honesty and faith in his charge.

Foster drove hard bargains but no promoter can truthfully say he lost money on a transaction. Neither did he have to worry about a signed contract. Once Foster agreed to terms he kept his word. He had but one fighter and lived for him. He did not bargain with a promoter with the future in mind and another fighter to consider. Pop's heart and soul was wrapped up in Jimmy McLarnin.

Neither has to worry about the future. This assurance proves Foster reckoned wisely and well. Nor did he leave a string of broken promises and unpaid bills in his wake, as did some of the old-timers, long gone now, did.

Pop and Jimmy may be through as fighter and manager. The record they leave behind is a credit to the game and one which those who rely on "pull" and other undercover dealings to advance their fighters would do well to follow.

JAMES FLETCHER WINS MARBLE CHAMPIONSHIP

RANSOM SCHOOL CHAMPION BEATS CHOUDRANT BOY

Eleven Parish And District Champs Compete In Final Matches

The Northeast Louisiana Marble tournament came to a grand conclusion yesterday with James Fletcher, of Ransom school, West Monroe, winning the title and the trip to Gulfport, Miss. James defeated Monard Ford, of Choudrant, in the championship match.

The finals produced some thrilling games. Starting shortly after 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning at the Central Grammar school grounds, the battles continued until 2:30, with time taken out only for lunch.

The championship match, a three-out-of-five affair, produced some spectacular shooting. Monard won the lag, thus getting the first shot at the 13 marbles in the center of the 10-foot ring. He knocked out a marble on his first shot, his shooter stuck in the center of the ring and he ran seven straight without allowing his opponent a shot.

Ford again won the lag in the second game but missed his first shot. Then young Fletcher duplicated Monard's feat of the first game. On his first shot, he hit a marble and then ran six more mibs to even matters with a 7-0 victory.

In the third game, Monard again won the lag but both missed their first shots. On his second attempt, young Ford got two marbles. James evened it up with two on his sixth shot but the Choudrant youngster took a big lead on his seventh, knocking out four marbles before he missed, needing only one more to win the game. On his ninth shot, James also ran four to knot the count, and then the two plunked away at the remaining "single." On his twelfth attempt, young Fletcher knocked the winning marble out of the ring to take a 2-1 advantage in games.

The Choudrant boy "got hot" again in the fourth game to blank the Ransom entry. Ford won the lag and both missed their first shots. Monard then ran seven straight on his second shot to win the game, 7-0, and even the match at 2-2.

Young Fletcher won the final and championship game by protecting a big early lead. Monard won the lag for the fifth consecutive time and then they both missed their first shots. On his second shot, James ran six straight and it appeared he would score another shutout. However, he was unable to make his shooter stick on the seventh marble and he missed. Monard followed by getting a single marble on his fifth shot and made two more on his sixth. However, he was unable to overcome young Fletcher's early advantage and James knocked out his seventh and winning marble on his next shot.

Eleven district and parish champions competed in the finals. In the first game yesterday morning, Travis Woods, Jackson parish champion from Ansley, defeated Kenneth Rabb, Union parish champion of Farmerville, 7-3 and 7-6. Woods had two high runs of three. Percy Meachum, Ouachita parish champion of Drew, followed with a 7-5, 7-0 victory over Ernest Castleberry, Morehouse parish champion of Bastrop. With the score at 5 to 1 against him, Percy ran out six straight marbles to win the first game and then took the second game when he ran seven straight on his second shot.

The third match of the morning produced two close games. Lonie Robertson, District Two champion from Lida Benton school in Monroe, nosed out Eulis Johnson, Richland parish champion of Start, 7 to 6 in their first game and then took the second, 7-4. Three games were necessary in the battle between Chester Touchet, District Four champion from Louisiana Training Institute, and E. B. Peddy, District One champion from Neville, with Chester winning the last two games after E. B. had taken the first. Young Peddy took the opener, 7-3, but Chester came back with a 7-3 victory in the second and then won another close game in the third, 7-4. There were no high runs in the three games.

James Fletcher got his start toward the title with a 7-3, 7-1 victory over Award McKelver, Franklin parish champion from Wisner. James had a high run of five in the first game and six in the second. Monard Ford gave the big crowd an indication of what he could do when he trimmed Louie Robertson in his first game. Monard ran out the first tilt on his first shot to win, 7-0, and then took the second battle, 7-2, making a high run of five to win.

In the first of the semi-final contests in the afternoon, Percy Meachum won his second victory of the day when he defeated Travis Woods, 7-3, 7-0. Percy ran out seven straight to capture the deciding game. In the second semi-final, James Fletcher won from Chester Touchet, 4-7, 7-2, 7-3. Both had high runs of four in the first game, but James ran six straight in the second and seven in the third.

Then in the last semi-final, Monard Ford staged a belated rally to enter the finals by beating young Meachum. The Drew youngster won the lag in the first game and ran seven straight without allowing his opponent a shot. Monard came back and took the second game, 7-1, by consistently picking off singles and doubles. The third and deciding game of the last semi-final was a battle from the start. After Percy had scored one marble, Monard ran four straight to take a good lead. The Meachum lad, however, picked up two straight, then Monard came to tie the score. Young Ford got two doubles and then Percy was unable to make it 6-all. After [illegible] Percy stood at the line marble remaining in the ring, the Choudrant youngster picked it off to win the right to enter the final against Fletcher.

As a result of his victory, James will leave for Gulfport next Saturday or Sunday to compete in the Southern championships, which will start Monday. He will be the guest of the News-Star-World on the trip, with all expenses paid. The Gulfport tournament will last four days. If the local champion wins there, he will board an air liner for Ocean City, N. J., where he will compete in the national tournament.

The competing champions yesterday were guests of J. J. Martin, manager of J. C. Penney Company, at lunch and following the awarding of prizes, they attended the Paramount theater as guests of Manager Harry Rice.

Yesterday's games were refereed by J. W. Hammett, of Neville High school, and R. E. Crowe, Jr., of Ansley.

Approximately three thousand youngsters in fifteen parishes of Northeast Louisiana and the city of Monroe competed in the tournament, which was the first of its kind ever staged in this section. Elimination tournaments were held in the schools throughout the section, and in every instance the supervisors in charge of school games reported unusual interest in the tourney.

Besides the grand prize, five capital prizes were awarded yesterday through the cooperation of the R. and A. Jewelry company, E. Jack Selig, Monroe Hardware company, Collens Pharmacy and J. C. Penney company. Winners of the capital prizes were Monard Ford, Percy Meachum, Travis Woods, Chester Touchet and Lonie Robertson. Gold medals, donated by civic clubs of Monroe and West Monroe, were awarded all parish and district champions. The civic clubs which assisted were the Kiwanis club, Rotary club, Lions club, West Monroe Kiwanis club, Y's Men's club and Ouachita Business Men's club. Many school prizes also were awarded the various first, second and third winners in the Monroe and West Monroe schools through the courtesy of the following local merchants:

Griffin Studio, Faser's Drug store, Ferd Levi and company, T. John department store, Kennedy-Bennett Drug store, Hemp's cafeteria, D. Masur and Sons, Culp's Music shop, New South drug store, Moore's Fashionable Tailoring, Standard Office Supply company, The Woman's Shop, Renfrow and Son, Hunt and Whitaker, Johnson Drug store, Wolff brothers, Fink the Tailor, Miller-Guerriero Hardware company, Montgomery Ward, Motor Supply company, Monroe Wholesale Drug company, E. R. Kiper Hardware and Supply company, Monroe Wholesale Supply company and Southern Hardware company.

SULTAN OF SWAT IS CZAR OF DIAMOND

CHICKS BEAT, TIE SMOKIES

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 15.—(AP)—Taking advantage of errors the Memphis Chicks defeated Knoxville 7 to 5, in the first game of a doubleheader today and then battled the Smokies to a 4-4 tie in the nightcap which was called at the end of the seventh to allow the teams to catch trains.

Joe Boward, Memphis hurler, was freely hit in the first game, the Smokies collecting two doubles, two triples and home runs by Brown and Gerken. The Chicks got 11 hits off Climax Blethen in the final game, but they were scattered. The Smokies played without the services of Manager Lee Head, who was in Alabama to attend the funeral services for an infant son.

By Harry Grayson

Rogers Hornsby agrees with Dizzy Dean, who in one of his tantrums the other afternoon, further rankled his St. Louis Cardinal teammates and public by expressing the opinion that the New York Giants were a breeze.

"Five pitchers in place of the old four and Dick Bartell," elucidates Hornsby. "The Giants having Bud Parmelee for the full route this time perhaps would have clinched it, and the uncovering of Clydell Castleman makes it fairly certain."

Hornsby still believes that the Cleveland Indians are the most rugged American league individualists, but doubts that they'll win. The Rajah asserts that their only weakness is catching. He expects Detroit and New York to fight it out in the stretch, and suspects that Buck Newsom's knee injury may prevent Washington from making a very serious bid.

Hornsby definitely places the St. Louis American league club in the class of baseball hucksters in explaining the sale of Newsom. Like their National league rivals, the Cardinals, the Browns are doing very well in that line, but not nearly so well in the league standings.

"A profit of $32,500 on a pitcher of Newsom's caliber was all we could expect," says the boss of the Browns.

The Browns drafted Newsom from Los Angeles for $7,500.

Coleman And Solters Worthwhile Additions

Hornsby professes to believe that the Browns are stronger for the numerous deals made since last winer. They probably are outside of the box, and in addition to the players acquired have $100,000 in the bank as the result of barters.

Hornsby got Luke Sewell and $20,000 for Bump Hadley, who couldn't locate the plate with a surveyor's equipment a good share of the time. Sewell went to the White Sox for $6,000 more.

In their exchanges the Browns landed Ed Coleman and Julius Solters, a pair of young outfielders who are built for wear and tear, pack power at the plate, and who can go get 'em and throw.

In addition to Solters, the St. Louis outfit got $10,000 from the Boston Red Sox for Oscar Melillo, a second baseman well baked under the Missouri sun.

They obtained Merritt Cain along with Coleman from the AAAAAAA's for Harry Blaeholder, a pitching veteran.

Bruce Campbell went to Cleveland for Bob Weiland and Johnny Burnett and $7,500. Hornsby figures that he got $7,500 the best of that one.

Hornsby Calls Hemsley Best Catcher In Game

Hornsby believes that the best deal he has made since assuming management of the Browns in August, 1933, was completed when he purchased Rolly Hemsley from Cincinnati for $7,500.

Hornsby considers the fleet-footed and sharp-hitting Hemsley the best catcher in either league—a more accomplished workman than Mickey Cochrane, Bill Dickey, or Rick Ferrell.

Several clubs seek Hemsley despite the fact that Rolly lived up to his reputation as a playboy a time or two last season.

Hornsby is reported to have asked the Cleveland club $75,000 for Hemsley's contract.

"Based on the $40,000 the Red Sox paid the Browns for Ferrell, Hemsley is worth $75,000, too," insists the Rajah.

Hornsby says the Browns have lost no money since he took command, which testifies to his business acumen.

The late Phil Ball dropped more than a million in trying to put the Browns across in St. Louis.

After one particularly bad season, Ball's partner, Harry Sinclair, asked him what he had lost.

"About $250,000," replied Ball.

"Why don't you drop your baseball?" asked Sinclair.

"What did your horses cost you?" inquired Ball.

"Oh, about $350,000," said Sinclair. "Why don't you drop your horses" countered Ball.

Tom Yawkey, of the Red Sox, is the only remaining example of that kind of baseball man, willing to pay high for a ride on his favorite hobby.

Bright Future Predicted For Young Local Golfer

Ben Downing, Jr., Is Sensation Of Recent State Tournament

(Editor's Nate: The following story about Ben Downing, Jr., 12-year-old Monroe golfer, appeared in the New Orleans Item-Tribune and is reprinted herewith from that newspaper. The article was written by Owen Hutchinson, Item sports writer.)

"The most promising prospect I ever saw," is what Fred Haas, Sr., had to say about Ben Downing, Jr., of Monroe, youngest golfer to compete in the Louisiana State golf championship last week at the Metairie Golf club.

The young marvel shot an 84 in the qualifying round Wednesday, missing the championship flight by one stroke. He was bracketed in the expert flight and reached the finals, where he defeated Phil Rittenberg, 2 and 1.

Ben loves golf and plays every day. Naturally, golf is his favorite sport. Football comes next and when asked what other sports he liked to play, he said: "Pool, if you can call that sport. I shoot a good game of pool."

"Naw, dancing is too sissified," answered Ben with disgust when asked if he liked parties.

Mr. Haas, the Colonial Country club pro and the proud father of the State, City, Southern and Western junior amateur champion, Freddie, Jr., thinks that Ben has the making of a real golf champion.

That he has competitive spirit was proven when he defeated George Hill, Jr., 1 up, 20 holes, Friday afternoon and came back Saturday morning to battle Don Zimmerman for extra holes, triumphing again at the 20th green. Then in the afternoon he took on Rittenberg in the finals, winning, 2 and 1.

Ben is a large fellow for his 12 years, almost 13, as Ben explains. His birthday is in August.

He was born in Monroe and the largest city he has been in until his trip to New Orleans for the State tourney was Shreveport.

The trophy he won for winning the expert flight, next thing to the championship flight, is his second. He won the ninth flight of an invitation tourney at the Bastrop Country club last year. In two other tourney attempts, Ben was bumped off in '33 at Lakeside, his home course in Monroe after reaching the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Last year he entered the championship flight and Wesley Shafto ended his career short, sending him out in a first round match.

The lad is a sophomore in the Neville high school in Monroe and says that he gets good marks. When he finishes he intends to go to Washington and Lee.

Golf has been his favorite sport since he first played at the age of four. He used to play often with his daddy, Ben R. Downing, Sr., vice president of the Ouachita National bank in Monroe. Although he can beat Downing, Sr., now they don't play as frequently as they used to. Not because he defeats his daddy, Ben explains, but because the former's business does not let him play as much as before.

Ben learned to play golf by himself. Shep Girault, pro at Monroe, has given Ben a few lessons lately, but Ben learned to play the game without help.

He says the Metairie course is the toughest he ever tackled.

His ambition is to win the British amateur, although he first said he would like to win the National Open.

His biggest thrill, two of them in fact, was beating Don Zimmerman, and winning the expert flight.

Heretofore, Ben explains, he always played opponents who beat him.

The young Monroe lad has fine form, a good compact swing, according to Professional Haas, and has the necessary competitive spirit and love of the game.

With experience Ben should develop into a fine golfer. At the rate he is going, it should not be long before he wins the State crown. At 12 he has won the expert flight. When the present titleholder, Freddie Haas, Jr., was 11, he played in his first State tourney, winning the seventh flight.

A potential champion, that's Ben Downing, the likable big-for-his-age boy from Monroe.

GRANT TO MEET SURFACE TODAY

Finals For Southern Net Title Postponed Because Of Rain

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 15.—(AP)—Intermittent showers forced postponement today of play in the finals of the Golden Jubilee tournament of the Southern Tennis association but the rain subsided long enough for doubles competition to continue.

In the finals Sunday Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, defending champion, and Hal Surface of Kansas City, Missouri valley title holder, play for the Dixie crown in the men's singles, while Mrs. Mary Greef Harris of Kansas City, ranking player of the western association and odds-on favorite, faces Miss Catherine Wolf of Elkhart, Ind., for the feminine title.

Berkeley Bell of New York and his partner, J. Gilbert Hall of East Orange, N. J., advanced to the finals of the men's doubles after a terrific battle with Wilbur Hess of Houston, Texas, and Surface, 4-6, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

In the finals of the men's doubles Hall and Bell encounter the defending champions, John McDiarmid of Chicago and Robert (Lefty) Bryan of Chattanooga, Tenn., who triumphed in the semi-finals over Martin Buxby and Bert Weltens, both entries from the University of Texas, after a close struggle, 6-4, 4-6, 10-8, 6-3.

Mrs. Harris and Miss Wolf paired together to win the women's doubles title by conquering Misses Eunice Bean of San Antonio, Texas, and Eliza Coxe of Asheville, N. C., in a closely contested match 8-6, 8-6.

Miss Elizabeth Buxton of Memphis, Tenn., won the girls' singles title by defeating Patty Kilmartin of Miami Beach, Fla., 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

LORECO DEFEATS RUSTON, 7 TO 4

Stiles' Wildness And Two Errors Figure In Shreveport Win

RUSTON, La., June 15.—(Special)—Wildness by Stiles, pitching for Ruston, along with two costly errors, gave the Loreco Oilers of Shreveport a 7 to 4 victory over the Ruston team here Saturday afternoon in an exhibition battle.

The invading Oilers took the lead in the first inning when Norwood walked, Blant sacrificed him to second and Phelps singled to bring in the tally. The visitors came back in the third with another scoring punch. Blant walked and was sacrificed to second and came home on Phelp's double. Brazil then singled, scoring Phelps. Then Courtney caught a fast one and lifted it high over the right field wall for a home run, scoring Brazil ahead of him.

Two errors and two bases on balls gave the invaders two more runs in the eighth without a hit.

The Ruston team went on a hitting spree in the sixth to get five bingles and four runs, which were their only tallies of the contest. Riser opened the inning with a single and Burt reached base on an error. Thigpen singled with Riser and Burt coming home. Causey hit a double with Thigpen holding up at third. Davis singled, scoring Thigpen, and Cotten singled to bring in Causey.

REVOLTA LEADING IN WESTERN OPEN

Milwaukee Pro Leads Metz By One Stroke At Halfway Mark

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 15.—(AP)—As hot with his putter as the broiling sun that wilted the field with its relentless rays, Johnny Revolta, the young golfer who is making Milwaukee famous, shot into the halfway lead in the western open championship struggle today with a 36-hole tally of 144 strokes, one under the score of Dick Metz of Chicago.

Five blows behind the leader yesterday with a 74, Johnny came marching home today, his putter afire, with a 70, the second par-smashing score of the tournament. One shot behind Metz came Ted Longworth, the belting blond from Portland, Ore., who took a 74 for a collection of 146 shots.

Only three shots away from Revolta, with 147s, were "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, defending titleholder, who couldn't putt worth a lick, and young Byron Nelson, former Texarkana, Ark., boy wonder, and now a professional at Ridgewood, N. J.

Francis Schwartz, the St. Louis darkhorse who led the par-searching pack yesterday with a 69, took an 82 to fall down the list alongside of Tommy Armour of Chicago with a 151.

Metz, tied for second yesterday with a 72, played a steady second round. Nelson, who shot a record 32 on the front nine yesterday, only to use up 43 shots coming back, scored a 34-38—72 to tie Cooper.

Jimmy Thomson, the Long Beach, Calif., bomber and probably the outstanding favorite for the title, duplicated his first round 76 to fall eight shots behind the leader. Walter Hagen of Detroit, five times winner of the title, posted totals of 79-74 and still had a chance in the final 36-hole drive tomorrow.

MASONS TO PLAY PUBLISHERS TEN

Exhibition Softball Game Is Scheduled At Forsythe Park Today

The Publishers, pace setters of the City softball loop, and the Masons, who share the leadership of the Twilight league, will clash in an exhibition game at Forsythe park this afternoon at 4 o'clock, providing weather permits, it was announced last night.

This game is attracting quite a bit of interest among softball fans of Monroe as it is the first encounter between teams of the two leagues and is expected to go a long way toward deciding which of the softball circuits has the fastest team.

The Masons will present a formidable lineup, consisting of several of the heaviest hitters of either league, while the Publishers boast probably the best pitcher in either league in their tall ace hurler, "Monty" Montgomery. Wheeler Mitchell, one of the leading flingers of the Twilight league, will be on the mound for the Masons.

The game will follow a regularly scheduled game between the Publishers and the Phi Kappa ten of the City circuit. The contest was scheduled for last Monday but was postponed. A small admission will be charged for the Masons-Publishers battle and money obtained will be used in paying for equipment purchased by both clubs.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

One Year Ago Today—Rainbow won the second of the races being held off Newport, R. I., to determine the defender of the America's Cup.

Five Years Ago Today—Archie Compson, English professional, won the British Open medal with a score of 141 over the Hoylake course.

LOVELOCK WINS MILE EVENT IN PRINCETON MEET

New Zealander Bests Bonthron, Cunningham; Slats Hardin Loses

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

PALMER STADIUM, PRINCETON, N. J., June 15.—Re-asserting his supremacy over the world's greatest milers, after a two-year interval, John Edward Lovelock of New Zealand, captured the widely-heralded "mile of the century" before 35,000 spectators here today.

He failed to come even close to record time but he sprinted down the stretch to break the tape ten yards in front of Princeton's Bill Bonthron, whose roaring finish carried him to second place, two yards ahead of the great Glenn Cunningham, holder of all world records for the classic distance.

Lovelock's time was 4 minutes, 11.2 seconds. On the same track two years ago the New Zealander had scored an epic triumph over Bonthron in the record time of 4:07.6. Last year and in the same place Cunningham raced to a new mark of 4:06. This still stands.

The lanky Lovelock, after dogging Cunningham's footsteps with an easy trot for nearly three quarters of a mile, won going away, with a broad grin on his face as he looked back over his shoulder. He stepped away from the great Kansan as they came out of the last turn, 100 yards from home.

Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania, fourth, was 20 yards behind Cunningham and Glen Dawson of Tulsa, Okla., who set the first-lap pace, finished fifth. Joe Managan, former Cornell captain, dropped out on the last lap.

The nearest to a world record performance in Princeton's second annual all-star invitation meet came in the 120-yard high hurdles. Sam Allen, a youthful grasshopper from Oklahoma Baptist university, skipped over the barriers in 14.3 seconds, within one tenth second of the world record.

The biggest surprise and the most thrilling conquest of the six events came in the 440-yard run. It was won in the last half dozen strides by Eddie O'Brien, Syracuse sophomore, with a dazzling spurt that carried him out of a fourth place pocket, around all rivals and to the tape in 47.3 seconds, with a two-yard margin over the favorite, Glenn (Slats) Hardin of Louisiana State.

Bill Graber came all the way from southern California to administer a beating to his rival, Keith Brown of Yale, who broke his world pole vault record two weeks ago in the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championships. They were deadlocked all the way up to 14 feet but Graber, in a jumpoff, then hoisted himself over the bar at 14 feet, 3 inches to win.

Charley Hornbostel, the former Indiana university star who bowed to Ben Eastman's world record performance here last year, came back to capture the 880-yard race in 1:52.7.

Raymond Sears of Butler university shook off the persistent Joe McCluskey of the New York A. C. to capture the two-mile run by a decisive margin in 9:16.3.

Walsh Wins Mississippi Title In 39-Hole Match

GREENWOOD, Miss., June 15.—(AP)—Tom Walsh of Greenville defeated W. S. (Dub) Love of Columbia here today for the Mississippi amateur golf championship in one of the most thrilling finals matches in the history of the state golf association.

The match went 39 holes before the Greenville star won out, when Love slipped one over par and Walsh got down in perfect figures. Love went to the 36th hole one up, and dubbed an easy approach shot to let Walsh square the match.

They both had birdies on the first extra hole, and pars on the second. Love hooked his first tee shot off the 210-yard par three No. 3 hole to lose in his strongest bid for the title in the ten years he has been in the tournament.

Neither of the finalists played as good golf as they did this morning when Walsh shot an even par 72 and Love had a 73; this afternoon, Walsh had 75 and Love 76.

MARBLE CHAMPS TO GO YACHTING

It isn't every day a young fella can go yachting on the Gulf of Mexico—and in a mayor's yacht at that. This pleasure is awaiting James Fletcher, the Northeast Louisiana marble champion, and other mib kings in the southern finals of the National Marble tournament at Gulfport, Miss., the last week in June. The yacht pictured here, loaded with happy youngsters, is the "Seawind," the new boat of Mayor Joseph Milner of Gulfport. The mayor, a real marble fan, has promised to take the marble champions on a trip to Ship Island, 15 miles out in the Gulf, while they are at Gulfport. It will be one of the highlights of the marble tournament program.

JAMES FLETCHER WINS MARBLE CHAMPIONSHIP

Eleven Parish And District Champs Compete In Final Matches

The Northeast Louisiana Marble tournament came to a grand conclusion yesterday, with James Fletcher, of Ransom school, West Monroe, winning the title and the trip to Gulfport, Miss. James defeated Monard Ford, of Choudrant, in the championship match.

The finals produced some thrilling games. Starting shortly after 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning at the Central Grammar school grounds, the battles continued until 2:30, with time taken out only for lunch.

The championship match, a three-out-of-five affair, produced some spectacular shooting. Monard won the lag, thus getting the first shot at the 13 marbles in the center of the 10-foot ring. He knocked out a marble on his first shot, his shooter stuck in the center of the ring and he ran seven straight without allowing his opponent a shot.

Ford again won the lag in the second game but missed his first shot. Then young Fletcher duplicated Monard's feat of the first game. On his first shot, he hit a marble and then ran six more mibs to even matters with a 7-0 victory.

In the third game, Monard again won the lag but both missed their first shots. On his second attempt, young Ford got two marbles. James evened it up with two on his sixth shot but the Choudrant youngster took a big lead on his seventh, knocking out four marbles before he missed, needing only one more to win the game. On his ninth shot, James also ran four to knot the count, and then the two plunked away at the remaining "single." On his twelfth attempt, young Fletcher knocked the winning marble out of the ring to take a 2-1 advantage in games.

The Choudrant boy "got hot" again in the fourth game to blank the Ransom entry. Ford won the lag and both missed their first shots. Monard then ran seven straight on his second shot to win the game, 7-0, and even the match at 2-2.

Young Fletcher won the final and championship game by protecting a big early lead. Monard won the lag for the fifth consecutive time and then they both missed their first shots. On his second shot, James ran six straight and it appeared he would score another shutout. However, he was unable to make his shooter stick on the seventh marble and he missed. Monard followed by gettting a single marble on his fifth shot and made two more on his sixth. However, he was unable to overcome young Fletcher's early advantage and James knocked out his seventh and winning marble on his next shot.

Eleven district and parish champions competed in the finals. In the first game yesterday morning, Travis Woods, Jackson parish champion from Ansley, defeated Kenneth Rabb, Union parish champion of Farmerville, 7-3 and 7-6. Woods had two high runs of three. Percy Meachum, Ouachita parish champion of Drew, followed with a 7-5, 7-0 victory over Ernest Castleberry, Morehouse parish champion of Bastrop. With the score of 5 to 1 against him, Percy ran out six straight marbles to win the first game and then took the second game when he ran seven straight on his second shot.

The third match of the morning produced two close games. Lonie Robertson, District Two champion from Lida Benton school in Monroe, nosed out Eulis Johnson, Richland parish champion of Start, 7 to 6 in their first game and then took the second, 7-4. Three games were necessary in the battle between Chester Touchet, District Four champion from Louisiana Training institute, and E. B. Peddy, District One champion from Neville, with Chester winning the last two games after E. B. had taken the first. Young Peddy took the opener, 7-6, but Chester came back with a 7-3 victory in the second and then won another close game in the third, 7-6. There were no high runs in the three games.

James Fletcher got his start toward the title with a 7-3, 7-1 victory over Edward McKeiver, Franklin parish champion from Wisner. James had a high run of five in the first game and six in the second. Monard Ford gave the big crowd an indication of what he could do when he trimmed Lonie Robertson in his first game. Monard ran out the first tilt on his first shot to win, 7-0, and then took the second battle, 7-2, making a high run of five to win.

In the first of the semi-final contests in the afternoon, Percy Meachum won his second victory of the day when he defeated Travis Woods, 7-2, 7-0. Percy ran out seven straight to capture the deciding game. In the second semi-final, James Fletcher won from Chester Touchet, 4-7, 7-2, 7-2. Both had high runs of four in the first game, but James ran six straight in the second and seven in the third.

Then in the last semi-final, Monard Ford staged a belated rally to enter the finals by beating young Meachum. The Drew youngster won the lag in the first game and ran seven straight without allowing his opponent a shot. Monard came back and took the second game, 7-1, by consistently picking off singles and doubles. The third and deciding game of the last semi-final was a battle from the start. After Percy had scored one marble, Monard ran four straight to take a good lead. The Meachum lad, however, picked up two straight, then added one to tie the score. Young Ford got two singles and then Percy got a double to make it 6-all. After both had fired three times at the lone marble remaining in the ring, the Choudrant youngster picked it off to win the right to enter the final against Fletcher.

As a result of his victory, James will leave for Gulfport next Saturday or Sunday to compete in the Southern championships, which will start Monday. He will be the guest of the News-Star-World on the trip, with all expenses paid. The Gulfport tournament will last four days. If the local champion wins there, he will board an air liner for Ocean City, N. J., where he will compete in the national tournament.

The competing champions yesterday were guests of J. J. Martin, manager of J. C. Penney Company, at lunch and following the awarding of prizes, they attended the Paramount theater as guests of Manager Harry Rice.

Yesterday's games were refereed by J. W. Hammett, of Neville High school, and R. E. Crowe, Jr., of Ansley.

Approximately three thousand youngsters in fifteen parishes of Northeast Louisiana and the city of Monroe competed in the tournament, which was the first of its kind ever staged in this section. Elimination tournaments were held in the schools throughout the section, and in every instance the supervisors in charge of school games reported unusual interest in the tourney.

Besides the grand prize, five capital prizes were awarded yesterday through the cooperation of the R. and A. Jewelry company, E. Jack Selig, Monroe Hardware company, Collens Pharmacy and J. C. Penney company. Winners of the capital prizes were Monard Ford, Percy Meachum, Travis Woods, Chester Touchet and Lonie Robertson. Gold medals, donated by civic clubs of Monroe and West Monroe, were awarded all parish and district champions. The civic clubs which assisted were the Kiwanis club, Rotary club, Lions club, West Monroe Kiwanis club, Y's Men's club and Ouachita Business Men's club. Many school prizes also were awarded the various first, second and third winners in the Monroe and West Monroe schools through the courtesy of the following local merchants:

Griffin Studio, Faser's Drug store, Ferd Levi and company, T. John department store, Kennedy-Bennett Drug store, Hemp's cafeteria, D. Masur and Sons, Culp's Music shop, New South drug store, Moore's Fashionable Tailoring, Standard Office Supply company, The Woman's Shop, Renfrow and Son, Hunt and Whitaker, Johnson Drug store, Wolff brothers, Fink the Tailor, Miller-Guerriero Hardware company, Montgomery Ward, Motor Supply company, Monroe Wholesale Drug company, E. R. Kiper Hardware and Supply company, Monroe Wholesale Supply company and Southern Hardware company.

SULTAN OF SWAT IS CZAR OF DIAMOND

The face is familiar, but the get-up on the figure above is strange. Yes, sir! It's Babe Ruth, who, since his resignation from the Boston Braves, has gone into training as an umpire for the New York World-Telegram's high school baseball final at the Yankee Stadium on June 22. The Babe looks right at home in his new togs, but, in the center, he appears just a bit puzzled on a close play at second base. The old home run king first shouts, "Yer out!" above right, and then changes his mind and calls the runner safe, below. And who is there to question the great one's right to reverse his decision?

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 15.—(AP)—Taking advantage of errors the Memphis Chicks defeated Knoxville 7 to 5, in the first game of a doubleheader today and then battled the Smokies to a 4-4 tie in the nightcap which was called at the end of the seventh to allow the teams to catch trains.

Joe Boward, Memphis hurler, was freely hit in the first game, the Smokies collecting two doubles, two triples and home runs by Brown and Gerken. The Chicks got 11 hits off Climax Blethen in the final game, but they were scattered. The Smokies played without the services of Manager Lee Head, who was in Alabama to attend the funeral services for an infant son.

PELS TRIM LOOKOUTS

NEW ORLEANS, June 15.—(AP)—New Orleans, pounding the offerings of Millard Hayes hard, won the final game of the series from Chattanooga today 7 to 4.

The Pels bunched three hits for four runs in the first inning, Weatherly hit a home run with Connolly on in the sixth. Milnar shut out the Lookouts till the ninth when he weakened and the visitors made four runs on four hits.

By Harry Grayson

Rogers Hornsby agrees with Dizzy Dean, who in one of his tantrums the other afternoon, further rankled his St. Louis Cardinal teammates and public by expressing the opinion that the New York Giants were a breeze.

"Five pitchers in place of the old four and Dick Bartell," elucidates Hornsby. "The Giants having Bud Parmelee for the full route this time perhaps would have clinched it, and the uncovering of Clydell Castleman makes it fairly certain."

Hornsby still believes that the Cleveland Indians are the most rugged American league individualists, but doubts that they'll win. The Rajah asserts that their only weakness is catching. He expects Detroit and New York to fight it out in the stretch, and suspects that Buck Newsom's knee injury may prevent Washington from making a very serious bid.

Hornsby definitely places the St. Louis American league club in the class of baseball hucksters in explaining the sale of Newsom. Like their National league rivals, the Cardinals, the Browns are doing very well in that line, but not nearly so well in the league standings.

"A profit of $32,500 on a pitcher of Newsom's caliber was all we could expect," says the boss of the Browns.

The Browns drafted Newsom from Los Angeles for $7,500.

Coleman And Solters Worthwhile Additions

Hornsby professes to believe that the Browns are stronger for the numerous deals made since last winer. They probably are outside of the box, and in addition to the players acquired have $100,000 in the bank as the result of barters.

Hornsby got Luke Sewell and $20,000 for Bump Hadley, who couldn't locate the plate with a surveyor's equipment a good share of the time. Sewell went to the White Sox for $6,000 more.

In their exchanges the Browns landed Ed Coleman and Julius Solters, a pair of young outfielders who are built for wear and tear, pack power at the plate, and who can go get 'em and throw.

In addition to Solters, the St. Louis outfit got $10,000 from the Boston Red Sox for Oscar Melillo, a second baseman well baked under the Missouri sun.

They obtained Merritt Cain along with Coleman from the AAAAAAA's for Harry Blacholder, a pitching veteran.

Bruce Campbell went to Cleveland for Bob Weiland and Johnny Burnett and $7,500. Hornsby figures that he got $7,500 the best of that one.

Hornsby Calls Hemsley Best Catcher In Game

Hornsby believes that the best deal he has made since assuming management of the Browns in August, 1933, was completed when he purchased Rolly Hemsley from Cincinnati for $7,500.

Hornsby considers the fleet-footed and sharp-hitting Hemsley the best catcher in either league—a more accomplished workman than Mickey Cochrane, Bill Dickey, or Rick Ferrell.

Several clubs seek Hemsley despite the fact that Rolly lived up to his reputation as a playboy a time or two last season.

Hornsby is reported to have asked the Cleveland club $75,000 for Hemsley's contract.

"Based on the $40,000 the Red Sox paid the Browns for Ferrell, Hemsley is worth $75,000, too," insists the Rajah.

Hornsby says the Browns have lost no money since he took command, which testifies to his business acumen.

The late Phil Ball dropped more than a million in trying to put the Browns across in St. Louis.

After one particularly bad season, Ball's partner, Harry Sinclair, asked him what he had lost.

"About $250,000," replied Ball.

"Why don't you drop your baseball?" asked Sinclair.

"What did your horses cost you?" inquired Ball.

"Oh, about $350,000," said Sinclair.

"Why don't you drop your horses" countered Ball.

Bright Future Predicted For Young Local Golfer

Ben Downing, Jr., Is Sensation Of Recent State Tournament

(Editor's Nate: The following story about Ben Downing, Jr., 12-year-old Monroe golfer, appeared in the New Orleans Item-Tribune and is reprinted herewith from that newspaper. The article was written by Owen Hutchinson, Item sports writer.)

"The most promising prospect I ever saw," is what Fred Haas, Sr., had to say about Ben Downing, Jr., of Monroe, youngest golfer to compete in the Louisiana State golf championship last week at the Metairie Golf club.

The young marvel shot an 84 in the qualifying round Wednesday, missing the championship flight by one stroke. He was bracketed in the expert flight and reached the finals, where he defeated Phil Rittenberg, 2 and 1.

Ben loves golf and plays every day. Naturally, golf is his favorite sport. Football comes next and when asked what other sports he liked to play, he said: "Pool, if you can call that sport. I shoot a good game of pool."

"Naw, dancing is too sissified," answered Ben with disgust when asked if he liked parties.

Mr. Haas, the Colonial Country club pro and the proud father of the State, City, Southern and Western junior amateur champion, Freddie, Jr., thinks that Ben has the making of a real golf champion.

That he has competitive spirit was proven when he defeated George Hill, Jr., 1 up, 20 holes, Friday afternoon and came back Saturday morning to battle Don Zimmerman for extra holes, triumphing again at the 20th green. Then in the afternoon he took on Rittenberg in the finals, winning, 2 and 1.

Ben is a large fellow for his 12 years, almost 13, as Ben explains. His birthday is in August.

He was born in Monroe and the largest city he has been in until his trip to New Orleans for the State tourney was Shreveport.

The trophy he won for winning the expert flight, next thing to the championship flight, is his second. He won the ninth flight of an invitation tourney at the Bastrop Country club last year. In two other tourney attempts, Ben was bumped off in '33 at Lakeside, his home course in Monroe after reaching the semi-finals of the sixth flight. Last year he entered the championship flight and Wesley Shafto ended his career short, sending him out in a first round match.

The lad is a sophomore in the Neville high school in Monroe and says that he gets good marks. When he finishes he intends to go to Washington and Lee.

Golf has been his favorite sport since he first played at the age of four. He used to play often with his daddy, Ben R. Downing, Sr., vice president of the Ouachita National bank in Monroe. Although he can beat Downing, Sr., now they don't play as frequently as they used to. Not because he defeats his daddy, Ben explains, but because the former's business does not let him play as much as before.

Ben learned to play golf by himself. Shep Girault, pro at Monroe, has given Ben a few lessons lately, but Ben learned to play the game without help.

He says the Metairie course is the toughest he ever tackled.

His ambition is to win the British amateur, although he first said he would like to win the National Open.

His biggest thrill, two of them in fact, was beating Don Zimmerman, and winning the expert flight.

Heretofore, Ben explains, he always played opponents who beat him.

The young Monroe lad has fine form, a good compact swing, according to Professional Haas, and has the necessary competitive spirit and love of the game.

With experience Ben should develop into a fine golfer. At the rate he is going, it should not be long before he wins the State crown. At 12 he has won the expert flight. When the present titleholder, Freddie Haas, Jr., was 11, he played in his first State tourney, winning the seventh flight.

A potential champion, that's Ben Downing, the likable big-for-his-age boy from Monroe.

Finals For Southern Net Title Postponed Because Of Rain

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 15.—(AP)—Intermittent showers forced postponement today of play in the finals of the Golden Jubilee tournament of the Southern Tennis association but the rain subsided long enough for doubles competition to continue.

In the finals Sunday Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant of Atlanta, defending champion, and Hal Surface of Kansas City, Missouri valley title holder, play for the Dixie crown in the men's singles, while Mrs. Mary Greef Harris of Kansas City, ranking player of the western association and odds-on favorite, faces Miss Catherine Wolf of Elkhart, Ind., for the feminine title.

Berkeley Bell of New York and his partner, J. Gilbert Hall of East Orange, N. J., advanced to the finals of the men's doubles after a terrific battle with Wilbur Hess of Houston, Texas, and Surface, 4-6, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2.

In the finals of the men's doubles Hall and Bell encounter the defending champions, John McDiarmid of Chicago and Robert (Lefty) Bryan of Chattanooga, Tenn., who triumphed in the semi-finals over Martin Buxby and Bert Weltens, both entries from the University of Texas, after a close struggle, 6-4, 4-6, 10-8, 6-3.

Mrs. Harris and Miss Wolf paired together to win the women's doubles title by conquering Misses Eunice Bean of San Antonio, Texas, and Eliza Coxe of Asheville, N. C., in a closely contested match 8-6, 8-6.

Miss Elizabeth Buxton of Memphis, Tenn., won the girls' singles title by defeating Patty Kilmartin of Miami Beach, Fla., 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

Stiles' Wildness And Two Errors Figure In Shreveport Win

RUSTON, La., June 15.—(Special)—Wildness by Stiles, pitching for Ruston, along with two costly errors, gave the Loreco Oilers of Shreveport a 7 to 4 victory over the Ruston team here Saturday afternoon in an exhibition battle.

The invading Oilers took the lead in the first inning when Norwood walked, Blant sacrificed him to second and Phelps singled to bring in the tally. The visitors came back in the third with another scoring punch. Blant walked and was sacrificed to second and came home on Phelp's double. Brazil then singled, scoring Phelps. Then Courtney caught a fast one and lifted it high over the right field wall for a home run, scoring Brazil ahead of him.

Two errors and two bases on balls gave the invaders two more runs in the eighth without a hit.

The Ruston team went on a hitting spree in the sixth to get five bingles and four runs, which were their only tallies of the contest. Riser opened the inning with a single and Burt reached base on an error. Thigpen singled with Riser and Burt coming home. Causey hit a double with Thigpen holding up at third. Davis singled, scoring Thigpen, and Cotten singled to bring in Causey.

MARBLE CHAMPS TO GO YACHTING

It isn't every day a young fella can go yachting on the Gulf of Mexico—and in a mayor's yacht at that. This pleasure is awaiting James Fletcher, the Northeast Louisiana marble champion, and other mib kings in the southern finals of the National Marble tournament at Gulfport, Miss., the last week in June. The yacht pictured here, loaded with happy youngsters, is the "Seawind," the new boat of Mayor Joseph Milner of Gulfport. The mayor, a real marble fan, has promised to take the marble champions on a trip to Ship Island, 15 miles out in the Gulf, while they are at Gulfport. It will be one of the highlights of the marble tournament program.

REVOLTA LEADING IN WESTERN OPEN

Milwaukee Pro Leads Metz By One Stroke At Halfway Mark

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 15.—(AP)—As hot with his putter as the broiling sun that wilted the field with its relentless rays, Johnny Revolta, the young golfer who is making Milwaukee famous, shot into the halfway lead in the western open championship struggle today with a 36-hole tally of 144 strokes, one under the score of Dick Metz of Chicago.

Five blows behind the leader yesterday with a 74, Johnny came marching home today, his putter afire, with a 70, the second par-smashing score of the tournament. One shot behind Metz came Ted Longworth, the belting blond from Portland, Ore., who took a 74 for a collection of 146 shots.

Only three shots away from Revolta, with 147s, were "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, defending titleholder, who couldn't putt worth a lick, and young Byron Nelson, former Texarkana, Ark., boy wonder, and now a professional at Ridgewood, N. J.

Francis Schwartz, the St. Louis darkhorse who led the par-searching pack yesterday with a 69, took an 82 to fall down the list alongside of Tommy Armour of Chicago with a 151.

Metz, tied for second yesterday with a 72, played a steady second round. Nelson, who shot a record 32 on the front nine yesterday, only to use up 43 shots coming back, scored a 34-38—72 to tie Cooper.

Jimmy Thomson, the Long Beach, Calif., bomber and probably the outstanding favorite for the title, duplicated his first round 76 to fall eight shots behind the leader. Walter Hagen of Detroit, five times winner of the title, posted totals of 79-74 and still had a chance in the final 36-hole drive tomorrow.

MASONS TO PLAY PUBLISHERS TEN

Exhibition Softball Game Is Scheduled At Forsythe Park Today

The Publishers, pace setters of the City softball loop, and the Masons, who share the leadership of the Twilight league, will clash in an exhibition game at Forsythe park this afternoon at 4 o'clock, providing weather permits, it was announced last night.

This game is attracting quite a bit of interest among softball fans of Monroe as it is the first encounter between teams of the two leagues and is expected to go a long way toward deciding which of the softball circuits has the fastest team.

The Masons will present a formidable lineup, consisting of several of the heaviest hitters of either league, while the Publishers boast probably the best pitcher in either league in their tall ace hurler, "Monty" Montgomery. Wheeler Mitchell, one of the leading flingers of the Twilight league, will be on the mound for the Masons.

The game will follow a regularly scheduled game between the Publishers and the Phi Kappa ten of the City circuit. The contest was scheduled for last Monday but was postponed. A small admission will be charged for the Masons-Publishers battle and money obtained will be used in paying for equipment purchased by both clubs.

LOVELOCK WINS MILE EVENT IN PRINCETON MEET

New Zealander Bests Bonthron, Cunningham; Slats Hardin Loses

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

PALMER STADIUM, PRINCETON, N. J., June 15.—Re-asserting his supremacy over the world's greatest milers, after a two-year interval, John Edward Lovelock of New Zealand, captured the widely-heralded "mile of the century" before 35,000 spectators here today.

He failed to come even close to record time but he sprinted down the stretch to break the tape ten yards in front of Princeton's Bill Bonthron, whose roaring finish carried him to second place, two yards ahead of the great Glenn Cunningham, holder of all world records for the classic distance.

Lovelock's time was 4 minutes, 11.2 seconds. On the same track two years ago the New Zealander had scored an epic triumph over Bonthron in the record time of 4:07.6. Last year and in the same place Cunningham raced to a new mark of 4:06. This still stands.

The lanky Lovelock, after dogging Cunningham's footsteps with an easy trot for nearly three quarters of a mile, won going away, with a broad grin on his face as he looked back over his shoulder. He stepped away from the great Kansan as they came out of the last turn, 100 yards from home.

Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania, fourth, was 20 yards behind Cunningham and Glen Dawson of Tulsa, Okla., who set the first-lap pace, finished fifth. Joe Managan, former Cornell captain, dropped out on the last lap.

The nearest to a world record performance in Princeton's second annual all-star invitation meet came in the 120-yard high hurdles. Sam Allen, a youthful grasshopper from Oklahoma Baptist university, skipped over the barriers in 14.3 seconds, within one tenth second of the world record.

The biggest surprise and the most thrilling conquest of the six events came in the 440-yard run. It was won in the last half dozen strides by Eddie O'Brien, Syracuse sophomore, with a dazzling spurt that carried him out of a fourth place pocket, around all rivals and to the tape in 47.3 seconds, with a two-yard margin over the favorite, Glenn (Slats) Hardin of Louisiana State.

Bill Graber came all the way from southern California to administer a beating to his rival, Keith Brown of Yale, who broke his world pole vault record two weeks ago in the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championships. They were deadlocked all the way up to 14 feet but Graber, in a jumpoff, then hoisted himself over the bar at 14 feet, 3 inches to win.

Charley Hornbostel, the former Indiana university star who bowed to Ben Eastman's world record performance here last year, came back to capture the 880-yard race in 1:52.7.

Raymond Sears of Butler university shook off the persistent Joe McCluskey of the New York A. C. to capture the two-mile run by a decisive margin in 9:16.3.

Walsh Wins Mississippi Title In 39-Hole Match

GREENWOOD, Miss., June 15.—(AP)—Tom Walsh of Greenville defeated W. S. (Dub) Love of Columbia here today for the Mississippi amateur golf championship in one of the most thrilling finals matches in the history of the state golf association.

The match went 39 holes before the Greenville star won out, when Love slipped one over par and Walsh got down in perfect figures. Love went to the 36th hole one up, and dubbed an easy approach shot to let Walsh square the match.

They both had birdies on the first extra hole, and pars on the second. Love hooked his first tee shot off the 210-yard par three No. 3 hole to lose in his strongest bid for the title in the ten years he has been in the tournament.

Neither of the finalists played as good golf as they did this morning when Walsh shot an even par 72 and Love had a 73; this afternoon, Walsh had 75 and Love 76.

KELLY RETURNS WEDNESDAY TO MEET HOLMBERG

LOCAL FAVORITE SIGNED TO MEET TOUGH OPPONENT

Swede Expected To Extend Clever Tennesseean In Main Event

Ernest Kelly, the most popular wrestler ever to perform at Roosevelt stadium, will return Wednesday night after an absence of more than a month to meet Swede Holmberg, tough New Yorker, in the main event of the weekly mat show at the local arena.

Kelly, who has shown local mat fans plenty of clever wrestling, will have his hands full when he tackles the big former Fordham football star. Holmberg outwitted Joe Stecher, who defeated Kelly here a month or so ago, to win a straight-fall victory over the Nebraskan last Wednesday night. True, Holmberg used dubious tactics at times against Stecher, but nevertheless he beat the man that beat Kelly.

The Tennesseean may expect the same sort of treatment at the hands of Holmberg. The Swede knows plenty of holds and he probably would be able to hold his own against some good boys by sticking strictly to business, but he prefers to mix roughness with his wrestling. In fact, his tactics against Stecher led to a near-riot last week, with Holmberg and several of the fans tangling for a moment or two. The brief battle led to charges being filed against Holmberg, and the New Yorker was arrested, but later the charges were withdrawn and all was forgiven, if not forgotten.

Kelly, of course, is well known to local fans and he always attracts a large following. He is a fast, smooth worker and is capable of putting on a clever exhibition. He has been appearing here at intervals for the past year and he apparently hasn't lost any of his supporters.

Ernest "went wild" in Shreveport recently, after taking a lot of fouls and other rough treatment from a tough opponent, and made things hot for all concerned for awhile. If Holmberg persists in following his usual tactics, the young Tennesseean may give him a dose of the same medicine. However, Ernest has always behaved himself in the local ring, despite some rather raw deals he has received at the hands of opponents.

Promoter Bruscato said last night that he was attempting to line up a good semi-final bout to complete the card. He said he hoped to get at least one new face to show the fans in the first bout.

Both matches will be best two out of three falls, with a two-hour time limit on the main event and the semi-final limited to one hour.

NATS WALLOP BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—(AP)—A trio of clouting Senators today led a 15-hit attack that netted Washington an easy 11 to 3 victory over the oft-beaten bottom-place Browns in their series opener before a ladies' day crowd of 2,500.

Two singles, a double and a triple by John Stone, a triple and two doubles by Buddy Myer, and the two home runs and a triple garnered by Jim Holbrook accounted for most of the Senator tallies.

EVANGELINE LEAGUE

(By Associated Press)

Lafayette won two games in the Evangeline league yesterday to come within a few percentage points of the league-leading Jeanerette team, which dropped a 10-inning game to Lake Charles, 7 to 6.

The second-position team took both ends of a doubleheader from Alexandria, 14 to 5 and 12 to 0. Stanley Sonnier and Lenny Rock of the Lafayette club smashed in homers, the latter driving in eight runs in the two contests.

In other games, Rayne trounced Opelousas, 4 to 1, and New Iberia took a six-inning rained-out contest from Abbeville, 1 to 0.

Cash Prizes Offered In Outboard Regatta July 4

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 15.—(Special)—Five hundred dollars in prize money will be offered here in the Independence day outboard regatta being sponsored by the Hot Springs Chamber of Commerce on Lake Hamilton, Bruce E. Wallace, general chairman of the event, announced.

The committee also announced there will be three races, each a five-mile event.

The first race will be called at 2 p.m. Several nationally known drivers are expected to participate. There will also be drivers from St. Louis, Fort Worth, Tulsa, Memphis, Shreveport, Little Rock, Camden and Smackover, as well as a number of local entries.

Besides surf board stunts, canoe jousting and swimming contests, there will be a marine parade between races.

Ouachita Valley League

TODAY'S GAMES

The improving Ruston baseball club will face the Brown Paper mill aggregation this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the Brownville diamond, providing the weather permits.

In two other Ouachita Valley league games, the Sterlington Engineers, who are crowding the Brownies for first place in the league standing, will meet the Fairbanks nine on the Sterlington diamond, and the Swartz Carbon Blackers go to Oak Grove.

The outcome of Brown's contest with Ruston and the Engineers engagement with Fairbanks is holding the interest of the league fans today as a loss by Brown and a victory by the Sterlington club would change league leadership for the first time this year.

The Browns have been tied by the Ruston club on one occasion and although they have never beaten the pace-setters of the league, the tie game has encouraged Ruston to the point where they believe they can beat Brown if they click as they have been doing lately.

The Engineers, boasting the best hitting club in the circuit, a creditable pitching staff, and the only team to beat Brown all season, doesn't intend to lose their skirmish with Fairbanks. Fairbanks, however, has a good ball club that is capable of pulling just about anything in the way of an upset and are prepared for the Engineers.

Haas And Cruickshank Beat Wethered, Dawson

RICHMOND, Va., June 15.—(AP)—Golf records aplenty were established here today as Fred Haas of New Orleans and Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond defeated Miss Joyce Wethered of England and Johnny Dawson of Chicago, 7 and 6, over the revamped James River course of the Country Club of Virginia.

It was Miss Wethered's first loss in her current tour.

Haas, here to defend his southern amateur championship next week, shot a 71, one under par, for a new amateur record for the layout. The best mark previously had been held at 72 by Earl Stokes of Louisville and Billy Howell of Richmond.

Miss Wethered, playing from the men's tees, had 81 for the 6700-yard course, the best score ever made by a woman. Her partner, Dawson, had a 74.

Wee Bobby Cruickshank, the home pro, lowered his own course record of 68 by one stroke. Going out in par 36, Bobby bagged five birdies coming home for a 36-31—67, five strokes better than par.

GREAT GOLF By Art Krenz

SARAZEN'S DEUCE SHOT AT AUGUSTA RATED BEST IN HISTORY

By Art Krenz
(NEA Service Golf Writer)

Speaking of great golf, Gene Sarazen's double eagle two scored on the 485-yard 15th hole during the recent Bobby Jones Masters' tournament at Augusta, Ga., is the greatest of the great.

Holes in one have been made in tournament competition by Paul Runyan, Leo Diegel, Ross Somerville, and others, but none can compare with this, the outstanding shot in the history of golf.

Granted that Gene is a strong finisher, as was proved at Fresh Meadows in 1932, when he scored 66 in the final round to snatch the National Open crown away from the waiting hands of Phil Perkins, no one conceded him a chance of catching Craig Wood as he mounted the 15th tee.

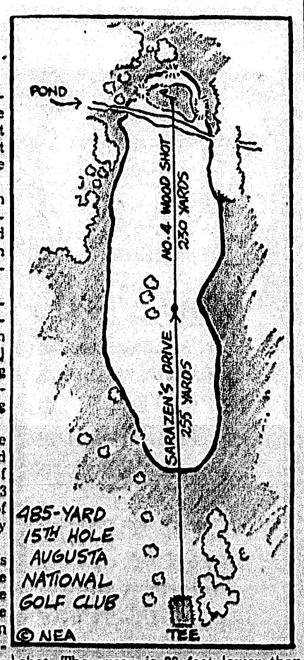
Wood finished with 282, and Gene was three strokes behind. This would necessitate shaving a like number of strokes from par, finishing in 13 strokes against perfect figures of 5-3-4-4; even then Sarazen would only tie Wood.

But the seemingly impossible has happened in sports. Touchdowns have been scored after the final whistle had blown; baseball teams have come from behind to decide the issue in the ninth; and long shots have thundered down the stretch to cross the wire a winner. And here another long shot was to decide a championship.

Hole No. 15, which was played as No. 6 last year, is described in the Augusta National program as a three-shot hole. It not only is an interesting three-shot hole, as one will be maneuvering for position from the tee onward, but it also is a sporting two-shot hole.

A skillful and courageous player is able to pull his second shot around to the green with the aid of a large hillock to the right.

A pond in front of the green provides the penalty for the long player who fails to make a perfect second shot. The green is 23 feet lower than the tee.



Gene's booming drive split the middle of the fairway and came to rest on the downward slope 255 yards from the tee, but in a cuppy lie. He first took an iron from his bag, but an iron wouldn't carry the pond, more hazardous than a trap. He then selected a spoon, and smacked the ball. Away it soared, landed on the green, and dropped into the cup for a deuce, three under par, to pick up the three needed strokes for a chance to tie Wood.

In the 36-hole playoff he defeated Wood by five strokes.

TECH FOOTBALL TICKET CAMPAIGN NEARS ITS GOAL

Two-Thirds Of Season Ducats Sold In Drive To Install Lights

RUSTON, La., June 15.—(Special)—With two-thirds of the season tickets already sold, a committee of local football fans is making a final effort to sell the required 500 ducats that will enable Louisiana Tech to install lights and play night football, according to Amos W. Ford chairman of the committee on football ticket sales.

President G. W. Bond stated that lights would be installed in the new stadium if $2500 could be raised by July 1. The money would be necessary in order to take care of the new equipment needed if the lights were placed in the stadium.

The new stadium now under erection at Tech will be completed by August 15 and will seat about 3,000 persons. The old bleachers, which seats about 2,000, will be placed on the opposite side of the field.

One of the most interesting football cards ever arranged by an athletic director at Louisiana Tech has been drawn up by Coach Eddie McLane and will be presented to Tech followers here this next fall. The schedule calls for seven home games out of nine tilts arranged. If the lights are put on the field all the games at home with the exception of the Homecoming game and the Thanksgiving battle will be played on Friday nights.

The complete schedule for the 1935 season follows:

Oct. 5, Tennessee Tech at Ruston; Oct. 12, Southwestern Louisiana Institute at Ruston; Oct. 19, Union University at Ruston; Oct. 26, Louisiana Normal at Ruston (Homecoming); Nov. 2, Millsaps at Ruston; Nov. 9, Mississippi College at Ruston; Nov. 23, Louisiana College at Pineville; Nov. 30, Mississippi State Teachers at Ruston; Dec. 7, University of Tampa at Tampa, Florida.

KING SAXON WINS 13TH

Driving home a length ahead of Only One, C. H. Knebelkamp's King Saxon, a former $1,400 plater, scored his thirteenth victory in 15 starts in taking the $3,750 Queens county handicap at Aqueduct. Included in the field of five rivals was Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery, which finished fifth. Above, King Saxon is shown crossing the finish ahead of Only One. Below is a closeup of the horse.

L. S. U. SENDS 3 STARS TO MEET

Tiger Trackmen Expected To Score Thirty Points At Berkeley

BERKELEY, Calif., June 15.—(Special)—Louisiana State university's three-man track team, which will compete here next Friday and Saturday in the fourteenth annual National Collegiate A. A. meet, may score as high as 30 points to finish fifth or sixth in total points, according to local observers.

Glenn "Slats" Hardin, L. S. U.'s ace performer, will defend two championships won last year at Los Angeles—the 220-yard low hurdles and the 440-yard dash. Hardin is favored to repeat his double victory this coming week-end, but has his work cut out for him in both events. If Hardin wins both events he will be the first athlete in the 14 years of the N. C. A. A. to score double victories three years running.

Ted O'Neil, L. S. U.'s half miler, has shown vast improvement this year over his performance of last season. He has a mark of 1:52.6 for the 800 meters and this performance, achieved in the Gulf Coast A. A. U. meet at Houston, Texas, a few weeks ago, is the basis for local opinion that O'Neil will finish better than fourth in the 880 in the N. C. A. A. meet.

John Sanders, third man of the Tiger trio, is expected to prove a tough customer to beat in the two-mile, yet local experts claim Sanders will be fourth or fifth in that event next Saturday.

If Hardin manages to win both events in which he will defend championships, and if O'Neil finishes third in the 880 and Sanders fourth in the two-mile, L. S. U. will amass a total of 30 points, which hardly compares with the 59 points forecasted as Southern California's share by West Coast coaches. If by any chance Hardin should not win both his events, and Sanders and O'Neil should slip back a cog or two in their specialties, L. S. U. will end up with about 20 points, which hardly will rate better than seventh or eighth, possibly as low as ninth or tenth.

Coach Bernie Moore, of L. S. U., and O'Neil and Sanders are due to arrive in Berkeley late tomorrow night from New Orleans, where they entrained Friday night. Hardin is due in Berkeley late Sunday night, as he was scheduled to take an airplane from Newark, N. J., late tonight, after competing in the Princeton University Invitational this afternoon.

Clarks Lumberjacks To Play Hodge Team Today

CLARKS, La., June 15.—(Special)—The Clarks Lumberjacks will entertain the league leading Hodge team Sunday on the local diamond. The game will be called at 3 o'clock.

D. Stone, recently added to the Clarks roster, will be on the mound for the home team with M. Delcour behind the plate. This will be Hodge's first appearance here and a large crowd is expected to see the contest.

Other games scheduled for Sunday in the Big Four league are: Chatham at Sikes and Kelly at Columbia.

FIVE ATHLETICS AMONG FIRST 10 BATTING LEADERS

Johnson Tops American Loop With .382; Vaughan Leads National

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania monopoly on big league batting honors became even more pronounced during the past week as the one-third of the season mile post drew near with five of the Athletics clouters in the American league's "first ten" and three representatives of the Pittsburgh Pirates and one of the Phillies in similar positions in the National league.

With the marks of many of the leaders tumbling, many of the Pennsylvania group held more prominent positions than before after Friday's games. Doc Cramer of the Athletics hopped from ninth to fifth place in the junior circuit while Jimmie Foxx and Eric McNair moved up a notch apiece despite falling averages.

John Moore of the Phillies, who had dropped clear out of the group of leaders, returned to fourth place in the National with a .322 average and Paul Waner of the Pirates slipped back in.

Arky Vaughan, the Pirates' pace setter who tops both leagues, maintained his .400 average through the week with eight hits in 20 times at bat but Bob Johnson of the A's, American league leader, hit only six times in 26 attempts and dropped from .406 to .382.

Cleveland Likely To Get Columbus Dixie Franchise

CLEVELAND Miss., June 15.—(AP)—A meeting of Cleveland business men was called today for Monday to sound out sentiment on a proposal to transfer the East Dixie league baseball franchise from Columbus to Cleveland.

Businessmen and Slim Brewer, manager of the Columbus team, and Walter Morris, promotional director of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues, conferred here today upon the proposal and agreed on Monday's meeting.

The attendance at Columbus games thus far has made the franchise there a losing proposition. Approximately $3,500 is needed to support the Red Birds for the remainder of the season, it was said.

Cleveland, with 3,800 population, is centrally located among Greenville, Greenwood and Clarksdale, East Dixie league members and this was looked to cut transportation expenses and increase attendance from nearby towns.

KELLY RETURNS WEDNESDAY TO MEET HOLMBERG

Swede Expected To Extend Clever Tennesseean In Main Event

Ernest Kelly, the most popular wrestler ever to perform at Roosevelt stadium, will return Wednesday night after an absence of more than a month to meet Swede Holmberg, tough New Yorker, in the main event of the weekly mat show at the local arena.

Kelly, who has shown local mat fans plenty of clever wrestling, will have his hands full when he tackles the big former Fordham football star. Holmberg outwitted Joe Stecher, who defeated Kelly here a month or so ago, to win a straight-fall victory over the Nebraskan last Wednesday night. True, Holmberg used dubious tactics at times against Stecher, but nevertheless he beat the man that beat Kelly.

The Tennesseean may expect the same sort of treatment at the hands of Holmberg. The Swede knows plenty of holds and he probably would be able to hold his own against some good boys by sticking strictly to business, but he prefers to mix roughness with his wrestling. In fact, his tactics against Stecher led to a near-riot last week, with Holmberg and several of the fans tangling for a moment or two. The brief battle led to charges being filed against Holmberg, and the New Yorker was arrested, but later the charges were withdrawn and all was forgiven, if not forgotten.

Kelly, of course, is well known to local fans and he always attracts a large following. He is a fast, smooth worker and is capable of putting on a clever exhibition. He has been appearing here at intervals for the past year and he apparently hasn't lost any of his supporters.

Ernest "went wild" in Shreveport recently, after taking a lot of fouls and other rough treatment from a tough opponent, and made things hot for all concerned for awhile. If Holmberg persists in following his usual tactics, the young Tennesseean may give him a dose of the same medicine. However, Ernest has always behaved himself in the local ring, despite some rather raw deals he has received at the hands of opponents.

Promoter Bruscato said last night that he was attempting to line up a good semi-final bout to complete the card. He said he hoped to get at least one new face to show the fans in the first bout.

Both matches will be best two out of three falls, with a two-hour time limit on the main event and the semi-final limited to one hour.

TECH FOOTBALL TICKET CAMPAIGN NEARS ITS GOAL

Two-Thirds Of Season Ducats Sold In Drive To Install Lights

RUSTON, La., June 15.—(Special)—With two-thirds of the season tickets already sold, a committee of local football fans is making a final effort to sell the required 500 ducats that will enable Louisiana Tech to install lights and play night football, according to Amos W. Ford chairman of the committee on football ticket sales.

President G. W. Bond stated that lights would be installed in the new stadium if $2500 could be raised by July 1. The money would be necessary in order to take care of the new equipment needed if the lights were placed in the stadium.

The new stadium now under erection at Tech will be completed by August 15 and will seat about 3,000 persons. The old bleachers, which seats about 2,000, will be placed on the opposite side of the field.

One of the most interesting football cards ever arranged by an athletic director at Louisiana Tech has been drawn up by Coach Eddie McLane and will be presented to Tech followers here this next fall. The schedule calls for seven home games out of nine tilts arranged. If the lights are put on the field all the games at home with the exception of the Homecoming game and the Thanksgiving battle will be played on Friday nights.

The complete schedule for the 1935 season follows:

Oct. 5, Tennessee Tech at Ruston; Oct. 12, Southwestern Louisiana Institute at Ruston; Oct. 19, Union University at Ruston; Oct. 26, Louisiana Normal at Ruston (Homecoming); Nov. 2, Millsaps at Ruston; Nov. 9, Mississippi College at Ruston; Nov. 23, Louisiana College at Pineville; Nov. 30, Mississippi State Teachers at Ruston; Dec. 7, University of Tampa at Tampa, Florida.

KING SAXON WINS 13TH

Driving home a length ahead of Only One, C. H. Knebelkamp's King Saxon, a former $1,400 plater, scored his thirteenth victory in 15 starts in taking the $3,750 Queens county handicap at Aqueduct. Included in the field of five rivals was Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery, which finished fifth. Above, King Saxon is shown crossing the finish ahead of Only One. Below is a closeup of the horse.

FIVE ATHLETICS AMONG FIRST 10 BATTING LEADERS

Johnson Tops American Loop With .382; Vaughan Leads National

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania monopoly on big league batting honors became even more pronounced during the past week as the one-third of the season mile post drew near with five of the Athletics clouters in the American league's "first ten" and three representatives of the Pittsburgh Pirates and one of the Phillies in similar positions in the National league.

With the marks of many of the leaders tumbling, many of the Pennsylvania group held more prominent positions than before after Friday's games. Doc Cramer of the Athletics hopped from ninth to fifth place in the junior circuit while Jimmie Foxx and Eric McNair moved up a notch apiece despite falling averages.

John Moore of the Phillies, who had dropped clear out of the group of leaders, returned to fourth place in the National with a .322 average and Paul Waner of the Pirates slipped back in.

Arky Vaughan, the Pirates' pace setter who tops both leagues, maintained his .400 average through the week with eight hits in 20 times at bat but Bob Johnson of the A's, American league leader, hit only six times in 26 attempts and dropped from .406 to .382.

The first ten regulars in each major league follow:

NATS WALLOP BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—(AP)—A trio of clouting Senators today led a 15-hit attack that netted Washington an easy 11 to 3 victory over the oft-beaten bottom-place Browns in their series opener before a ladies' day crowd of 2,500.

Two singles, a double and a triple by John Stone, a triple and two doubles by Buddy Myer, and the two home runs and a triple garnered by Jim Holbrook accounted for most of the Senator tallies.

EVANGELINE LEAGUE

(By Associated Press)

Lafayette won two games in the Evangeline league yesterday to come within a few percentage points of the league-leading Jeanerette team, which dropped a 10-inning game to Lake Charles, 7 to 6.

The second-position team took both ends of a doubleheader from Alexandria, 14 to 5 and 12 to 0. Stanley Sonnier and Lenny Rock of the Lafayette club smashed in homers, the latter driving in eight runs in the two contests.

In other games, Rayne trounced Opelousas, 4 to 1, and New Iberia took a six-inning rained-out contest from Abbeville, 1 to 0.

Cash Prizes Offered In Outboard Regatta July 4

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 15.—(Special)—Five hundred dollars in prize money will be offered here in the Independence day outboard regatta being sponsored by the Hot Springs Chamber of Commerce on Lake Hamilton, Bruce E. Wallace, general chairman of the event, announced.

The committee also announced there will be three races, each a five-mile event.

The first race will be called at 2 p.m. Several nationally known drivers are expected to participate. There will also be drivers from St. Louis, Fort Worth, Tulsa, Memphis, Shreveport, Little Rock, Camden and Smackover, as well as a number of local entries.

Besides surf board stunts, canoe joustling and swimming contests, there will be a marine parade between races.

Ouachita Valley League

TODAY'S GAMES

The improving Ruston baseball club will face the Brown Paper mill aggregation this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the Brownville diamond, providing the weather permits.

In two other Ouachita Valley league games, the Sterlington Engineers, who are crowding the Brownies for first place in the league standing, will meet the Fairbanks nine on the Sterlington diamond, and the Swartz Carbon Blackers go to Oak Grove.

The outcome of Brown's contest with Ruston and the Engineers engagement with Fairbanks is holding the interest of the league fans today as a loss by Brown and a victory by the Sterlington club would change league leadership for the first time this year.

The Browns have been tied by the Ruston club on one occasion and although they have never beaten the pace-setters of the league, the tie game has encouraged Ruston to the point where they believe they can beat Brown if they click as they have been doing lately.

The Engineers, boasting the best hitting club in the circuit, a creditable pitching staff, and the only team to beat Brown all season, doesn't intend to lose their skirmish with Fairbanks. Fairbanks, however, has a good ball club that is capable of pulling just about anything in the way of an upset and are prepared for the Engineers.

Haas And Cruickshank Beat Wethered, Dawson

RICHMOND, Va., June 15.—(AP)—Golf records aplenty were established here today as Fred Haas of New Orleans and Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond defeated Miss Joyce Wethered of England and Johnny Dawson of Chicago, 7 and 6, over the revamped James River course of the Country Club of Virginia.

It was Miss Wethered's first loss in her current tour.

Haas, here to defend his southern amateur championship next week, shot a 71, one under par, for a new amateur record for the layout. The best mark previously had been held at 72 by Earl Stokes of Louisville and Billy Howell of Richmond.

Miss Wethered, playing from the men's tees, had 81 for the 6700-yard course, the best score ever made by a woman. Her partner, Dawson, had a 74.

GREAT GOLF

SARAZEN'S DEUCE SHOT AT AUGUSTA RATED BEST IN HISTORY

By Art Krenz
(NEA Service Golf Writer)

Speaking of great golf, Gene Sarazen's double eagle two scored on the 485-yard 15th hole during the recent Bobby Jones Masters' tournament at Augusta, Ga., is the greatest of the great.

Holes in one have been made in tournament competition by Paul Runyan, Leo Diegel, Ross Somerville, and others, but none can compare with this, the outstanding shot in the history of golf.

Granted that Gene is a strong finisher, as was proved at Fresh Meadows in 1932, when he scored 66 in the final round to snatch the National Open crown away from the waiting hands of Phil Perkins, no one conceded him a chance of catching Craig Wood as he mounted the 15th tee.

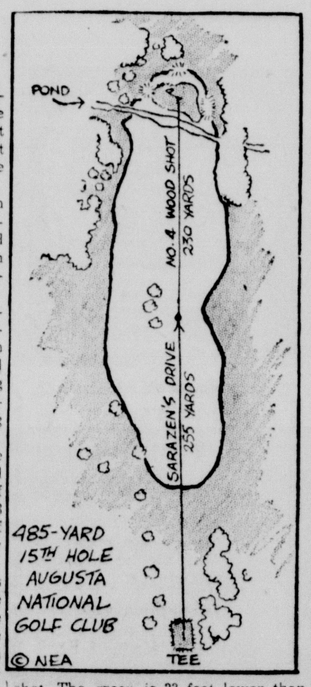
Wood finished with 282, and Gene was three strokes behind. This would necessitate shaving a like number of strokes from par, finishing in 13 strokes against perfect figures of 5-3-4-4; even then Sarazen would only tie Wood.

But the seemingly impossible has happened in sports. Touchdowns have been scored after the final whistle had blown; baseball teams have come from behind to decide the issue in the ninth; and long shots have thundered down the stretch to cross the wire a winner. And here another long shot was to decide a championship.

Hole No. 15, which was played as No. 6 last year, is described in the Augusta National program as a three-shot hole. It not only is an interesting three-shot hole, as one will be maneuvering for position from the tee onward, but it also is a sporting two-shot hole.

A skillful and courageous player is able to pull his second shot around to the green with the aid of a large hillock to the right.

A pond in front of the green provides the penalty for the long player who fails to make a perfect second shot. The green is 23 feet lower than the tee.



Gene's booming drive split the middle of the fairway and came to rest on the downward slope 255 yards from the tee, but in a cuppy lie. He first took an iron from his bag, but an iron wouldn't carry the pond, more hazardous than a trap. He then selected a spoon, and smacked the ball. Away it soared, landed on the green, and dropped into the cup for a deuce, three under par, to pick up the three needed strokes for a chance to tie Wood.

In the 36-hole playoff he defeated Wood by five strokes.

L. S. U. SENDS 3 STARS TO MEET

Tiger Trackmen Expected To Score Thirty Points At Berkeley

BERKELEY, Calif., June 15.—(Special)—Louisiana State university's three-man track team, which will compete here next Friday and Saturday in the fourteenth annual National Collegiate A. A. meet, may score as high as 30 points to finish fifth or sixth in total points, according to local observers.

Glenn "Slats" Hardin, L. S. U.'s ace performer, will defend two championships won last year at Los Angeles—the 220-yard low hurdles and the 440-yard dash. Hardin is favored to repeat his double victory this coming week-end, but has his work cut out for him in both events. If Hardin wins both events he will be the first athlete in the 14 years of the N. C. A. A. to score double victories three years running.

Ted O'Neil, L. S. U.'s half miler, has shown vast improvement this year over his performance of last season. He has a mark of 1:52.6 for the 800 meters and this performance, achieved in the Gulf Coast A. A. U. meet at Houston, Texas, a few weeks ago, is the basis for local opinion that O'Neil will finish better than fourth in the 880 in the N. C. A. A. meet.

John Sanders, third man of the Tiger trio, is expected to prove a tough customer to beat in the two-mile, yet local experts claim Sanders will be fourth or fifth in that event next Saturday.

If Hardin manages to win both events in which he will defend championships, and if O'Neil finishes third in the 880 and Sanders fourth in the two-mile, L. S. U. will amass a total of 30 points, which hardly compares with the 59 points forecasted as Southern California's share by West Coast coaches. If by any chance Hardin should not win both his events, and Sanders and O'Neil should slip back a cog or two in their specialties, L. S. U. will end up with about 20 points, which hardly will rate better than seventh or eighth, possibly as low as ninth or tenth.

Coach Bernie Moore, of L. S. U., and O'Neil and Sanders are due to arrive in Berkeley late tomorrow night from New Orleans, where they entrained Friday night. Hardin is due in Berkeley late Sunday night, as he was scheduled to take an airplane from Newark, N. J., late tonight, after competing in the Princeton University Invitational this afternoon.

Clarks Lumberjacks To Play Hodge Team Today

CLARKS, La., June 15.—(Special)—The Clarks Lumberjacks will entertain the league leading Hodge team Sunday on the local diamond. The game will be called at 3 o'clock.

D. Stone, recently added to the Clarks roster, will be on the mound for the home team with M. Delcour behind the plate. This will be Hodge's first appearance here and a large crowd is expected to see the contest.

Other games scheduled for Sunday in the Big Four league are: Chatham at Sikes and Kelly at Columbia.

Cleveland Likely To Get Columbus Dixie Franchise

CLEVELAND Miss., June 15.—(AP)—A meeting of Cleveland business men was called today for Monday to sound out sentiment on a proposal to transfer the East Dixie league baseball franchise from Columbus to Cleveland.

Businessmen and Slim Brewer, manager of the Columbus team, and Walter Morris, promotional director of the National Association of Professional Baseball leagues, conferred here today upon the proposal and agreed on Monday's meeting.

The attendance at Columbus games thus far has made the franchise there a losing proposition. Approximately $3,500 is needed to support the Red Birds for the remainder of the season, it was said.

Cleveland, with 3,800 population, is centrally located among Greenville, Greenwood and Clarksdale, East Dixie league members and this was looked to cut transportation expenses and increase attendance from nearby towns.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, June 15.—(AP)—A firm tone prevailed today in the abbreviated session of the cotton market and active months closed from 5 to 7 points higher.

As in previous sessions this week the market took its cue from weather reports, but in today's dealings they were given a bullish interpretation.

Reports of continued rains in Texas and other sections of the belt where precipitation at this time is harmful to the growing crop influenced active buying and prices worked higher.

The extremely thin market existing at this time resulted in a scarcity of contracts and buyers were forced to reach for the cotton to fill commitments.

July closed at 11.61, Oct. at 11.29 and Dec. at 11.33, week-end liquidation brought the market down from the day's high, but the close was steady.

Exports today totalled 2,794 bales.

New York

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Cotton was steadier today on commission house and foreign buying promoted by reports of excessive rains in the east and south central Texas. With offerings restricted and demand moderately active, October contracts rallied from 11.32 to 11.40 and closed at 11.36 with the general market ending steady at net advances of 7 to 9 points.

Cotton futures closed steady, 7-9 higher.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—While scattered profit taking appeared in today's brief stock market session, the general firmness of the rails kept the list in an optimistic mood. For the most part, however, gains were small. The metals were somewhat reactionary. The closing tone was fairly steady. Transfers approximated 520,000 shares.

Improvement in the labor situation was helpful to sentiment and business news was not as cloudy as had been expected in some quarters. The commerce department reported general gains in retail trade throughout the United States, but it was thought favorable weather conditions had much to do with this. Washington developments apparently were not especially exciting, market-wise.

Grains pointed downward under the influence of larger crop expectations. Cotton, on the other hand, was inclined to move forward. Carrier bonds were again in demand, although prices in other loan categories were slightly mixed. Foreign exchanges were quiet.

A number of shares establishing new highs for the year or longer, and buying of income producers was still in evidence. Philip Morris got up 2 points and gains of fractions to a point or so were recorded by Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Illinois Central, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, American Can, General Electric, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Liquid Carbonic, Wrigley and Montgomery Ward.

Uncertainty as to the treasury's future silver buying program was said to have caused some selling in the mining group. U. S. Smelting dropped about 2 points and Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting were off around a point each.

Analysts pointed out that much of the recent buying, aside from the investment factor, was the result of rapidly accumulating idle funds, the owners of which, having become tired of doing nothing with them, were willing to take a chance on equities with potential earning powers.

The demand for the higher priced stocks, brokers said, has put many of these back in the "blue chip" class where they may stay for some time, yielding less return than some bonds, because holders cannot afford to take their profits with easy money conditions being what they are.

OLDS SELECTED AS OFFICIAL CAR

Boys' Auto Club Pays Distinct Compliment To New Models

Declared to be the most unusual boys' organization in America, the Royal Lions Auto Club of Stockbridge, Michigan, has just wound up its 1936 activity by selecting Oldsmobile as its official car.

All through the school year, the 303 boys of Stockbridge High school attend weekly meetings to study automobiles. Their purpose is to fit themselves for careers in Michigan's biggest industry, automobiles.

Sales and advertising literature, engineering specifications, and service data, form a part of the course outlined by Harold Mayer, organizer and general manager. Seventy-five difficult questions must be answered by each applicant for membership. They range from "What automobiles are manufactured in America today?" to "When was knee action adopted?"

Each car is thoroughly studied during the school year. Just before summer vacation, the boys selected their "official" automobile. At this year's voting Oldsmobile ranked first.

The club was organized six years ago. Since that time Mayer has gathered a vast library on automobile information. This literature is loaned to the members so they may study the cars, sales methods and advertising procedure.

In addition to the school room, which has been turned over for a meeting place, the club maintains an office for the general manager in one of the buildings on his father's farm near Stockbridge.

"It is the finest idea since the Boy Scouts," says Chester Morse, principal of the high school, in announcing that official credit may be given next year for work in the club.

USED CARS ARE RE-CONDITIONED

Chevrolet Institutes Campaign To Tell Of Pledge Of Dealers

To raise used car advertising and merchandising to new standards of excellence and dignity, the nation-wide dealer organization of the Chevrolet Motor company has arranged for a cooperative national campaign in newspapers and magazines. The advertising will carry to the public the pledge of the dealer organization that all its members will stand back of the used cars they sell. That is, used car prospects are to receive the same assurance that is given to purchasers of new cars—that the car has been tested, tuned, and conditioned, and is ready to give satisfactory service.

The national used car advertising campaign will supplement the local newspaper advertising of the dealer, just as Chevrolet's national advertising supplements local new car copy. In addition, display copy, to be localized with the dealers' names and a listing of their used car offerings, will be supplied to dealers for their insertion in their newspapers.

W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, in announcing the new approach to used car merchandising, pointed out that ten years ago Chevrolet and its dealer organization pioneered in raising the standards of the used car business, and in dignifying it in accordance with its importance to the dealers and the industry as a whole.

"Ten years ago," said Mr. Holler, "we instituted the now famous 'red tag' guarantee as a means of certifying used cars as worthy of the buyer's confidence. The tag is the dealer's assurance that the used car is exactly as represented. Now we are going to make the red tag familiar to additional millions of newspaper and magazine readers, and impress upon them that the tag is a certificate of merit. In Sunday newspapers and in magazines, the tag will be reproduced in color, full size, so that all may read its list of 20 units or operations that the Chevrolet dealer guarantees to have been checked before the car is offered for sale.

"Actually, the merchandising of used cars is a gigantic business. Among our own dealers alone, it represented in 1934 the sale of 1,160,000 vehicles. Our dealers have decided, therefore, that it is as worthy of display advertising to all our dealers, mats of well displayed used car advertisements, to give the dealers an opportunity to raise this branch of their activity to the high plane that it deserves to occupy."

PONTIAC SALES TAKE BIG JUMP

More Cars Built In May Than In Any Month Since June, 1929

PONTIAC, Mich., June 15.—(Special)—In May the Pontiac Motor company built more cars than in any single month since June of 1929, H. J. Klingler, president and general manager announced today.

Output for the months was 19,406 units, bringing total production of 1935 models through May to 89,964 cars or approximately 20 per cent more than were produced in the full 12 months of last year, Mr. Klingler stated. May this year exceeded the combined total for May of the two previous years. Last May Pontiac built 7,129 models, he said.

A significant factor in this year's performance to date is that not since the boom years has May production gone ahead of April, normally the peak month of the year. Yet this May—so insistent has been the retail demand—the Pontiac plant operated at its highest possible capacity and turned out 700 more cars in the month just ended than in April.

Several times during May the number of cars manufactured in one day crossed the 1,000 mark.

"Our problem so far this year has been one of building sufficient automobiles to meet the retail demand," said Mr. Klingler. "Each month, as we have become more familiar with the manufacturing processes involved, we have succeeded in turning out more cars than in the preceding month.

"By reason of our high May output dealers are now in a position to make quick delivery of practically any production model.

"To obviate any car shortage in the future, we are now going ahead with a $3,500,000 expansion program which will about double the capacity of our plants. The added facilities will be ready for production in the fall.

"During the past five or six years our company has hit the year's peak in April, and suffered a fairly sharp drop in output going into May, and from May into June. This year we not only set a new year's high in May, but we are going ahead on a June schedule very close to the May figure, and one which shows a much-less-than-seasonal recession for this period of the year.

"Barring an unexpected interruption in the retail demand, we expect to have no trouble realizing our year's quota of 150,000 cars—and perhaps with something to spare."

SYNDICATE HAS FINE STATEMENT

Report Of Investors Syndicate Indicates Efficient Management

The 1934 statement of condition of Investors Syndicate should bring to their more than 200,000 certificate holders throughout the United States and Canada a satisfying sense of security and peace of mind—a feeling of the soundness and proven stability of the company in which they have expressed their confidence.

During its entire history, year in and year out, Investors Syndicate has maintained an unbroken record of progress, regardless of good times or bad.

The company's record during the past five depression years proves the soundness of its plan of operations and the conservative policy of its management. During this time its liquid position was substantially strengthened, its total resources were almost doubled and every obligation was met promptly, when due.

In the recent depression period of general uncertainty, Investors Syndicate disbursed to its certificate holders a total of more than $40,000,000—in sums that meant to many the difference between actual charity and independence of conditions. Some of this money went toward the college education of young men and women preparing themselves for life's battles. Some aided in the purchase of homes or helped to free them from debt. To some, it meant food, clothing, shelter—comfortable and carefree old age, at a time when a person of 60 or 65 without means of support, was unquestionably a burden upon relatives or friends.

In all, this vast sum proved a bulwark of living protection between these people and the emergencies which arose.

Investors Syndicate's 1934 statement shows a substantial strengthening of its liquid position as an added protection to its certificate holders. Cash, high grade bonds and marketable securities were increased from $13,517,806.45 at the close of 1933, to $24,026,775.32 as of December 31, 1934, totaling 38.8 per cent of the company's resources.

Total resources at the end of 1934 amounted to $61,905,167.22, as shown in the accompanying statement, an increase of $7,390,316.96 over the previous year.

From the date of its founding in 1894, Investors Syndicate has paid every obligation promptly when due.

They are proud of this record.

John S. Fox, district manager, heads the Investors Syndicate organization in this territory.

Mileage Hints

By J. F. Winchester, S.A.E.
Supervisor of Motor Vehicle Equipment, Standard Oil Company of Louisiana

MOST every driver knows that there are available summer and winter grades of lubricants. The use of the lighter and freer flowing lubricants is not recommended for warm weather driving. Therefore, it is not only advisable but necessary for efficient operation to change your lubricants at this time of the year.

The transmission and differential should be first on the list after the crankcase oil has been changed. Don't merely drain the old lubricant and put in summer grease; but also have the crankcase and differential flushed. A good cleaning will be worth the few cents it costs.

After this has been done lubricate the clutch release bearing, the universals and the clutch operating system. This will insure freedom from clutch troubles.

Many motorists who are handy around a car remove the wheels each spring and clean and lubricate the bearings. If you can't do this yourself, it will pay you to have it done. Remember, though, that some rear wheel bearings are lubricated by your differential lubricant, thus making it unnecessary to remove the rear wheels. And while you're at it, don't forget to give some attention to lubricating the king pins, tie rod ends and steering gear.

CARE URGED IN USE OF MATCHES

Simple Matter To Be Careful, Warns Downes Brokerage, Inc.

In an ancient religious rite, citizens stood at equal intervals, forming a chain. The one nearest the altar lighted a torch, then ran and gave it to the next, who in turn passed it on to the third, and so on. Each man ran without looking back. His sole interest was to pass on the flaming symbol, according to Downes Brokerage, Inc., insurance agents.

These citizens were warned against fumbling the torch. And "Don't fumble the torch" is a good axiom to apply to modern times. The "torch," in this connection, is very small—a match—but what terrible havoc is wrought when it is fumbled. Tall buildings are razed, homes destroyed, virgin forests laid waste, and worst of all, hundreds of human lives are lost by fire every year. The toll of fire from the careless use of matches, and from smoking, in 1932 was almost $30,000,000, according to figures compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

And yet—what a simple matter it is to be careful. The extra seconds required to make certain that butts or matches are completely extinguished are well spent when you consider what may happen if the torch is fumbled. Just place your heel on the butt and crush out every spark, or if it is a match, break it between your fingers. You fumble only when you toss them away carelessly. Don't do it!

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, June 15.—(AP)—A firm tone prevailed today in the abbreviated session of the cotton market and active months closed from 5 to 7 points higher.

As in previous sessions this week the market took its cue from weather reports, but in today's dealings they were given a bullish interpretation.

Reports of continued rains in Texas and other sections of the belt where precipitation at this time is harmful to the growing crop influenced active buying and prices worked higher.

The extremely thin market existing at this time resulted in a scarcity of contracts and buyers were forced to reach for the cotton to fill commitments.

July closed at 11.61, Oct. at 11.29 and Dec. at 11.33, week-end liquidation brought the market down from the day's high, but the close was steady.

Exports today totalled 2,794 bales.

New York

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—Cotton was steadier today on commission house and foreign buying promoted by reports of excessive rains in the east and south central Texas. With offerings restricted and demand moderately active, October contracts rallied from 11.32 to 11.40 and closed at 11.36 with the general market ending steady at net advances of 7 to 9 points.

Cotton futures closed steady, 7-9 higher.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, June 15.—(AP)—While scattered profit taking appeared in today's brief stock market session, the general firmness of the rails kept the list in an optimistic mood. For the most part, however, gains were small. The metals were somewhat reactionary. The closing tone was fairly steady. Transfers approximated 520,000 shares.

Improvement in the labor situation was helpful to sentiment and business news was not as cloudy as had been expected in some quarters. The commerce department reported general gains in retail trade throughout the United States, but it was thought favorable weather conditions had much to do with this. Washington developments apparently were not especially exciting, market-wise.

Grains pointed downward under the influence of larger crop expectations. Cotton, on the other hand, was inclined to move forward. Carrier bonds were again in demand, although prices in other loan categories were slightly mixed. Foreign exchanges were quiet.

A number of shares establishing new highs for the year or longer, and buying of income producers was still in evidence. Philip Morris got up 2 points and gains of fractions to a point or so were recorded by Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Illinois Central, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, American Can, General Electric, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Liquid Carbonic, Wrigley and Montgomery Ward.

Uncertainty as to the treasury's future silver buying program was said to have caused some selling in the mining group. U. S. Smelting dropped about 2 points and Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting were off around a point each.

Analysts pointed out that much of the recent buying, aside from the investment factor, was the result of rapidly accumulating idle funds, the owners of which, having become tired of doing nothing with them, were willing to take a chance on equities with potential earning powers.

The demand for the higher priced stocks, brokers said, has put many of these back in the "blue chip" class where they may stay for some time, yielding less return than some bonds, because holders cannot afford to take their profits with easy money conditions being what they are.

INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

Boys' Auto Club Pays Distinct Compliment To New Models

Declared to be the most unusual boys' organization in America, the Royal Lions Auto Club of Stockbridge, Michigan, has just wound up its 1936 activity by selecting Oldsmobile as its official car.

All through the school year, the 303 boys of Stockbridge High school attend weekly meetings to study automobiles. Their purpose is to fit themselves for careers in Michigan's biggest industry, automobiles.

Sales and advertising literature, engineering specifications, and service data, form a part of the course outlined by Harold Mayer, organizer and general manager. Seventy-five difficult questions must be answered by each applicant for membership. They range from "What automobiles are manufactured in America today?" to "When was knee action adopted?"

Each car is thoroughly studied during the school year. Just before summer vacation, the boys selected their "official" automobile. At this year's voting Oldsmobile ranked first.

The club was organized six years ago. Since that time Mayer has gathered a vast library on automobile information. This literature is loaned to the members so they may study the cars, sales methods and advertising procedure.

In addition to the school room, which has been turned over for a meeting place, the club maintains an office for the general manager in one of the buildings on his father's farm near Stockbridge.

"It is the finest idea since the Boy Scouts," says Chester Morse, principal of the high school, in announcing that official credit may be given next year for work in the club.

USED CARS ARE RE-CONDITIONED

Chevrolet Institutes Campaign To Tell Of Pledge Of Dealers

To raise used car advertising and merchandising to new standards of excellence and dignity, the nation-wide dealer organization of the Chevrolet Motor company has arranged for a cooperative national campaign in newspapers and magazines. The advertising will carry to the public the pledge of the dealer organization that all its members will stand back of the used cars they sell. That is, used car prospects are to receive the same assurance that is given to purchasers of new cars—that the car has been tested, tuned, and conditioned, and is ready to give satisfactory service.

The national used car advertising campaign will supplement the local newspaper advertising of the dealer, just as Chevrolet's national advertising supplements local new car copy. In addition, display copy, to be localized with the dealers' names and a listing of their used car offerings, will be supplied to dealers for their insertion in their newspapers.

W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager of Chevrolet, in announcing the new approach to used car merchandising, pointed out that ten years ago Chevrolet and its dealer organization pioneered in raising the standards of the used car business, and in dignifying it in accordance with its importance to the dealers and the industry as a whole.

"Ten years ago," said Mr. Holler, "we instituted the now famous 'red tag' guarantee as a means of certifying used cars as worthy of the buyer's confidence. The tag is the dealer's assurance that the used car is exactly as represented. Now we are going to make the red tag familiar to additional millions of newspaper and magazine readers, and impress upon them that the tag is a certificate of merit. In Sunday newspapers and in magazines, the tag will be reproduced in color, full size, so that all may read its list of 20 units or operations that the Chevrolet dealer guarantees to have been checked before the car is offered for sale.

"Actually, the merchandising of used cars is a gigantic business. Among our own dealers alone, it represented in 1934 the sale of 1,160,000 vehicles. Our dealers have decided, therefore, that it is as worthy of display advertising to all our dealers, mats of well displayed used car advertisements, to give the dealers an opportunity to raise this branch of their activity to the high plane that it deserves to occupy."

PONTIAC SALES TAKE BIG JUMP

More Cars Built In May Than In Any Month Since June, 1929

PONTIAC, Mich., June 15.—(Special)—In May the Pontiac Motor company built more cars than in any single month since June of 1929, H. J. Klingler, president and general manager announced today.

Output for the months was 19,406 units, bringing total production of 1935 models through May to 89,964 cars or approximately 20 per cent more than were produced in the full 12 months of last year, Mr. Klingler stated. May this year exceeded the combined total for May of the two previous years. Last May Pontiac built 7,129 models, he said.

A significant factor in this year's performance to date is that not since the boom years has May production gone ahead of April, normally the peak month of the year. Yet this May—so insistent has been the retail demand—the Pontiac plant operated at its highest possible capacity and turned out 700 more cars in the month just ended than in April.

Several times during May the number of cars manufactured in one day crossed the 1,000 mark.

"Our problem so far this year has been one of building sufficient automobiles to meet the retail demand," said Mr. Klingler. "Each month, as we have become more familiar with the manufacturing processes involved, we have succeeded in turning out more cars than in the preceding month.

"By reason of our high May output dealers are now in a position to make quick delivery of practically any production model.

"To obviate any car shortage in the future, we are now going ahead with a $3,500,000 expansion program which will about double the capacity of our plants. The added facilities will be ready for production in the fall.

"During the past five or six years our company has hit the year's peak in April, and suffered a fairly sharp drop in output going into May, and from May into June. This year we not only set a new year's high in May, but we are going ahead on a June schedule very close to the May figure, and one which shows a much-less-than-seasonal recession for this period of the year.

"Barring an unexpected interruption in the retail demand, we expect to have no trouble realizing our year's quota of 150,000 cars—and perhaps with something to spare."

SYNDICATE HAS FINE STATEMENT

Report Of Investors Syndicate Indicates Efficient Management

The 1934 statement of condition of Investors Syndicate should bring to their more than 200,000 certificate holders throughout the United States and Canada a satisfying sense of security and peace of mind—a feeling of the soundness and proven stability of the company in which they have expressed their confidence.

During its entire history, year in and year out, Investors Syndicate has maintained an unbroken record of progress, regardless of good times or bad.

The company's record during the past five depression years proves the soundness of its plan of operations and the conservative policy of its management. During this time its liquid position was substantially strengthened, its total resources were almost doubled and every obligation was met promptly, when due.

In the recent depression period of general uncertainty, Investors Syndicate disbursed to its certificate holders a total of more than $40,000,000—in sums that meant to many the difference between actual charity and independence of conditions. Some of this money went toward the college education of young men and women preparing themselves for life's battles. Some aided in the purchase of homes or helped to free them from debt. To some, it meant food, clothing, shelter—comfortable and carefree old age, at a time when a person of 60 or 65 without means of support, was unquestionably a burden upon relatives or friends.

In all, this vast sum proved a bulwark of living protection between these people and the emergencies which arose.

Investors Syndicate's 1934 statement shows a substantial strengthening of its liquid position as an added protection to its certificate holders. Cash, high grade bonds and marketable securities were increased from $13,517,806.45 at the close of 1933, to $24,026,775.32 as of December 31, 1934, totaling 38.8 per cent of the company's resources.

Total resources at the end of 1934 amounted to $61,905,167.22, as shown in the accompanying statement, an increase of $7,390,316.96 over the previous year.

From the date of its founding in 1894, Investors Syndicate has paid every obligation promptly when due.

They are proud of this record.

John S. Fox, district manager, heads the Investors Syndicate organization in this territory.

Mileage Hints

By J. F. Winchester, S.A.E.
Supervisor of Motor Vehicle Equipment, Standard Oil Company of Louisiana

MOST every driver knows that there are available summer and winter grades of lubricants. The use of the lighter and freer flowing lubricants is not recommended for warm weather driving. Therefore, it is not only advisable but necessary for efficient operation to change your lubricants at this time of the year.

The transmission and differential should be first on the list after the crankcase oil has been changed. Don't merely drain the old lubricant and put in summer grease; but also have the crankcase and differential flushed. A good cleaning will be worth the few cents it costs.

After this has been done lubricate the clutch release bearing, the universals and the clutch operating system. This will insure freedom from clutch troubles.

Many motorists who are handy around a car remove the wheels each spring and clean and lubricate the bearings. If you can't do this yourself, it will pay you to have it done. Remember, though, that some rear wheel bearings are lubricated by your differential lubricant, thus making it unnecessary to remove the rear wheels. And while you're at it, don't forget to give some attention to lubricating the king pins, tie rod ends and steering gear.

CARE URGED IN USE OF MATCHES

Simple Matter To Be Careful, Warns Downes Brokerage, Inc.

In an ancient religious rite, citizens stood at equal intervals, forming a chain. The one nearest the altar lighted a torch, then ran and gave it to the next, who in turn passed it on to the third, and so on. Each man ran without looking back. His sole interest was to pass on the flaming symbol, according to Downes Brokerage, Inc., insurance agents.

These citizens were warned against fumbling the torch. And "Don't fumble the torch" is a good axiom to apply to modern times. The "torch," in this connection, is very small—a match—but what terrible havoc is wrought when it is fumbled. Tall buildings are razed, homes destroyed, virgin forests laid waste, and worst of all, hundreds of human lives are lost by fire every year. The toll of fire from the careless use of matches, and from smoking, in 1932 was almost $30,000,000, according to figures compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

And yet—what a simple matter it is to be careful. The extra seconds required to make certain that butts or matches are completely extinguished are well spent when you consider what may happen if the torch is fumbled. Just place your heel on the butt and crush out every spark, or if it is a match, break it between your fingers. You fumble only when you toss them away carelessly. Don't do it!

PLAYGROUNDS ARE OPENED SATURDAY

Good Attendance Marks Beginning Of Recreation Activities Here

In observance of Children's day, which was celebrated all over the nation, the municipal playgrounds of Monroe were thrown open for the summer of 1935 yesterday. Despite the fact that the weather was unsettled, there was a good attendance and much interest was shown. The opening day's program was chiefly that of enrollment, Miss Lucyle Godwin, director of the Monroe recreation department reported.

The leaders at the playgrounds were as follows;

Lida Benton school, Mrs. Hallean Hall, Miss Jimmy Walters; Georgia Tucker school, Miss Katherine White, Miss Dorothy Calvert, J. W. Walters; Clarkdull Faulk school, Miss Alice Pinebeck, Mrs. H. S. Chilton; Sherrouse school, Mrs. Thelma Carson, Beryl Morris; St. Matthew's school, Mrs. Winnie Hackworth, Miss Marrin Shadberry, Dickie Eason, junior girl leader, Lou Walters.

Mrs. Charles Hill will have charge of stories and dramatics. Delbert Evans will also instruct in dramatics and in the making of puppets.

Nick Inzina and Roy Youngblood will have charge of baseball games played on the Missouri Pacific recreation center grounds near the Missouri Pacific station.

With the exception of the Sherrouse school playground, all will be open from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., but the Sherrouse ground will be used only in the afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, Miss Godwin said.

Originally it had been planned to use the campus of the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university as a playground but this was abandoned due to the fact that most of the children are small and would be compelled to cross DeSiard road, which is a dangerous street with heavy traffic at most hours of the day. This danger, it is said, will be minimized through the use of the Sherrouse school campus.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE OPENED SATURDAY

ood Attendance Marks Beginning Of Recreation Activities Here

In observance of Children's day, hich was celebrated all over the ation, the municipal playgrounds of onroe were thrown open for the mmer of 1935 yesterday. Despite the ct that the weather was unsettled, re was a good attendance and much terest was shown. The opening day's rogram was chiefly that of enrollent, Miss Lucyle Godwin, director f the Monroe recreation department eported.

The leaders at the playgrounds ere as follows:

Lida Benton school, Mrs. Hallean all, Miss Jimmy Walters; Georgia ucker school, Miss Katherine White, iss Dorothy Calvert, J. W. Walters; arkdull Faulk school, Miss Alice inebeck, Mrs. H. S. Chilton; Sherouse school, Mrs. Thelma Carson, eryl Morris; St. Matthew's school, iss Winnie Hackworth, Miss Marrin rasberry, Dickie Eason, junior girl eader, Lou Walters.

Mrs. Charles Hill will have charge f stories and dramatics. Delbert vans will also instruct in dramatics nd in the making of puppets.

Nick Inzina and Roy Youngblood ill have charge of baseball games layed on the Missouri Pacific recreation center grounds near the Missouri Pacific station.

With the exception of the Sherrouse chool playground, all will be open rom 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., but the Sherouse ground will be used only in the fternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, Miss odwin said.

Originally it had been planned to se the campus of the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university as playground but this was abandoned due to the fact that most of the hildren are small and would be ompelled to cross DeSiard road, which is a dangerous street with eavy traffic at most hours of the ay. This danger, it is said, will be liminized through the use of the herrouse school campus.

COTTON SCHOOL STARTS MONDAY

Limit Of 35 Set For Attendance; Examinations Will Be Given

The cotton classing school will open in the office of Mark Stroud at 111 1-2 South Grand street, at 9 a.m. Monday.

This school is conducted by the department of agriculture, cooperating agents and the Louisiana Cotton Cooperative association, according to an announcement made by E. R. Strahan, Ouachita parish farm demonstration agent. There is no tuition charge.

The school will be conducted for the purpose of aiding farmers and ginners to appreciate better grades of cotton and to enable cotton buyers to add to their knowledge of this staple product.

A full set of United States standard cotton samples and 2,000 practice samples have been received to be used in cotton classing.

At the close of the school, which will last one week, examinations will be given to those desiring to qualify for licenses as cotton classers.

Only 35 can be accommodated, Mr. Strahan said, and he expects that there will be this number enrolled at the time of opening of the school.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING HELD BY LOGTOWN CLUB

An enthusiastic meeting of the Logtown Home Demonstration club was held at the home of Mrs. W. W. McDonald, with Mrs. Jewel McQuiller, parish home demonstration agent, presenting the club with an automatic can sealer, the second sweepstakes prize of the recent flower and vegetable show held here.

Mrs. McQuiller also presented to 18 members of the club slips of paper entitling them to individual prizes won at the show. She also complimented the club on the booth it installed at the show and which won the highest rating of the club booths.

Initial preparations for participating in the Ouachita Valley Fair later this year were discussed by the agent, and recipes for brining cabbage and cucumbers were also discussed by her.

It was decided at the club meeting that Mrs. W. J. Lowe will have charge of the organization's cooker and sealer. Her home is centrally located among the club members.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Neal McHenry.

FOUR DAYS AND SCAT!

A loving scene, this one, but it lasted only long enough for Lona Andre to say "scat." Married to Edward Norris, actor shown here with her after the ceremony, the "panther woman" repented in haste, suing for divorce four days later. She says she discovered a few minutes after marriage that her husband had "overrated his ability to provide her with necessities and luxuries."

15-Year-Old Lad Captures Big Gar In Ouachita River

Some of the Inzina children and one of their friends, Millard Carr, 14, yesterday were probably relating to youngsters about their neighborhood here the thrills of participating in and witnessing a two-hour battle on the Ouachita river with a six and one-half foot gar caught on a small hook baited with a tiny bream.

The battle pitted the strength of a 15-year-old youngster holding a two-for-a-nickel bamboo fishing pole against the strength of an 86-pound monster of the river deeps, and ended with one of the elder children of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Inzina coming to the rescue and firing six bullets from a single-shot .22 caliber rifle at the mighty gar.

The fish was captured after the battle extended over a mile and a half of the river surface, after the thin bamboo pole had several times been torn from the hands of the 15-year-old youngster, after bullets from the small-bore rifle caused a cessation of the wild movements of the fish which at times hurled the gar against the fishermen's boat in an attack on his adversaries.

The battle began on the river adjacent to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Inzina, 819 South Grand street, Friday afternoon. John Inzina, 15, was fishing for gar—just for pastime and sport. He was in a boat on the river, and Millard Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Carr, 103 Bright avenue, was rowing the boat.

John held in his hands the small bamboo pole. The hook at the end of the line was tied to a one-foot piece of copper wire, so that a big gar, if caught on the hook, would not break the line.

The strike was made, and the gar began pulling the boat crazily about the river. Young Inzina had no line to play out to the monster, and sensing that he would soon have to release the pole, he called out for help.

One of the elder brothers, Joe Inzina, 20, heard the cries and ran to the river bank and ascertained the nature of the difficulty. Joe began bailing out a boat at the edge of the river and dispatched one of the younger Inzinas, a lad of 10 years, to their home for the purpose of obtaining the .22 rifle.

With the rifle in the boat, Joe hastily paddled out into the river, and before long fired the first bullet into the gar.

The fish remained under the water for 15 or 20 minutes at a time, and each time it came up for air the .22 rifle cracked and a bullet pierced its scaly armor.

In a desperate fury, the gar several times attacked the boat in which John and the Carr lad were riding out the fight. Such efforts on the part of the gar, however, only jarred the boat.

Finally, after the fight had extended to a point past the curve in the river at Lazarre's point, the gar ceased its struggles and was captured.

DISTRICT COURT PENALTIES METED

Sentences Passed Here Upon Nine Persons By Judge J. T. Shell

Sentences were passed by Judge J. T. Shell in the district court here yesterday in the cases of nine defendants convicted in a special term of the court last week.

This morning members of the sheriff's department will leave here with a group of prisoners in custody bound for the state penitentiary at Angola, where the prisoners are to serve their sentences.

The sentences were passed yesterday as follows: H. O. Brown, John Lacey and Dave Bradshaw, negroes, and Maximo Martinez, Mexican, sale of marijuana cigarets, each 20 months to 60 months; Teddy Smith and Leon Nettles negroes, larceny of an ox, each 1 year; Napoleon Johnson and Charles Baker, negroes, burglary of a school house, each 2 years; Eddie Bosworth, burglary of a dwelling in the daytime, 2 years.

Sentences in the cases of several other defendants convicted in the special term are yet to be passed. The principal one of these cases is that of Ollie Brandon, negro, found guilty of the slaying of James Ivey, negro.

Prisonels who are to be carried to the state penitentiary today, and their sentences, are: LeRoy Jackson, negro, shooting with intent to murder, 4 to 15 years; Cecil Williams, robbery, 4 to 12 years; Floyd Hollis, negro, larceny, 6 to 18 months; Dupree Senter, negro, breaking and entering in the night, 3 years; Jessie Miles, negro, robbery, four and two-thirds years to 14 years; Troy Ragus, forgery, 1 year; Dan Watson, negro robbery, 3 to 9 years; Teddy Smith, negro, larceny of an ox, 1 year.

BANKHEAD APPLICATION PERIOD ENDS SATURDAY

The deadline for filing applications for Bankhead cotton tax exemption certificates closed yesterday, with approximately 1,200 Ouachita parish farmers having filed applications, it was learned from E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent.

About 50 farmers of the parish who hold cotton acreage reduction contracts with the federal government failed to make applications for tax exemption certificates before the period for filing the applications closed.

These farmers are advised to communicate immediately with Mr. Strahan. Although the application period has closed, employes of the agent's office will be engaged during the next several days in checking the applications filed late in the application period, and forwarding them to the state office at Baton Rouge. In these several days the agent will seek to obtain for the farmers who failed to file their applications such consideration as can be given them.

ERA SCHOLARSHIPS TO TULANE ARE AWARDED

Scholarships in the Tulane university school for social workers have just been awarded through the federal government to a number of persons who have been identified with ERA activities, Miss Rebecca Cassell, district ERA manager located in Monroe, said yesterday.

This will be the third group to be awarded scholarships, Miss Cassell said. They will start their courses tomorrow and the work will end on July 27.

Those to be given scholarships are the following: Mrs. Marion Crandell, Miss Jimmie Dooley, Joseph Winkler, and Frank Breese from Ouachita parish.

From other parishes the awards have been to the following: Union parish, Miss Mildred Roberts; Morehouse parish, Miss Lena Mae Domino; Caldwell parish, Miss Edna Ruth Lee; Lincoln parish, Miss Elizabeth Nobles.

Home Club Members To Attend Annual Picnic Next Thursday

The annual achievement day picnic of home demonstration clubs of Ouachita parish will be held next Thursdty at Mayor Arnold Bernstein's country home, located on Bayou DeSiard north of the Northeast Center of Louisiana State university.

Members of the clubs and their families will assemble at the home in the morning, prior to the beginning of the program at 11 a.m. A picnic dinner will be served at noon, and the day's activities will close about 2:30 or 3 p.m.

The program will be featured by the annual reports of nutrition leaders of the clubs, bringing to a close a year's project in nutrition.

Each club member is to bring a picnic dinner to the celebration, and in addition, two barbecued young goats, contributed by Herman M. McGuire, will be served.

An interesting recreation program for both children and adults will be in the charge of Mrs. J. B. Landreaux, leader of the Ouachita Parish Recreation council.

Although Midway island is 1,149 miles distant, it is part of the city and county of Honolulu.

EX-GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY DIES

Edwin P. Morrow Drops Dead Of Heart Attack At Home Of Cousin

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 15.—(AP)—Former Governor Edwin P. Morrow of Kentucky dropped dead of heart attack here today.

Morrow, who was 58 years old, died unexpectedly at the home here of Mrs. John G. South, his cousin, with whom he had been visiting.

Prominent in Kentucky and national politics for many years, he served as governor of Kentucky from 1919 to 1923.

He had been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the Republican nomination as governor this year but recently announced he would not run.

The year after the expiration of his term as governor he was appointed a member of the federal railway labor board, serving until 1926 when he was appointed to the railroad mediation board.

Considered one of Kentucky's most eloquent orators, Morrow was belowed by the mauntaineers especially for his championship of "Old Dog Ring." In his campaign for governor he promised to free the mountaineers' dog "from the shackles" of the state license tax.

He returned to Kentucky's political ward in 1934 when he unsuccessfully sought the Republican nomination for congressman in the ninth district.

COTTON SCHOOL STARTS MONDAY

Limit Of 35 Set For Attendance; Examinations Will Be Given

The cotton classing school will open in the office of Mark Stroud at 111 1-2 South Grand street, at 9 a.m. Monday.

This school is conducted by the department of agriculture, cooperating agents and the Louisiana Cotton Cooperative association, according to an announcement made by E. R. Strahan, Ouachita parish farm demonstration agent. There is no tuition charge.

The school will be conducted for the purpose of aiding farmers and ginners to appreciate better grades of cotton and to enable cotton buyers to add to their knowledge of this staple product.

A full set of United States standard cotton samples and 2,000 practice samples have been received to be used in cotton classing.

At the close of the school, which will last one week, examinations will be given to those desiring to qualify for licenses as cotton classers.

Only 35 can be accommodated, Mr. Strahan said, and he expects that there will be this number enrolled at the time of opening of the school.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING HELD BY LOGTOWN CLUB

An enthusiastic meeting of the Logtown Home Demonstration club was held at the home of Mrs. W. W. McDonald, with Mrs. Jewel McQuiller, parish home demonstration agent, presenting the club with an automatic can sealer, the second sweepstakes prize of the recent flower and vegetable show held here.

Mrs. McQuiller also presented to 18 members of the club slips of paper entitling them to individual prizes won at the show. She also complimented the club on the booth it installed at the show and which won the highest rating of the club booths.

Initial preparations for participating in the Ouachita Valley Fair later this year were discussed by the agent, and recipes for brining cabbage and cucumbers were also discussed by her.

It was decided at the club meeting that Mrs. W. J. Lowe will have charge of the organization's cooker and sealer. Her home is centrally located among the club members.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. Neal McHenry.

15-Year-Old Lad Captures Big Gar In Ouachita River

Some of the Inzina children and one of their friends, Millard Carr, 14, yesterday were probably relating to youngsters about their neighborhood here the thrills of participating in and witnessing a two-hour battle on the Ouachita river with a six and one-half foot gar caught on a small hook baited with a tiny bream.

The battle pitted the strength of a 15-year-old youngster holding a two-for-a-nickel bamboo fishing pole against the strength of an 86-pound monster of the river deeps, and ended with one of the elder children of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Inzina coming to the rescue and firing six bullets from a single-shot .22 caliber rifle at the mighty gar.

The fish was captured after the battle extended over a mile and a half of the river surface, after the thin bamboo pole had several times been torn from the hands of the 15-year-old youngster, after bullets from the small-bore rifle caused a cessation of the wild movements of the fish which at times hurled the gar against the fishermen's boat in an attack on his adversaries.

The battle began on the river adjacent to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Inzina, 819 South Grand street, Friday afternoon. John Inzina, 15, was fishing for gar—just for pastime and sport. He was in a boat on the river, and Millard Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Carr, 103 Bright avenue, was rowing the boat.

John held in his hands the small bamboo pole. The hook at the end of the line was tied to a one-foot piece of copper wire, so that a big gar, if caught on the hook, would not break the line.

The strike was made, and the gar began pulling the boat crazily about the river. Young Inzina had no line to play out to the monster, and sensing that he would soon have to release the pole, he called out for help.

One of the elder brothers, Joe Inzina, 20, heard the cries and ran to the river bank and ascertained the nature of the difficulty. Joe began bailing out a boat at the edge of the river and dispatched one of the younger Inzinas, a lad of 10 years, to their home for the purpose of obtaining the .22 rifle.

With the rifle in the boat, Joe hastily paddled out into the river, and before long fired the first bullet into the gar.

The fish remained under the water for 15 or 20 minutes at a time, and each time it came up for air the .22 rifle cracked and a bullet pierced its scaly armor.

In a desperate fury, the gar several times attacked the boat in which John and the Carr lad were riding out the fight. Such efforts on the part of the gar, however, only jarred the boat.

Finally, after the fight had extended to a point past the curve in the river at Lazarre's point, the gar ceased its struggles and was captured.

Vacations Begin To Lure Monroe Residents From Home

Social Activities Not Hampered By Summer

Meeting Of Clubs Held; One Dance Revue Is Presented And Another Scheduled; Dance, Party Given

By Eve C. Bradford

Summer progresses and once again the stage is set for the vacation drama. Nature has taken over the chairmanship of the committee on decorations and the whole world has been transformed into a scene of panoramic beauty. Each year, when the heat waves commence to close in on us, we are consumed with a sudden urge to go where there is a complete change in climate, altitude, scene and interest. The annual trek has already set in and before the summer is over the vast majority will have discovered the tonic of travel, the cure-all properties of salt sprays, shimmering lakes in the hills, babbling mountain brooks, the strength of the mountains and the blessed comfort of calm, peaceful days at sea with nothing to mar the vision but a cloud of trailing smoke on the far horizon.

Many Monroe vacationists are looking forward to towering mountains, where they can pause to marvel at the panorama below. Others are anticipating the pastoral valley, where they can rest beside some bubbling stream. Others are boarding ocean liners to spend lazy days in contemplation of nothing more serious than the next meal or the tiny island lying far off to starboard.

Nature has indeed been kind to this little section of the world. Vacation travel can begin within a day's distance from Monroe. At nightfall, motorists find themselves in the Ozark mountains, equal in picturesque beauty to the Rockies. You have never seen the real beauty of the clouds until you stand on Inspiration Point and watch the ever-shifting towering white banks marching along the blue of the sky—miles high, gleaming with dazzling purity in the sun or with silver sheen in the moonlight.

The Ozarks, in the vicinity of Bella Vista, claim Monroe people year after year. Mr. and Mrs. John Breard are anticipating a blissful vacation at Bella Vista in the Central Savings bank cottage on Louisiana mountain. Of course, their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Scott Hamilton of New Orleans, will be with them and together they will roam the pine clad hills. Like Wordsworth, they will gather a fine harvest from common nature, birds and wayside flowers and the undertone of streams." Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dunaway and their son, Robert, will motor through Yellowstone park, world-known for scenic beauty. They will drink in the Alpine air at Lake Louise and then motor along the famous Columbia river. Miss Maible Hood and Mrs. Dora Anish will also seek far-off peaks. They are leaving next month for Seattle, and then, via steamer, to Alaska, land of enchantment. Miss Beryl Madison and her mother, Mrs. Flood Madison, will spend their summer along the quiet countryside of England and in London where sufficient color and tense, dramatic moments sufficient to last a life time will be offered the American tourist. The twenty-fifth anniversary of King George's reign will be in progress at this time.

For those who remain at home this summer, there will be day dreaming. Like the author, Thoreau, they can sit on their doorstep and dream of distant places. For the majority, there will be no time for musings, if one can judge from the brimming social calendar. Life will flow along as customary at Lakeside Country club, with barbecues, bridge tournaments, dancing parties, stag suppers and golf claiming daily attention.

The river offers greater allure as summer advances and many a "ship passes in the night and salutes each other in passing." The "Goofus" will dip its prow into the dark waters of the Ouachita daily now that Pollyanna has arrived home from Sweet Brier with her lovely roommate, Claire Handerson of Cleveland, Ohio. Six more college mates will arrive on Wednesday and the family silver is being polished for their arrival.

Two more weddings and then magic of June will give way to the prosaic month of July. Helen Jones will walk altarward on the twenty-sixth and Florence Ferguson on the twenty-ninth. In the meantime, the pot-pourri of pre-nuptial affairs will continue.

The glamour of the Haas-Snyder nuptials has not yet worn off. Never have so many beautiful women tread the boards of the Cherokee terrace, where the brilliant reception was held. Daisy Haas, a picture in black velvet coat concealing a summery flowered chiffon frock standing between her two handsome sons, Morris, Jr., and Kramer; Talitha Downs, who has most certainly found the fountain of youth, trailing chiffon draperies down the receiving line; the bride's mother, altogether lovely in blue chiffon; the bridegroom's mother, adding lustre to the receiving line with the radiance of her smile; Rowena Arant, wearing to perfection a sapphire blue lace model; Mrs. Arnold Bernstein, her flawless beauty enhanced by a blue crepe model with roses at her throat; a striking-looking visitor, Mrs. George Elstun, in pastel flowered taffeta; the bride herself, dancing a few steps with David before departing on the honeymoon.

Shirley, so unaffected and disliking so thoroughly all form of ostentation, has suddenly come into possession of some handsome jewelry. Of course, you saw that superb diamond brooch David gave her as a wedding gift? Heretofore she has refused all gifts of jewelry from her parents.

Can you imagine Jane Colbert stealing a march on her friends? Jane, so frank, suddenly became secretive and became Mrs. Samuel Jones before her best friends were even aware of her intentions. The magic of June is to blame.

Fort Miro chapter, D. A. R., met at the chapter house on the courthouse square Saturday afternoon. The meeting was opened with an impressive prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Ida Williams. The business session was presided over by the first vice regent, Mrs. Clarence Faulk, Sr.

The report of the nominating committee resulted in the unanimous election of the following officers for next year: Regent, Mrs. Clarence Faulk, Sr.; first vice regent, Mrs. A. E. Montgomery; second vice regent, Mrs. W. E. Leigh; recording secretary, Mrs. Lewis Slator; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter McGee; treasurer, Mrs. Milling Bernstein.

Various committees and chapter chairmen were appointed and plans outlined for a most comprehensive program of work and study for next year.

Mrs. Joseph Renwick brought a most inspiring message of the national conference held in Washington in April. A delightful paper on "National Parks in the United States," prepared by Mrs. R. B. Reeves of Oak Grove, was read by Mrs. C. M. Flower.

At the close of the program, the hostesses, Mrs. W. E. Leigh, Mrs. Elmer Slagle and Mrs. J. R. Wooten, served delicious refreshments to the following members: Mrs. Ida Williams, Mrs. Joe Renwick, Mrs. C. M. Flower, Mrs. Henrietta Coon, Mrs. Eunice Williamson, Mrs. David Garrett, Mrs. W. J. Tremaine, Miss Wanda Tremaine, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. C. E. Faulk, Mrs. Lewis Slator, Mrs. Herbert Steed.

The Garden club meeting for June was held in Mrs. T. C. Rowland's beautiful garden. Mrs. Rowland presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. R. Wooten, and Mrs. Fred Fudiker acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Fred Hanna.

The club will continue its meetings in the garden of some member the first Friday of each month at nine o'clock in the morning during July and August.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Elmer Richards; first vice-president, Mrs. Allan Sholars; second vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Faulk; third vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Rowland; secretary, Mrs. F. A. Reynolds; treasurer, Mrs. B. W. Leigh.

Mrs. Richards, the president, announced the board of managers, which consists of the officers and chairman of the standing members, as follows: Program committee, Mrs. John Breard; exhibit committee, Mrs. Charles Flower; exchange committee, Mrs. H. W. Engstrom; press committee, Mrs. J. W. Worthington; laboratory, Mrs. Jewell McQuiller; civic, Mrs. J. R. Wooten; junior garden club, Miss Lucylle Goodwin; historian, Mrs. Lizzie McGuire; librarian, Mrs. B. A. Trousdale.

There are several other committees to be appointed later, after a board meeting to formulate future plans for the year, the activities are to be enlarged into many civic projects, parks and highways for the coming year.

A garden club will awaken an interest in one of the finest and most satisfying phases of national life, that of producing beauty, which, after all, is one of the greatest of three attributes of life, goodness, truth and beauty. The material success of a club depends upon getting over to the members the greatest fund of practical knowledge available and teaching them how to apply it to conditions.

It has been stated by many men of authority that the work of the garden clubs of this country is of equal value to that of the chambers of commerce. The garden clubs are composed of men and women who intelligently recognize the asset of natural beauties, and because of their growing members they are coming to have a powerful influence in the betterment of America and American life.

A general feeling has seemed to prevail that garden clubs are for women. This is to be deplored and every community will find it of value to encourage garden, horticultural and landscape interest among men as well as women. In England, Italy, Germany, Holland, France and Japan, gardening has for centuries been considered one of man's most worthy recreations. The result is picturesque countries that attract thousands of American tourists, who willingly pay large sums to see beautiful, picturesque and gardened homes.

If America is to become known for her gardened homes and beautiful countrysides, it will be necessary to awaken the interest of men as well as women in each community.

Highway beautification is an essential part of the program of a garden club or state clubs, to enhance the cultural value of American life. Men's clubs, women's clubs and garden clubs can sponsor no greater course. More than 40,000,000 persons will be benefited annually by such efforts. Roadside attractiveness should be the aim of every community, for whatever protects and increases the beauty of the state will build up its reputation and citizenship, thereby bringing gain to all its homes and industries.

Miss Teresa Turk presented her pupils in her first annual dance revue at the Strand theater Wednesday and Thursday. Matinee and night programs were presented each day.

The skillful manner in which the various dances were executed reflected considerable credit upon the instructor, whose ability as a danseuse has long been recognized in this city.

Outstanding, perhaps, was the acrobatic work and the cleverly presented adagio. Miss Turk's toe number was the highlight of the program.

The finale was rather unique as it brought the entire dancing class on the stage in glittering costumes reminiscent of precious jewels. Each dancer stepped forth from a huge treasure chest presided over by Billy Register in pirate costume. The program follows;

Vacations Begin To Lure Monroe Residents From Home

Social Activities Not Hampered By Summer

Meeting Of Clubs Held; One Dance Revue Is Presented And Another Scheduled; Dance, Party Given

By Eve C. Bradford

Summer progresses and once again the stage is set for the vacation drama. Nature has taken over the chairmanship of the committee on decorations and the whole world has been transformed into a scene of panoramic beauty. Each year, when the heat waves commence to close in on us, we are consumed with a sudden urge to go where there is a complete change in climate, altitude, scene and interest. The annual trek has already set in and before the summer is over the vast majority will have discovered the tonic of travel, the ture-all properties of salt sprays, shimmering lakes in the hills, babbling mountain brooks, the strength of the mountains and the blessed comfort of calm, peaceful days at sea with nothing to mar the vision but a cloud of trailing smoke on the far horizon.

Many Monroe vacationists are looking forward to towering mountains, where they can pause to marvel at the panorama below. Others are anticipating the pastoral valley, where they can rest beside some bubbling stream. Others are boarding ocean liners to spend lazy days in contemplation of nothing more serious than the next meal or the tiny island lying far off to starboard.

Nature has indeed been kind to this little section of the world. Vacation travel can begin within a day's distance from Monroe. At nightfall, motorists find themselves in the Ozark mountains, equal in picturesque beauty to the Rockies. You have never seen the real beauty of the clouds until you stand on Inspiration Point and watch the ever-shifting, towering white banks marching along the blue of the sky—miles high, gleaming with dazzling purity in the sun or with silver sheen in the moonlight.

The Ozarks, in the vicinity of Bella Vista, claim Monroe people year after year. Mr. and Mrs. John Breard are anticipating a blissful vacation at Bella Vista in the Central Savings bank cottage on Louisiana mountain. Of course, their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Scott Hamilton of New Orleans, will be with them and together they will roam the pine clad hills. Like Wordsworth, they will "gather a fine harvest from common nature, birds and wayside flowers and the undertone of streams." Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dunaway and their son, Robert, will motor through Yellowstone park, world-known for scenic beauty. They will drink in the Alpine air at Lake Louise and then motor along the famous Columbia river. Miss Maible Hood and Mrs. Dora Anish will also seek far-off peaks. They are leaving next month for Seattle, and then, via steamer, to Alaska, land of enchantment. Miss Beryl Madison and her mother, Mrs. Flood Madison, will spend their summer along the quiet countryside of England and in London where sufficient color and tense, dramatic moments sufficient to last a life time will be offered the American tourist. The twenty-fifth anniversary of King George's reign will be in progress at this time.

For those who remain at home this summer, there will be day dreaming. Like the author, Thoreau, they can sit on their doorstep and dream of distant places. For the majority, there will be no time for musings, if one can judge from the brimming social calendar. Life will flow along as customary at Lakeside Country club, with barbecues, bridge tournaments, dancing parties, stag suppers and golf claiming daily attention.

The river offers greater allure as summer advances and many a "ship passes in the night and salutes each other in passing." The "Goofus" will dip its prow into the dark waters of the Ouachita daily now that Pollyanna has arrived home from Sweet Brier with her lovely roommate, Claire Handerson of Cleveland, Ohio. Six more college mates will arrive on Wednesday and the family silver is being polished for their arrival.

Two more weddings and then magic of June will give way to the prosaic month of July. Helen Jones will walk altarward on the twenty-sixth and Florence Ferguson on the twenty-ninth. In the meantime, the pot-pourri of pre-nuptial affairs will continue.

The glamour of the Haas-Snyder nuptials has not yet worn off. Never have so many beautiful women tread the boards of the Cherokee terrace, where the brilliant reception was held. Daisy Haas, a picture in black velvet coat concealing a summery flowered chiffon frock standing between her two handsome sons, Morris, Jr., and Kramer; Talitha Downs, who has most certainly found the fountain of youth, trailing chiffon draperies down the receiving line; the bride's mother, altogether lovely in blue chiffon; the bridegroom's mother, adding lustre to the receiving line with the radiance of her smile; Rowena Arant, wearing to perfection a sapphire blue lace model; Mrs. Arnold Bernstein, her flawless beauty enhanced by a blue crepe model with roses at her throat; a striking-looking visitor, Mrs. George Elstun, in passtel flowored taffeta; the bride herself, dancing a few steps with David before departing on the honeymoon.

Shirley, so unaffected and disliking so thoroughly all form of ostentation, has suddenly come into possession of some handsome jewelry. Of course, you saw that superb diamond brooch David gave her as a wedding gift? Heretofore she has refused all gifts of jewelry from her parents.

Can you imagine Jane Colbert stealing a march on her friends? Jane, so frank, suddenly became secretive and became Mrs. Samuel Jones before her best friends were even aware of her intentions. The magic of June is to blame.

Fort Miro chapter, D. A. R., met at the chapter house on the courthouse square Saturday afternoon. The meeting was opened with an impressive prayer by the chaplain, Mrs. Ida Williams. The business session was presided over by the first vice regent, Mrs. Clarence Faulk, Sr.

The report of the nominating committee resulted in the unanimous election of the following officers for next year: Regent, Mrs. Clarence Faulk, Sr.; first vice regent, Mrs. A. E. Montgomery; second vice regent, Mrs. W. E. Leigh; recording secretary, Mrs. Lewis Slator; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter McGee; treasurer, Mrs. Milling Bernstein.

Various committees and chapter chairmen were appointed and plans outlined for a most comprehensive program of work and study for next year.

Mrs. Joseph Renwick brought a most inspiring message of the national conference held in Washington in April. A delightful paper on "National Parks in the United States," prepared by Mrs. R. B. Reeves of Oak Grove, was read by Mrs. C. M. Flower.

At the close of the program, the hostesses, Mrs. W. E. Leigh, Mrs. Elmer Slagle and Mrs. J. R. Wooten, served delicious refreshments to the following members: Mrs. Ida Williams, Mrs. Joe Renwick, Mrs. C. M. Flower, Mrs. Henrietta Coon, Mrs. Eunice Williamson, Mrs. David Garrett, Mrs. W. J. Tremaine, Miss Wanda Tremaine, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. C. E. Faulk, Mrs. Lewis Slator, Mrs. Herbert Steed.

The Garden club meeting for June was held in Mrs. T. C. Rowland's beautiful garden. Mrs. Rowland presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. J. R. Wooten, and Mrs. Fred Fudiker acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Fred Hanna.

The club will continue its meetings in the garden of some member the first Friday of each month at nine o'clock in the morning during July and August.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Elmer Richards; first vice-president, Mrs. Allan Sholars; second vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Faulk; third vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Rowland; secretary, Mrs. F. A. Reynolds; treasurer, Mrs. B. W. Leigh.

Mrs. Richards, the president, announced the board of managers, which consists of the officers and chairman of the standing members, as follows: Program committee, Mrs. John Breard; exhibit committee, Mrs. Charles Flower; exchange committee, Mrs. H. W. Engstrom; press committee, Mrs. J. W. Worthington; laboratory, Mrs. Jewell McQuiller; civic, Mrs. J. R. Wooten; junior garden club, Miss Lucylle Goodwin; historian, Mrs. Lizzie McGuire; librarian, Mrs. B. A. Trousdale.

There are several other committees to be appointed later, after a board meeting to formulate future plans for the year, the activities are to be enlarged into many civic projects, parks and highways for the coming year.

A garden club will awaken an interest in one of the finest and most satisfying phases of national life, that of producing beauty, which, after all, is one of the greatest of three attributes of life, goodness, truth and beauty. ## Snyder-Haas Wedding Solemnized At Temple

Miss Swansea Campbell Married At Home Of Parents To H. M. Branch; Miss Colbert Weds Samuel Jones

A fashionable concourse of guests that filled to capacity the generous proportions of Temple B'Nai Israel, was present to witness the impressive double-ring, wine ceremony that united in marriage Miss Shirley Haas, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Aubrey Haas of this city, and Mr. David Snyder, son of Mrs. Charles Snyder of Bastrop, La., Wednesday night, June the twelfth, at eight o'clock.

The setting for the ceremony was one of charming simplicity, with southern smilax tracing its sinuous length from the organ loft to the altar below, where an immense sheaf of waxen Ascension lilies were thrown in bas-relief against luxuriant palms and ferns. A low hedge of Shasta daisies outlined the organ loft and were caught to the pews set aside for the family with bows of misty tulle.

Myriad white cathedral tapers in white candelabrum pricked the shadowy recesses of the altar.

Mr. Leon Hammond, at the organ, rendered a brilliant nuptial concert while the guests were assembling. He also accompanied the soloists, Mr. Harry Prophit, who sang "I Love You Truly," and Mrs. Henry Cohn of Baton Rouge, who sang "Because."

The wedding retinue walked down the white carpeted aisle to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March.

The bridesmaids, Miss Polly Heninger, Miss Nanette Selig and Miss Hilda Simon of Alexandria, wore diaphanous frocks of lime yellow chiffon with shoulder capes of yellow taffeta. They carried arm bouquets of yellow daisies tied with streamers of yellow satin ribbon. The matron of honor, Mrs. David Kaplan, sister of the bridegroom, and the maid-of-honor, Miss Sarah Louise Greer of Denison, Texas, wore poudre blue chiffon frocks with capes of blue taffeta. They carried arm bouquets of blue daisies tied with blue tulle.

The flower girl, Shirley Kaplan, wore a lovely little French frock of lime yellow chiffon and taffeta and carried in her arms a bouquet of yellow daisies. The handsome young ring bearer was Harry Hammill, Jr.

The bridegroom's attendants, Messers. David Kaplan, Morris Haas, Jr., Julius Cahn, Jr., Sol Snyder, Norman Goldberg, Herman Goldberg and the best man, Mr. Sampson Snyder, wore black trousers and white tuxedos, de rigueur of southern summertime weddings.

The bride, walking with her father, wore the traditional ivory satin wedding gown fashioned along medieval lines, with high Marie Antoinette collar of Alencon lace framing her face and forming the bodice and puffed sleeves. The skirt, appliqued with lace, touched the floor and formed a short train. The handsome rose point wedding veil was caught to the hair coronet fashion with a spray of orange blossoms. For sentimental reasons, a handsome ivory prayer book used by the bride's mother on her wedding day was carried. A cluster of valley lilies and white bride's roses fell in shower effect from between the covers. Her only ornament was a beautiful diamond brooch, a gift from the bridegroom. For something old, the bride carried her maternal grandmother's lace handkerchief, which has been in the family for seventy years.

Following the ceremony, a brilliant reception was held on the Cherokee terrace of the Frances hotel, where considerable beauty of decoration prevailed. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder stood with their wedding attendants while friends pressed forward to extend well wishes and felicitations.

In the receiving party were the bride's parents and the bridegroom's mother and other family connections. Mrs. Haas wore a charming Madelon blue chiffon evening model with wide satin sash of rose pink. An exquisite corsage of pink Columbia roses and blue forget-me-nots was worn. Mrs. Snyder wore a handsome evening model of dusty pink Alencon lace with corsage of roses. Others receiving were: Mr. and Mrs. Morris Goldberg of Louisville, Ky. Mrs. Goldberg wore a gold-colored chiffon model. Mr. and Mrs. Gus Gehr of Alexandria. Mrs. Gehr wore a pastel blue chiffon evening model. Mr. Sigmund Haas, grandfather of the bride, also assisted in receiving. Others who assisted in the courtesies were: Mrs. Morris Haas, in dusty pink lace evening model; Mrs. George Elstrun, in picturesque frock of pastel flowered taffeta; Mrs. Mires Jackson, in black net and chiffon evening model; Mrs. Julius Cahn, in blue and pink flowered chiffon; Mrs. Leo Gold of Alexandria, in plaid organza; Mrs. Mendel Herschberg of Louisville, Ky., in crimson and white evening model; Mrs. Harry Simon of Alexandria, in Madelon blue chiffon; Mrs. Eugene Levy of Alexandria, in green organza; Mrs. W. G. Gehr, in pastel blue chiffon; Mrs. Meyer Weiss of Beaumont, Texas, in yellow lace; Miss Pauline Doris Levy of Alexandria, in red and white organza; Mrs. Sybil Hammill of Alexandria, in navy blue mousseline; Miss Carol Lefkowitz of Beaumont, Texas, in yellow crepe evening model; Miss Carolyn Rosenthal of Baton Rouge, in apple green chiffon.

The bride's table, covered with handsome Renaissance lace, was one of the beauty spots. A tall crystal epergne, overflowing with valley lilies and white roses, centered the table. Silver candelabrum, supporting tall white Princess tapers, were placed at intervals along the board. The wedding cake, a confection of supreme artistry, graced one end of the table and was cut by the bride before departure. It was three tiered and surmounted with a cluster of white crystalized roses. Each tier was edged with a frieze of valley lilies and white rose buds. White-clad attendants served ices and petit fours embossed in white and green mints. Frosted claret punch was served throughout the evening from immense crystal bowls placed at vantage points on the terrace. A six-piece orchestra supplied music for the dancing that continued until a late hour.

The bride changed her wedding raiment for a smart Eisenberg model of navy blue triple sheer with crimson and white blouse. A corsage of white bride's roses was worn. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder are spending their honeymoon in Colorado Springs and upon return will be at home to their friends in Bastrop, where a beautifully-furnished home awaits them.

The bride, a young woman of distinctive personality and rare charm, is a member of an old Monroe family, members of which have played an important part for many years in the social and civic life of the city. She attended Lindinwood college, St. Charles, Mo. The family of Mr. Snyder has also played an important part in the civic and social life of this community. He attended the University of Louisville and is now identified with the Snyder interests of Bastrop.

The lavish display of handsome wedding gifts and numerous pre-nuptial courtesies extended the young couple, attest to their popularity.

Friends and relatives from various sections of the country were in attendance at the wedding.

A wedding characterized by lovely simplicity and impressiveness was solemnized when Miss Swansea Campbell, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Campbell, and Mr. H. M. Branch were united in marriage at nine o'clock in the morning Friday, June the fourteenth, at the home of the bride's parents.

The fireplace flanked with ferns and urns filled with hydrangeas and radiance roses created an ideal background for the double-ring ceremony. Rev. I. L. Yeager, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church and a lifelong friend of the bride, performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of the immediate family and a few intimate friends.

The bride wore a smart ensemble of light blue Jallierd crepe and white chiffon with asseccories of white. Her hat was of white cellophane straw, trimmed with light blue velvet ribbon and forget-me-nots. A corsage of pink radiance roses and valley lilies completed the becoming ensemble.

Following the ceremony, the bride presented her mother with her wedding corsage and changed her wedding raiment for a blue tailleur and a close fitting hat of Milam straw with short veil.

Mr. and Mrs. Branch left by automobile for a honeymoon trip on the coast. En route they will visit Mr. Branch's people near Bogalusa, Louisiana.

They will be at home to their friends with Mrs. Branch's parents for the time being at 200 Lidell avenue.

Mr. Branch has been associated with Louisiana Stores for the past eight and a half years. He is a graduate of Draughns Business college of Jackson, Mississippi.

Mrs. Branch attended Indiana university at Bloomington, Indiana. She is also a graduate of Indiana Central Business college of Indianapolis and is affiliated with the Delta Gamma sorority.

The sincere and affectionate interest of friends in this city is centered in the following announcement:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Colbert announce the marriage of their daughter
Jane deLacy
to
Mr. Samuel A. Jones
Friday, June the fourteenth, at
Grace Episcopal church.

The wedding of this young couple, popular members of Monroe's younger set, comes as a complete surprise. Only the members of the family were present to witness the ceremony performed by Dr. E. F. Hayward, rector of Grace church.

The bride wore a smart navy blue angel skin crepe model with accessories of white. An exquisite corsage of valley lilies added a distinctive touch.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for a short motor tour in south Louisiana, and upon their return will be at home in an apartment on North Second street.

The bride, a great favorite in this city, where she was born and reared, possesses a magnetic personality. She attended Stevens college, Columbia, Mo., and is a member of Beta Pi Epsilon sorority. Mr. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dudley Jones, formerly of Dallas, Texas, is associated with the firm of Jones and Bland in the contracting business. He is a graduate of the Neville High school and attended Northeast Center of L. S. U.

Illuminating the entire week, socially, with its charm and beauty of appointment was the buffet supper, Tuesday night, with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Haas and their sons, Messers. Morris, Jr., and Kramer Haas, entertaining in honor of Miss Shirley Haas and Mr. David Snyder and their wedding retinue following rehearsal at the temple.

Mrs. Haas, mingling with the guests in the rose-banked reception suite, wore a lovely blue chiffon evening model. Miss Haas wore one of her beautiful trousseau frocks, a crimson chiffon model with white accessories.

Guests, upon arrival, enjoyed refreshing cocktails and a luscious array of hors d'ouevres, served in the sun parlor, where Mr. Haas and his sons presided with characteristic geniality.

Supper was served buffet style in the dining room. The table, overlaid with handsome Renaissance lace, was beautifully appointed. The arrangement of the flowers was unusually artistic. Pink sweet peas and pink Columbia roses overflowed in pyramid effect from a Dresden epergne. Small bowls, alternating in size and overflowing with sweet peas and roses, were looped together with maiden hair fern down the full length of the table. In the midst of the blossoms, tall pink tapers gleamed.

The delicious food was arranged in the most appetizing manner on silver salvers and placed on the buffet for the convenience of the guests.

The gracious hospitality came as a fitting climax to a series of beautiful pre-nuptial affairs honoring this popular young couple, whose marriage Wednesday night was one of the most brilliant events of the entire year.

A charming compliment to Miss Helen Jones, a lovely bride-to-be, was Mrs. J. W. Kilbourne's and Mrs. Richard Troy's afternoon bridge on Wednesday.

A yellow theme was sustained in the yellow linens covering the card tables and the beautiful yellow china pitcher presented to Miss Nanette Selig for high bridge score. The favors, claimed by Miss Ruth Shephard, Mrs. Allen Kimball and Mrs. H. M. Butler, were yellow crystal vases of classic design overflowing with bright yellow blossoms. The confectionery course, yellow wedding bell ices and petit fours embossed in yellow, also sustained the chosen color theme.

The courtesies of the afternoon were climaxed by a kitchen "shower" for Miss Jones, featuring yellow porcelain ware, exclusively. The guests, in addition to Miss Jones, were Miss Mary Trousdale, Miss Ruth Shephard, Miss Nanette Selig, Mrs. A. Boyd, Mrs. R. C. Sparks, Jr., Mrs. Allen Kimball, Mrs. H. M. Butler, Mrs. T. C. Pembertor, Mrs. H. Carpenter, Mrs. Darwin Nichols, Mrs. W. Lovett, Mrs. H. M. Butler and Mrs. F. A. Jones.

Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Jarrell, assisted by Mr. John Cahn, entertained with an al fresco supper in the charming environs of the Jarrell garden Thursday night complimentary to Miss Florence Ferguson and her fiance, Mr. Victor Davis.

Delectable barbecued meat, crisp and brown from the glowing coals, was the piece de resistance of the supper served at long tables covered with blue and white checked linens. A delectable array of food was arranged buffet style for the guests, who numbered, in addition to Miss Ferguson and Mr. Davis, Miss Ann Barnett and Benjamin Dawkins, Jr., Miss Violet Meyer and Dr. Prentice Gray, Miss Connie McReynolds and James Sparks, Mrs. Granville Tierney and Gilbert Faulk, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Allen, Mr. and Mrs. John Theus, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Shafto, Miss Nina Holt Reddith and John Cahn and Miss Happy Tidwell and King Stubbs.

Yesterday's compliment to Miss Ferguson was a luncheon, with Mrs. T. O. Bancroft, hostess at her home on St. John Drive.

Miss Jean Ford, daughter of Mr. J. T. Ford, and a member of this year's graduating class of the Neville High school, was the winner in Louisiana of the state award in the national essay contest on "The Value of Time in Education," which was inaugurated during the spring semester by the International Business Machines corporation in commemoration of the establishment of the first American high school three hundred years ago. The local judges were Mrs. Charles Kenney, Mrs. Alf Reid, Mrs. Austin Miller, Mrs. Theo Terzia and Miss Mary Hester.

Approximately thirty thousand essays were submitted by high school students in all parts of the United States. The best essay from each state was selected for the award of an inscribed watch to the winning student and an athletic event timer to the winning school.

Paul Bleider, a senior of Elk Mound, Wis., won the national award, a four-year tuition scholarship in a college of his choice.

Miss Ford, discussing "The Value of Time in Education," said in part:

"Education is the art of transforming life from unrealized situatons nto more idealized conditions. It requires much time and effort to develop young people physically, mentally and emotionally. Those who are too hasty in training fail to enrich their earlier years with accumulated knowledge and to develop motive power necessary for genuine happiness and usefulness. A worthwhile education, acquired early in life, furnishes substantial mental material which helps to determine ideals, interests, abilities and actions. Education cannot be given away. It is a task that continues day after day, month after month, and year after year.

"Through years of studying, reading and traveling, young people become more cultured and appreciative of things good and beautiful. Firmly believing in the greatness of community and world citizenship, they train themselves for their part in the society in which they must live. They strive to live a life of service and to improve conditions for mankind, because years of thoughtful training have convinced them that service is the truest test and measure of greatness.

"People become educated by understanding and appreciating the motives, ideals, and work of their fellow-beings. They are happiest while they are busy with some type of creative work which requires untold hours of their own time and effort.

"It requires years to develop varied worthwhile interests and abilities, to shape character, and to fire ambitions to be able to do, at least, one thing well. Since young people of today should assume great responsibilities in return for their many opportunities, it is necessary that they be well informed on present day affairs, both economic and social, in order that they may finally be capable of helping to solve these problems in such a way that their generation may make some permanent contribution to civilization.

"Wise young people look to the future and make definite plans for their work; they build conscientiously and thoroughly. They take time to analyze themselves and correct defects in their character that might mar or retard their future progress. They realize that time is not their toy but their greatest wealth which should be used thoughtfully in developing good lives of service and happiness."

A distinct tribute was paid to the late Mrs. Alex Block of Memphis, Tenn., when she was likened to Jane Addams, in an article appearing in the Press-Scimitar.

Mrs. Block, well known in this city, where she visited on numerous occasions in the home of Mrs. Brisco Trousdale, was a social service worker and founder of the Jewish Neighborhood House of Memphis.

Mrs. Block was serving her fourth year as president of the Temple Sisterhood when illness forced her to resign. She was a member of the board of the Temple Children of Israel and was active in many capacities concerned with the church.

Twenty-five years ago, she saw there was a great necessity for taking care of needy members of the Jewish faith. She worked with a small group and organized the Jewish Neighborhood House at 291 Market.

She saw the Jewish Neighborhood House grow large enough to be favorably compared with Hull House, organized by the late Jane Addams in Chicago. It is one of the city's most active community centers. Mrs. Block was placed on the advisory board of the house last week.

Miss Armandine Renaud and Miss Irene Quinn Renaud will motor early in July to New York City, where, as customary each year, they will receive dance instruction under Madame Serova and the world famous dancing master, DeMuth. En route home, they will attend the convention of the Dancing Masters of America in Chicago. Miss Armandine Renaud is a member of this association. Others in the motor party and studying dancing in New York will be Miss Mary Ann Wilds, Miss Fabol Powell and Misses Teresa and Mary Turk.

A charming little supper party Thursday night brought a few close friends and college classmates together in the home of Miss Joy Steele.

Luscious food was served buffet style to Miss Georgia Cole, Miss Sarah Talbert, Miss Happy Tidwell, Mr. Alvah Learned, Mr. Burton Wolf, Mr. Melvin Anish, Mr. Gilbert Wolf, Mr. Charles Stuart and Mr. Vernon Lee Cour.

Others who assisted in the courtesies were: Mrs. Morris Haas, in dusty pink lace evening model; Mrs. George Elstrun, in picturesque frock of pastel flowered taffeta; Mrs. Mires Jackson, in black net and chiffon evening model; Mrs. Julius Cahn, in blue and pink flowered chiffon; Mrs. Leo Gold of Alexandria, in plaid organza; Mrs. Mendel Herschberg of Louisville, Ky., in crimson and white evening model; Mrs. Harry Simon of Alexandria, in Madelon blue chiffon; Mrs. Eugene Levy of Alexandria, in green organza; Mrs. W. G. Gehr, in pastel blue chiffon; Mrs. Meyer Weiss of Beaumont, Texas, in yellow lace; Miss Pauline Doris Levy of Alexandria, in red and white organza; Mrs. Sybil Hammill of Alexandria, in navy blue mousseline; Miss Carol Lefkowitz of Beaumont, Texas, in yellow crepe evening model; Miss Carolyn Rosenthal of Baton Rouge, in apple green chiffon.

The bride's table, covered with handsome Renaissance lace, was one of the beauty spots. A tall crystal epergne, overflowing with valley lilies and white roses, centered the table. Silver candelabrum, supporting tall white Princess tapers, were placed at intervals along the board. The wedding cake, a confection of supreme artistry, graced one end of the table and was cut by the bride before departure. It was three tiered and surmounted with a cluster of white crystalized roses. Each tier was edged with a frieze of valley lilies and white rose buds. White-clad attendants served ices and petit fours embossed in white and green mints. Frosted claret punch was served throughout the evening from immense crystal bowls placed at vantage points on the terrace. A six-piece orchestra supplied music for the dancing that continued until a late hour.

The bride changed her wedding raiment for a smart Eisenberg model of navy blue triple sheer with crimson and white blouse. A corsage of white bride's roses was worn. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder are spending their honeymoon in Colorado Springs and upon return will be at home to their friends in Bastrop, where a beautifully-furnished home awaits them.

The bride, a young woman of distinctive personality and rare charm, is a member of an old Monroe family, members of which have played an important part for many years in the social and civic life of the city. She attended Lindinwood college, St. Charles, Mo. The family of Mr. Snyder has also played an important part in the civic and social life of this community. He attended the University of Louisville and is now identified with the Snyder interests of Bastrop.

The lavish display of handsome wedding gifts and numerous pre-nuptial courtesies extended the young couple, attest to their popularity.

Friends and relatives from various sections of the country were in attendance at the wedding.

A wedding characterized by lovely simplicity and impressiveness was solemnized when Miss Swansea Campbell, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Campbell, and Mr. H. M. Branch were united in marriage at nine o'clock in the morning Friday, June the fourteenth, at the home of the bride's parents.

The fireplace flanked with ferns and urns filled with hydrangeas and radiance roses created an ideal background for the double-ring ceremony. Rev. I. L. Yeager, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church and a life-long friend of the bride, performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of the immediate family and a few intimate friends.

The bride wore a smart ensemble of light blue Jallierd crepe and white chiffon with asseccories of white. Her hat was of white cellophane straw, trimmed with light blue velvet ribbon and forget-me-nots. A corsage of pink radiance roses and valley lilies completed the becoming ensemble.

Following the ceremony, the bride presented her mother with her wedding corsage and changed her wedding raiment for a blue tailleur and a close fitting hat of Milam straw with short veil.

Mr. and Mrs. Branch left by automobile for a honeymoon trip on the coast. En route they will visit Mr. Branch's people near Bogalusa, Louisiana.

They will be at home to their friends with Mrs. Branch's parents for the time being at 200 Lidell avenue.

Mr. Branch has been associated with Louisiana Stores for the past eight and a half years. He is a graduate of Draughns Business college of Jackson, Mississippi.

Mrs. Branch attended Indiana university at Bloomington, Indiana. She is also a graduate of Indiana Central Business college of Indianapolis and is affiliated with the Delta Gamma sorority.

The sincere and affectionate interest of friends in this city is centered in the following announcement:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Colbert announce the marriage of their daughter
to
Mr. Samuel A. Jones
Friday, June the fourteenth, at
Grace Episcopal church.

The wedding of this young couple, popular members of Monroe's younger set, comes as a complete surprise. Only the members of the family were present to witness the ceremony performed by Dr. E. F. Hayward, rector of Grace church.

The bride wore a smart navy blue angel skin crepe model with accessories of white. An exquisite corsage of valley lilies added a distinctive touch.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Jones left for a short motor tour in south Louisiana, and upon their return will be at home in an apartment on North Second street.

The bride, a great favorite in this city, where she was born and reared, possesses a magnetic personality. She attended Stevens college, Columbia, Mo., and is a member of Beta Pi Epsilon sorority. Mr. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dudley Jones, formerly of Dallas, Texas, is associated with the firm of Jones and Bland in the contracting business. He is a graduate of the Neville High school and attended Northeast Center of L. S. U.

Illuminating the entire week, socially, with its charm and beauty of appointment was the buffet supper, Tuesday night, with Mr. and Mrs. Morris Haas and their sons, Messers. Morris, Jr., and Kramer Haas, entertaining in honor of Miss Shirley Haas and Mr. David Snyder and their wedding retinue following rehearsal at the temple.

Mrs. Haas, mingling with the guests in the rose-banked reception suite, wore a lovely blue chiffon evening model. Miss Haas wore one of her beautiful trousseau frocks, a crimson chiffon model with white accessories.

Guests, upon arrival, enjoyed refreshing cocktails and a luscious array of hors d'ouevres, served in the sun parlor, where Mr. Haas and his sons presided with characteristic geniality.

Supper was served buffet style in the dining room. The table, overlaid with handsome Renaissance lace, was beautifully appointed. The arrangement of the flowers was unusually artistic. Pink sweet peas and pink Columbia roses overflowed in pyramid effect from a Dresden epergne. Small bowls, alternating in size and overflowing with sweet peas and roses, were looped together with maiden hair fern down the full length of the table. In the midst of the blossoms, tall pink tapers gleamed.

The delicious food was arranged in the most appetizing manner on silver salvers and placed on the buffet for the convenience of the guests.

The gracious hospitality came as a fitting climax to a series of beautiful pre-nuptial affairs honoring this popular young couple, whose marriage Wednesday night was one of the most brilliant events of the entire year.

A charming compliment to Miss Helen Jones, a lovely bride-to-be, was Mrs. J. W. Kilbourne's and Mrs. Richard Troy's afternoon bridge on Wednesday.

A yellow theme was sustained in the yellow linens covering the card tables and the beautiful yellow china pitcher presented to Miss Nanette Selig for high bridge score. The favors, claimed by Miss Ruth Shephard, Mrs. Allen Kimball and Mrs. H. M. Butler, were yellow crystal vases of classic design overflowing with bright yellow blossoms. The confectionery course, yellow wedding bell ices and petit fours embossed in yellow, also sustained the chosen color theme.

The courtesies of the afternoon were climaxed by a kitchen "shower" for Miss Jones, featuring yellow porcelain ware, exclusively. The guests, in addition to Miss Jones, were Miss Mary Trousdale, Miss Ruth Shephard, Miss Nanette Selig, Mrs. A. Boyd, Mrs. R. C. Sparks, Jr., Mrs. Allen Kimball, Mrs. H. M. Butler, Mrs. T. C. Pembertor, Mrs. H. Carpenter, Mrs. Darwin Nichols, Mrs. W. Lovett, Mrs. H. M. Butler and Mrs. F. A. Jones.

Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Jarrell, assisted by Mr. John Cahn, entertained with an al fresco supper in the charming environs of the Jarrell garden Thursday night complimentary to Miss Florence Ferguson and her fiance, Mr. Victor Davis.

Delectable barbecued meat, crisp and brown from the glowing coals, was the piece de resistance of the supper served at long tables covered with blue and white checked linens. A delectable array of food was arranged buffet style for the guests, who numbered, in addition to Miss Ferguson and Mr. Davis, Miss Ann Barnett and Benjamin Dawkins, Jr., Miss Violet Meyer and Dr. Prentice Gray, Miss Connie McReynolds and James Sparks, Mrs. Granville Tierney and Gilbert Faulk, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Allen, Mr. and Mrs. John Theus, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Shafto, Miss Nina Holt Redditt and John Cahn and Miss Happy Tidwell and King Stubbs.

Yesterday's compliment to Miss Ferguson was a luncheon, with Mrs. T. O. Bancroft, hostess at her home on St. John Drive.

Miss Jean Ford, daughter of Mr. J. T. Ford, and a member of this year's graduating class of the Neville High school, was the winner in Louisiana of the state award in the national essay contest on "The Value of Time in Education," which was inaugurated during the spring semester by the International Business Machines corporation in commemoration of the establishment of the first American high school three hundred years ago. The local judges were Mrs. Charles Kenney, Mrs. Alf Reid, Mrs. Austin Miller, Mrs. Theo Terzia and Miss Mary Hester.

Approximately thirty thousand essays were submitted by high school students in all parts of the United States. The best essay from each state was selected for the award of an inscribed watch to the winning student and an athletic event timer to the winning school.

Paul Bleider, a senior of Elk Mound, Wis., won the national award, a four-year tuition scholarship in a college of his choice.

Miss Ford, discussing "The Value of Time in Education," said in part:

"Education is the art of transforming life from unrealized situatons nto more idealized conditions. It requires much time and effort to develop young people physically, mentally and emotionally. Those who are too hasty in training fail to enrich their earlier years with accumulated knowledge and to develop motive power necessary for genuine happiness and usefulness. A worthwhile education, acquired early in life, furnishes substantial mental material which helps to determine ideals, interests, abilities and actions. Education cannot be given away. It is a task that continues day after day, month after month, and year after year.

"Through years of studying, reading and traveling, young people become more cultured and appreciative of things good and beautiful. Firmly believing in the greatness of community and world citizenship, they train themselves for their part in the society in which they must live. They strive to live a life of service and to improve conditions for mankind, because years of thoughtful training have convinced them that service is the truest test and measure of greatness.

"People become educated by understanding and appreciating the motives, ideals, and work of their fellow-beings. They are happiest while they are busy with some type of creative work which requires untold hours of their own time and effort.

"It requires years to develop varied worthwhile interests and abilities, to shape character, and to fire ambitions to be able to do, at least, one thing well. Since young people of today should assume great responsibilities in return for their many opportunities, it is necessary that they be well informed on present day affairs, both economic and social, in order that they may finally be capable of helping to solve these problems in such a way that their generation may make some permanent contribution to civilization.

"Wise young people look to the future and make definite plans for their work; they build conscientiously and thoroughly. They take time to analyze themselves and correct defects in their character that might mar or retard their future progress. They realize that time is not their toy but their greatest wealth which should be used thoughtfully in developing good lives of service and happiness."

A distinct tribute was paid to the late Mrs. Alex Block of Memphis, Tenn., when she was likened to Jane Addams, in an article appearing in the Press-Scimitar.

Mrs. Block, well known in this city, where she visited on numerous occasions in the home of Mrs. Brisco Trousdale, was a social service worker and founder of the Jewish Neighborhood House of Memphis.

Mrs. Block was serving her fourth year as president of the Temple Sisterhood when illness forced her to resign. She was a member of the board of the Temple Children of Israel and was active in many capacities concerned with the church.

Twenty-five years ago, she saw there was a great necessity for taking care of needy members of the Jewish faith. She worked with a small group and organized the Jewish Neighborhood House at 291 Market.

She saw the Jewish Neighborhood House grow large enough to be favorably compared with Hull House, organized by the late Jane Addams in Chicago. It is one of the city's most active community centers. Mrs. Block was placed on the advisory board of the house last week.

A charming little supper party Thursday night brought a few close friends and college classmates together in the home of Miss Joy Steele.

Luscious food was served buffet style to Miss Georgia Cole, Miss Sarah Talbert, Miss Happy Tidwell, Mrs. Alvah Learned, Mr. Burton Wolf, Mrs. Melvin Anish, Mr. Gilbert Wolf, Mrs. Charles Stuart and Mr. Vernon Lee Cour.

CHAPTER XLIII

Millicent remained flattened against the wall of the doorway. She could hear the pounding of her heart. She could also hear the pounding of steps on the pavement as Vera Duchene and Bob Caise came walking directly toward her.

What had brought them? Had they trailed her in some way, or was it merely a coincidence that she had blundered upon them? She had no means of knowing, but she sensed that were she discovered in this deserted side street she would probably never live to tell of her encounter. Ever since she had seen those sinister dark splotches in the room where Norman Happ had gone to call upon the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer she had realized the desperation of the people who were opposing her.

The murder of Drimgold and the murder of Harry Felding had somehow not driven the situation home to her, as had those sinister marks.

Vera Duchene and her escort walked directly past the doorway. Millicent caught her breath in a quick intake as Vera Duchene's arm almost brushed against her shoulder. She expected momentarily to hear Vera cry out, "There she is!" and to feel Bob Caise's hands clutching at her throat.

As they walked past she heard Vera Duchene saying ". . . everything's under cover now. We can let them investigate and be damned."

"No," Bob said, "there remains that girl. We've got to . . . turn her in on the Drimgold job." Vera Duchene said crisply, "That's all we need to . . . Sergeant Mahoney will . . ."

Millicent was unable to hear exactly how Vera Duchene finished but she thought she knew exactly what the pair were planning to do. She would have given much could she have heard some bit of conversation which would hav. given her an inkling of what had happened to Norman Happ, but realized this would be expecting too much. She was thankful enough that she had remained undiscovered.

She dared not venture forth from the protection of the doorway until after she heard the steps of the pair recede in the distance and knew that they had rounded the corner. Even then she waited for almost a minute before venturing to walk down toward the main traffic artery. She wanted to get a taxicab and go at once to the hotel where she was registered as Millicent Jones. She knew that if Norman Happ could break loose he would communicate with her there.

And she surmised that Vera Duchene and Bob Caise must have called on the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer who maintained the undercover apartment which seemed to be headquarters for all of the plotting.

Millicent caught a cab at the corner, went at once to the hotel. She discovered anything in his tour of the apartments.

She entered the cab, gave the driver the address and sat back against the cushions, her mind racing with a confused sequence of thoughts. She barely noticed the passing of time until the cab arrived at the apartment house. She saw the friendly cab driver sitting behind the wheel of his cab which was parked at the curb. She paid off the driver of the cab in which she was riding walked up to her friend and said in a low voice, "Did you find anything?"

He gave a start of surprise, whirled around to face her and said, "Take it easy, Miss. That's a radio car over there at the curb. Someone's made a squawk and a couple of radio cars are investigating apartment 309. There's been a fight up there and somebody got hurt."

"Did they say who it was?"

"Did you cover the rest of the apartments?"

"Yes, but I couldn't find any trace of your friend. They all looked on the up and up to me—that is, those that answered. Three or four of them didn't answer the door, or maybe they'd gone to bed, or they might be out . . . but, listen, Miss, if there's a beef anywhere you'd better beat it because the guys from the radio car are going to be out in a minute and there's guy with them who's probably the chap who made the squawk in the first place. He looks like he was the guy you was telling me about that was on the force."

She flashed him a grateful glance, and, acting on impulse, gave him her hand.

He patted it reassuringly and said, "Hop in and let me drive you around the corner."

"No," she said, "I'll walk. I'll make it all right."

She walked rapidly around the corner and noticed with some annoyance that she had developed a habit of looking back over her shoulder to see if she were being followed.

She found that, without conscious volition on her part, she was mechanically retracing the course which had been taken by the taxicab when she had fled from the apartment and suddenly realized that her route would take her past the big garage which the cab driver had pointed out to her when she had asked him to park.

A garage!

That must be where Vera Duchene and Bob Caise had been going when they had walked so rapidly and purposefully past her.

She increased her pace, walked to the garage, entered it and smiled at the man on duty.

"A man and a woman came in here about half an hour ago," she said, "for an automobile. I wonder if there's a chance you would remember the car or the people."

"What sort of car?" he asked.

"I don't know, but I think it was a cabriolet—not one that's stored here regularly."

He shook her head. "No," he said, "I don't think there's been a transient car in here all evening. Most of our stuff is storage by the month. Seems to me we did have a transient too, but I can't remember the people. I'm new here. Lots of 'em I don't know."

An idea flashed quickly through her mind. "Do you store a car for a Phyllis Faulconer?" she asked.

"Why, yes," he said. "A black sedan, license number 9J3410."

"That's the one," she said excitedly. "Could I see it for a moment?"

He looked at her suspiciously, but she gave him a reassuring smile. "I just want to look at it," she said. "I'm very much interested."

"It's on the second floor," he said. "I guess I should go up with you, but you look all right, so I'll let you go on up by yourself. I've got to stay on duty down here."

She thought then that there was something peculiarly significant about his expression. It was as though he wanted to warn her of some impending danger, yet dared not do so.

She started toward the stairs to the second floor, but turned when she had gone a few steps to give him one more glance.

This time there could be no mistake. He was looking at her with an expression of pity, but he turned his eyes away almost as soon as she encountered his gaze.

Millicent decided that, after all, it was merely her imagination.

She climbed the stairs to the second floor. An elevator was in one corner of a big room, divided into stalls in which automobiles were parked, side by side.

CHAPTER XLIII

Millicent remained flattened against the wall of the doorway. She could hear the pounding of her heart. She could also hear the pounding of steps on the pavement as Vera Duchene and Bob Caise came walking directly toward her.

What had brought them? Had they trailed her in some way, or was it merely a coincidence that she had blundered upon them? She had no means of knowing, but she sensed that were she discovered in this deserted side street she would probably never live to tell of her encounter. Ever since she had seen those sinister dark splotches in the room where Norman Happ had gone to call upon the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer she had realized the desperation of the people who were opposing her.

The murder of Drimgold and the murder of Harry Felding had somehow not driven the situation home to her, as had those sinister marks.

Vera Duchene and her escort walked directly past the doorway. Millicent caught her breath in a quick intake as Vera Duchene's arm almost brushed against her shoulder. She expected momentarily to hear Vera cry out, "There she is!" and to feel Bob Caise's hands clutching at her throat.

As they walked past she heard Vera Duchene saying ". . . everything's under cover now. We can let them investigate and be damned."

"No," Bob said, "there remains that girl. We've got to . . . turn her in on the Drimgold job." Vera Duchene said crisply, "That's all we need to . . . Sergeant Mahoney will . . ."

Millicent was unable to hear exactly how Vera Duchene finished but she thought she knew exactly what the pair were planning to do. She would have given much could she have heard some bit of conversation which would have given her an inkling of what had happened to Norman Happ, but realized this would be expecting too much. She was thankful enough that she had remained undiscovered.

She dared not venture forth from the protection of the doorway until after she heard the steps of the pair recede in the distance and knew that they had rounded the corner. Even then she waited for almost a minute before venturing to walk down toward the main traffic artery. She wanted to get a taxicab and go at once to the hotel where she was registered as Millicent Jones. She knew that if Norman Happ could break loose he would communicate with her there.

And she surmised that Vera Duchene and Bob Caise must have called on the mysterious Phyllis Faulconer who maintained the undercover apartment which seemed to be headquarters for all of the plotting.

Millicent caught a cab at the corner, went at once to the hotel. The clerk eyed her with casual curiosity.

"Has anyone been calling for me?" she asked.

"Nope."

"No telephone calls?"

"Nope."

"You're sure?"

"Of course I'm sure. No one's called you."

"Listen, she told him, "I'm going out, but if anyone calls for me, would you mind telling them that Miss Jones left a message that she is quite all right and will be back here to pick up any messages in about an hour from now?"

She slipped a dollar from her purse and said, "It's really most important."

The flabby fingers of the man behind the desk closed on the dollar.

"Okay," he said, showing the first bit of friendly interest he had displayed toward her. "I'll see that your message is delivered, Miss Jones. But who shall I deliver it to? Just anyone that calls?"

"Just anyone that calls," she said. "Anyone who asks for me."

Her cab was waiting at the door. She decided to risk detection by going back to the apartment house and ascertaining if the cab driver had discovered anything in his tour of the apartments.

She entered the cab, gave the driver the address and sat back against the cushions, her mind racing with a confused sequence of thoughts. She barely noticed the passing of time until the cab arrived at the apartment house. She saw the friendly cab driver sitting behind the wheel of his cab which was parked at the curb. She paid off the driver of the cab in which she was riding walked up to her friend and said in a low voice, "Did you find anything?"

He gave a start of surprise, whirled around to face her and said, "Take it easy, Miss. That's a radio car over there at the curb. Someone's made a squawk and a couple of radio cars are investigating apartment 309. There's been a fight up there and somebody got hurt."

"Did they say who it was?"

"No. Just a bunch of busted furniture and some blood stains. I took a squint at the directory. A jane named Phylis Faulconer lives there.

"Did you cover the rest of the apartments?"

"Yes, but I couldn't find any trace of your friend. They all looked on the up and up to me—that is, those that answered. Three or four of them didn't answer the door, or maybe they'd gone to bed, or they might be out . . . but, listen, Miss, if there's a beef anywhere you'd better beat it because the guys from the radio car are going to be out in a minute and there's guy with them who's probably the chap who made the squawk in the first place. He looks like he was the guy you was telling me about that was on the force."

She flashed him a grateful glance, and, acting on impulse, gave him her hand.

He patted it reassuringly and said, "Hop in and let me drive you around the corner."

"No," she said, "I'll walk. I'll make it all right."

She walked rapidly around the corner and noticed with some annoyance that she had developed a habit of looking back over her shoulder to see if she were being followed.

She found that, without conscious volition on her part, she was mechanically retracing the course which had been taken by the taxicab when she had fled from the apartment and suddenly realized that her route would take her past the big garage which the cab driver had pointed out to her when she had asked him to park.

A garage!

That must be where Vera Duchene and Bob Caise had been going when they had walked so rapidly and purposefully past her.

She increased her pace, walked to the garage, entered it and smiled at the man on duty.

"A man and a woman came in here about half an hour ago," she said, "for an automobile. I wonder if there's a chance you would remember the car or the people."

"What sort of car?" he asked.

"I don't know, but I think it was a cabriolet—not one that's stored here regularly."

He shook her head. "No," he said. "I don't think there's been a transient car in here all evening. Most of our stuff is storage by the month. Seems to me we did have a transient too, but I can't remember the people. I'm new here. Lots of 'em I don't know."

An idea flashed quickly through her mind. "Do you store a car for a Phyllis Faulconer?" she asked.

"Why, yes," he said. "A black sedan, license number 9J310."

"That's the one," she said excitedly. "Could I see it for a moment?"

He looked at her suspiciously, but she gave him a reassuring smile. "I just want to look at it," she said. "I'm very much interested."

"It's on the second floor," he said. "I guess I should go up with you, but you look all right, so I'll let you go on up by yourself. I've got to stay on duty down here."

She thought then that there was something peculiarly significant about his expression. It was as though he wanted to warn her of some impending danger, yet dared not do so.

She started toward the stairs to the second floor, but turned when she had gone a few steps to give him one more glance.

This time there could be no mistake. He was looking at her with an expression of pity, but he turned his eyes away almost as soon as she encountered his gaze.

Millicent decided that, after all, it was merely her imagination.

She climbed the stairs to the second floor. An elevator was in one corner of a big room, divided into stalls in which automobiles were parked, side by side.

Use Prints For These Frocks

PATTERNS 2170 AND 2220

Make the afternoon edition of your summer wardrobe Printed! If you're the neat 'n trim type with a penchant for tailored simplicity you just can't beat pattern 2170 with its softly gathere bodice and cool sleeve attaching itself to the frankly tailored yoke. A washable crepe would be a practical selection. If you're the dressier type that likes an afternoon frock to be something "extra special" the beruffled pattern 2220 is your answer. Ruffles that start and finish at the waistline add a lot of style and precious little labor to the otherwise simple frock. Printed chiffon or sheer cotton or silk would be appropriately dainty.

Pattern 2170 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 5-8 yards 39 inch fabric. Price 15c.

Pattern 2220 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3 1-2 yards 39 inch fabric. Price 15c. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included with each pattern.

SAFETY DEVICES FOR RURAL HOME

Summer Cabin Or Cottage Should Be Protected From Intruders

When conditioning the summer cabin or cottage, or constructing a new one for relaxation and enjoyment during the summer months, it is advisable to install heavily constructed storm sash for all windows so that the cabin can be securely locked to prevent forced entry when the cabin is not being used.

Hinges should be installed so that screws are concealed when the shutters are closed. Bolts or other fastenings that cannot be easily removed are advisable. Hooks, hasps, sliding bolts, or other fastenings can be used for locking the shutters tightly from the inside when they are closed.

Iron bars or other protection make basement windows burglar-proof, and a substantial lock may be installed in the door leading from the first floor to the basement. Exterior doors should be provided with good locks; and, if there are panes of glass in them which can be broken, it is an excellent idea to provide heavily constructed storm doors which can be locked securely.

Credits for modernizing and constructing summer cabins and cottages are available through private financial institutions which are approved by and cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring such credits under the National Housing Act.

Contractors Receive Surplus Of Orders

WORCESTER, Mass.—One hundred and sixteen contractors registered with the better-housing committee report that they have more work than they can handle.

In the first six weeks of the modernization canvass, 1,250 jobs totaling $687,215 were pledged. Besides the results obtained from the house-to-house canvass, an additional $60,000 in pledges was made by visitors to the information building within the first eight days of the campaign. Six weeks after the opening of the canvass, pledges were still pouring in at the rate of more than 100 per week for a total of more than $46,000, an average in excess of $7,500 a day.

Government's Greatest Project Is FHA Plan

C. C. Sheppard, Former President Of National Lumbermen's Association, Calls It "People's Greatest Boon"

Of all the phases of the government's economic recovery program, the federal housing plan stands out with conspicuous distinctness as the greatest incident to restoring confidence and surety to the mass of the people. It is the people's greatest boon.

This is the considered opinion of C. C. Sheppard of Clarks, La., one of the most eminent leaders in the lumber industry in the United States.

Mr. Sheppard as president of the Louisiana Central Lumber company, a position he has occupied for a number of years, is one of the industrial leaders of this state. He recently completed a term of five years as president of the National Association of Lumbermen of the United States, and on his retirement was presented with an illuminated and embossed scroll setting forth the honor, esteem and respect in which he is held by the members of that great and powerful organization, due to his intelligent, forceful and efficient direction of the affairs of the association throughout the trying period of the depression. As an added testimonial to his abilities and his understanding of the economic problems confronting the nation, Mr. Sheppard was chosen as one of the 27 members of the advisory council of the federal housing administration. The council is composed of leaders from various fields of public endeavor throughout the United States.

For those reasons, Mr. Sheppard's views have the weight of authority, born of training and experience. His conviction is that "the insured mortgage feature of the federal housing program, coupled with the plan of repaying building loans over a long period of years, gives to the individual an opportunity for establishing his own home which removes at once the old-time fear and uncertainty which the old-time short term mortgage produced, and at the same time offers security to the lending agency which assures its repayment."

That situation, in Mr. Sheppard's view, is of incalculable value in promoting happiness and prosperity in the nation. It encourages home building, with all the social and economic advantages which such a general program implies, and at the same time permits the release of vast sums of hoarded money for circulation and benefitting workers, business men, manufacturers and industrialists all over the nation.

"The importance of such a plan is profound in its effect on every phase of life among the people of the United States," he said. "It means that every head of a family who is determined to have a home of his own can do so, and that determination will be so encouraged by the federal housing administration that not only the home builder, but every agency that contributes to its building, will receive benefits."

Mr. Sheppard outlined the new home construction plan in the following terms:

"The man who wants to buy a home goes to a lending institution or the local representative of the federal housing administration, advising that he wants to borrow the money to buy, say a $5,000 home. He is informed that to do this under the housing administration's rules, he must be able to pay down 20 per cent of the total cost—in the case of the $5,000 home, it would be $1,000.

"The housing administration then has the property inspected and appraised by the administration's own employes, to be sure that it complies with certain simple requirements, such as desirability of construction, architectural plan and location.

"If the housing administration approves the property, it insures a mortgage on it for as high as 80 per cent of its total value—in the case of the $5,000 home, this would be for $4,000.

"The lending institution which is authorized by the housing administration to handle these insured mortgages then collects from the buyer of the home, equal monthly payments which include regular payments on the principal and interest on the mortgage, similar equal payments on the taxes and insurance of the property, a small service fee and a small contribution to the insurance.

"These monthly payments may extend over a period of as long as 20 years if both the borrower and the lender decide that the borrower needs that long to pay for the property. The monthly payments are, broadly speaking, just about the same amount that would have to be paid as rent for occupying a place of that sort—in the case of a $5,000 home, each monthly payment would amount to about $39 over a period of 20 years.

"The tremendous advantages and benefits of this new plan will be immediately plain to the man who is buying, or has tried to buy, a home under the old mortgage system, a plan which meant that every time the short-term mortgage fell due, he was uneasy lest the lender refuse to renew the mortgage and thus foreclose and take the property away from him before he could pay for it.

"To describe this new mortgage briefly, it is mutually insured under the supervision of the housing administration. Another provision is that there can be only this one insured mortgage on the property. The new plan abolishes the worry and the terrific expense of second and even third trusts in financing the purchase of a home.

"The housing at, under which all this was made possible, was advocated by the president and passed by the congress, because of their conviction that it would create new business for the building and heavy goods industries, and also because of their conviction that America would have permanent prosperity only when these industries enjoyed a lasting prosperity.

"How right both the president and the congress were in that assumption is already being demonstrated by the increased business in the construction field and in the increased demand for the heavy goods.

"This is to say, the better housing program helps the American people in two ways: first, by enabling them to improve their housing conditions; second, by opening one sure way to national recovery and prosperity.

"And all this is done without giving away money from the national treasury. It is done merely by encouraging people to spend or to borrow for the best of all purposes, and by insuring the lending institutions against loss in loaning the money needed."

PROPER HOUSING FOR MOTOR CARS

Economy Demonstrated In Giving Protection To Automobiles

Rusty automobile fenders, deteriorated tops, and other reasons for unnecessary repair bills often may be traced to damp and poorly ventilated garages, according to the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring modernization credits made by private financial institutions.

Considerable economic loss occurs as a result of poorly designed and improperly built garages. When built on low ground and not drained it is practically impossible to keep the garage dry even when a good floor has been laid. Many garages also do not have sufficient windows or louvers for light and ventilation. The result is that when a car which has been exposed to rain, sleet, or snow is driven into the garage and the garage closed up tightly a very humid condition results that becomes especially serious when the sun's rays beat down directly on an uninsulated roof. This hot, humid condition in a garage readily causes decay and rust.

The warm weather of April and May is an excellent time in which to condition the garage with a dry floor, walls and roof and for the installation of windows and ventilators.

While repairing and painting the garage and otherwise getting it into suitable condition it is also a good idea to install running water and artificial light. A heating pipe from the central heating unit in the house to the garage, or a gas-pipe extension, so that the garage can be heated during the severe winter months, may be laid in the trench made for the water pipe, thereby saving expense which would result from separate installations.

TO CONCEAL STACK

Where a plumbing stack or a soil pipe of large diameter must be concealed in a wall, it is considered good practice to use framing lumber 2 by 6 or 2 by 8 inches in size instead of the conventional 2 by 4's. This detracts from the annoyance of a noisy pipe and provides additional interior wall space. Better ventilation is permitted so that there is little danger of the wall becoming damp from condensation.

HOUSING PROGRAM IMPROVES BUSINESS

PHOENIX, Ariz.—A concern here that handles a well-known national brand of electric equipment reported recently to the state director of the Federal Housing Administration that it had been forced to move into much larger quarters in order to handle the volume of business which has grown out of better housing activity. It was also necessary to increase the employed personnel of the concern, it is reported.

A bank here has also employed two full-time men to handle Federal Housing loans exclusively. The volume of work has been so large that the bank was forced to tear out a partition in order to enlarge the quarters of this division and will soon employ a third man in this department.

CHIMNEY REPAIR

During the winter moisture may have seeped into the mortar joints in the chimney capping and then frozen and expanded, causing the capping to become loosened or broken. BETTER HOMES for BETTER LIVING

Your OPPORTUNITY to BUILD and SAVE
Is Now Within Your Reach

Right now is the time to start building your home. Wonderful home sites can be picked up at bargain figures. Good materials are still low priced. Labor is plentiful.

A new home is very easy to finance today. You may still think of a home as a capital investment. Perhaps you think you cannot afford one. Your architect, contractor lumber dealer or realtor will show you how a fine residence can be built and paid for out of income . . . just as you now pay rent.

A new home is a "capital investment" in the slang sense . . . it's a splendid one! For you can never go wrong by buying property in a low price market, improving it and holding on to it. Fortunes have been made that way.

A new home will help to speed national recovery. When you build, you help create a demand for capital goods . . . steel, lumber, copper, cement, glass. You are employing men in factories, forest, mines.

And, finally remember that your own home is a hobby as well as a haven. It's not only something to live in, it's something to live for.

Build now! . . . Build with lumber that will endure . . . Lumber that has been properly seasoned . . . Enjoy permanence . . . as only "Quality marked" lumber can give.

SAFETY DEVICES FOR RURAL HOME

Summer Cabin Or Cottage Should Be Protected From Intruders

When conditioning the summer cabin or cottage, or constructing a new one for relaxation and enjoyment during the summer months, it is advisable to install heavily constructed storm sash for all windows so that the cabin can be securely locked to prevent forced entry when the cabin is not being used.

Hinges should be installed so that screws are concealed when the shutters are closed. Bolts or other fastenings that cannot be easily removed are advisable. Hooks, hasps, sliding bolts, or other fastenings can be used for locking the shutters tightly from the inside when they are closed.

Iron bars or other protection make basement windows burglar-proof, and a substantial lock may be installed in the door leading from the first floor to the basement. Exterior doors should be provided with good locks; and, if there are panes of glass in them which can be broken, it is an excellent idea to provide heavily constructed storm doors which can be locked securely.

Credits for modernizing and constructing summer cabins and cottages are available through private financial institutions which are approved by and cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring such credits under the National Housing Act.

Contractors Receive Surplus Of Orders

WORCESTER, Mass.—One hundred and sixteen contractors registered with the better-housing committee report that they have more work than they can handle.

In the first six weeks of the modernization canvass, 1,250 jobs totaling $687,215 were pledged. Besides the results obtained from the house-to-house canvass, an additional $60,000 in pledges was made by visitors to the information building within the first eight days of the campaign. Six weeks after the opening of the canvass, pledges were still pouring in at the rate of more than 100 per week for a total of more than $46,000, an average in excess of $7,500 a day.

Government's Greatest Project Is FHA Plan

C. C. Sheppard, Former President Of National Lumbermen's Association, Calls It "People's Greatest Boon"

Of all the phases of the government's economic recovery program, the federal housing plan stands out with conspicuous distinctness as the greatest incident to restoring confidence and surety to the mass of the people. It is the people's greatest boon.

This is the considered opinion of C. C. Sheppard of Clarks, La., one of the most eminent leaders in the lumber industry in the United States.

Mr. Sheppard as president of the Louisiana Central Lumber company, a position he has occupied for a number of years, is one of the industrial leaders of this state. He recently completed a term of five years as president of the National Association of Lumbermen of the United States, and on his retirement was presented with an illuminated and embossed scroll setting forth the honor, esteem and respect in which he is held by the members of that great and powerful organization, due to his intelligent, forceful and efficient direction of the affairs of the association throughout the trying period of the depression. As an added testimonial to his abilities and his understanding of the economic problems confronting the nation, Mr. Sheppard was chosen as one of the 27 members of the advisory council of the federal housing administration. The council is composed of leaders from various fields of public endeavor throughout the United States.

For those reasons, Mr. Sheppard's views have the weight of authority, born of training and experience. His conviction is that "the insured mortgage feature of the federal housing program, coupled with the plan of repaying building loans over a long period of years, gives to the individual an opportunity for establishing his own home which removes at once the old-time fear and uncertainty which the old-time short term mortgage produced, and at the same time offers security to the lending agency which assures its repayment."

That situation, in Mr. Sheppard's view, is of incalculable value in promoting happiness and prosperity in the nation. It encourages home building, with all the social and economic advantages which such a general program implies, and at the same time permits the release of vast sums of hoarded money for circulation and benefitting workers, business men, manufacturers and industrialists all over the nation.

"The importance of such a plan is profound in its effect on every phase of life among the people of the United States," he said. "It means that every head of a family who is determined to have a home of his own can do so, and that determination will be so encouraged by the federal housing administration that not only the home builder, but every agency that contributes to its building, will receive benefits."

Mr. Sheppard outlined the new home construction plan in the following terms:

"The man who wants to buy a home goes to a lending institution or the local representative of the federal housing administration, advising that he wants to borrow the money to buy, say a $5,000 home. He is informed that to do this under the housing administration's rules, he must be able to pay down 20 per cent of the total cost—in the case of the $5,000 home, it would be $1,000.

"The housing administration then has the property inspected and appraised by the administration's own employes, to be sure that it complies with certain simple requirements, such as desirability of construction, architectural plan and location.

"If the housing administration approves the property, it insures a mortgage on it for as high as 80 per cent of its total value—in the case of the $5,000 home, this would be for $4,000.

"The lending institution which is authorized by the housing administration to handle these insured mortgages then collects from the buyer of the home, equal monthly payments which include regular payments on the principal and interest on the mortgage, similar equal payments on the taxes and insurance of the property, a small service fee and a small contribution to the insurance.

"These monthly payments may extend over a period of as long as 20 years if both the borrower and the lender decide that the borrower needs that long to pay for the property. The monthly payments are, broadly speaking, just about the same amount that would have to be paid as rent for occupying a place of that sort—in the case of a $5,000 home, each monthly payment would amount to about $39 over a period of 20 years.

"The tremendous advantages and benefits of this new plan will be immediately plain to the man who is buying, or has tried to buy, a home under the old mortgage system, a plan which meant that every time the short-term mortgage fell due, he was uneasy lest the lender refuse to renew the mortgage and thus foreclose and take the property away from him before he could pay for it.

"To describe this new mortgage briefly, it is mutually insured under the supervision of the housing administration. Another provision is that there can be only this one insured mortgage on the property. The new plan abolishes the worry and the terrific expense of second and even third trusts in financing the purchase of a home.

"The housing at, under which all this was made possible, was advocated by the president and passed by the congress, because of their conviction that it would create new business for the building and heavy goods industries, and also because of their conviction that America would have permanent prosperity only when these industries enjoyed a lasting prosperity.

"How right both the president and the congress were in that assumption is already being demonstrated by the increased business in the construction field and in the increased demand for the heavy goods.

"This is to say, the better housing program helps the American people in two ways: first, by enabling them to improve their housing conditions; second, by opening one sure way to national recovery and prosperity.

"And all this is done without giving away money from the national treasury. It is done merely by encouraging people to spend or to borrow for the best of all purposes, and by insuring the lending institutions against loss in loaning the money needed."

PROPER HOUSING FOR MOTOR CARS

Economy Demonstrated In Giving Protection To Automobiles

Rusty automobile fenders, deteriorated tops, and other reasons for unnecessary repair bills often may be traced to damp and poorly ventilated garages, according to the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring modernization credits made by private financial institutions.

Considerable economic loss occurs as a result of poorly designed and improperly built garages. When built on low ground and not drained it is practically impossible to keep the garage dry even when a good floor has been laid. Many garages also do not have sufficient windows or louvers for light and ventilation. The result is that when a car which has been exposed to rain, sleet, or snow is driven into the garage and the garage closed up tightly a very humid condition results that becomes especially serious when the sun's rays beat down directly on an uninsulated roof. This hot, humid condition in a garage readily causes decay and rust.

The warm weather of April and May is an excellent time in which to condition the garage with a dry floor, walls and roof and for the installation of windows and ventilators.

While repairing and painting the garage and otherwise getting it into suitable condition it is also a good idea to install running water and artificial light. A heating pipe from the central heating unit in the house to the garage, or a gas-pipe extension, so that the garage can be heated during the severe winter months, may be laid in the trench made for the water pipe, thereby saving expense which would result from separate installations.

TO CONCEAL STACK

Where a plumbing stack or a soil pipe of large diameter must be concealed in a wall, it is considered good practice to use framing lumber 2 by 6 or 2 by 8 inches in size instead of the conventional 2 by 4's. This detracts from the annoyance of a noisy pipe and provides additional interior wall space. Better ventilation is permitted so that there is little danger of the wall becoming damp from condensation.

HOUSING PROGRAM IMPROVES BUSINESS

PHOENIX, Ariz.—A concern here that handles a well-known national brand of electric equipment reported recently to the state director of the Federal Housing Administration that it had been forced to move into much larger quarters in order to handle the volume of business which has grown out of better housing activity. It was also necessary to increase the employed personnel of the concern, it is reported.

A bank here has also employed two full-time men to handle Federal Housing loans exclusively. The volume of work has been so large that the bank was forced to tear out a partition in order to enlarge the quarters of this division and will soon employ a third man in this department.

BIG FORCE AIDS PROGRAM OF FHA

Volunteer Aids Exceed Paid Employes By Ratio Of 90 To One

WASHINGTON, D. C.—For every paid worker in the nation-wide Better Housing Program of the Federal Housing Administration there are 90 volunteer workers helping the movement to revive the durable-goods industries and the construction industry as a whole, according to the administration.

Figures released here by the administration show that there are only 2,163 paid employes, while there are 250,000 volunteers backing the program.

From the outset of the Better Housing Program, labor, business and industry have enthusiastically cooperated in the furtherance of the work. In local communities a greater portion of organization work was carried on by civic-spirited citizens under the guidance of representatives of the Housing Administration. At national headquarters the greater majority of major industries have maintained at their own expense representatives who work hand in hand with the various divisions of the housing organization.

During the spring of 1935 more than 1,000 trained men from various industries participated in a series of educational meetings held in key cities throughout the country to acquaint retailers and independent dealers, as well as the general public, with the far-reaching benefits to be derived from modernization and repair projects. At the same time, industries pledged personal modernization projects and campaigns within their own concerns to educate their employed personnel in the purposes of the Better Housing Program.

Rural communities have also shown much cooperation in the program, and hundreds of unpaid workers have carried on the tasks in local better housing committees in 48 states. The actual work of organizing house-to-house canvasses, obtaining definite pledges for repairs, and putting property owners in contact with materials dealers, contractors, and architects, has largely been the work of the volunteer staff in every locality.

Local better housing committees receive no funds for their operations from the Federal Housing Administration. Each community finances its own program, many with the assistance of the local Emergency Relief Administration, in providing canvassers and clerical helpers. In many sections canvassers receive compensation from retail trades.

Committees vary in size from a hundred or more to less than half a dozen, depending upon the population of the community in which it is functioning. Canvassing organizations range from paid forces of trained men and bricklayers on relief volunteer salesmen representing building-supply dealers.

COPPER USE

Where the edge of wood shingles abut or overlap at the hip joints of a roof, it is considered good practice to use small strips of copper or other corrosive-resistant flashing. They should be bent and nailed in place to cover the joint between the shingles.

MODERN HOME IS SIMPLIFIED

Advance Designs Give Spacious Comfort And Lasting Beauty

The smart originality of the modern interior with its spaciousness and ultra-simplicity, when carefully designed, produces a happy combination of comfort and lasting beauty.

Having passed through the extreme period which attends any new departure, modern interiors today are becoming increasingly popular because of the many conservative and interesting effects that can be obtained from such treatment.

Aside from the actual beauty of modern design, the utilitarian features appeal to the modern housewife in particular. The modern room is easily cleaned and kept clean. The trend toward spaciousness, with a minimum of furniture and a large proportion of built-in effects, minimize domestic toil and simplifies the business of making a home.

Most recent developments in modern construction and decoration have eliminated the cold harshness of earlier ideas in this connection. The geometric feeling is shown to be very adaptable to interesting wall, floor, and ceiling arrangements and frigidity virtually has been eliminated.

The modern interior is designed for comfort. The relationship of design to use or functionalism is displayed in the conservation of wall space and also in indirect, concealed illumination, which produces soft, nonglaring light. It is a fundamental principle of modern design that equipment is tied in with the decorative scheme itself for walls, floors, or ceiling, rather than such equipment being superimposed as is the case with less recent treatment. Built-in furniture and equipment are designed and coordinated in this manner, with the decorative scheme.

In general, the architectural design of a modern interior combines straight and curved geometrical lines. Maximum simplicity achieves its effects from a novel treatment of materials and equipment which produces an appearance of spaciousness, elegance, charm and beauty.

Credit for modernizing homes is available at private lending institutions approved by and cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring such credit under the National Housing Act.

Beauty, Comfort, Charm Combined in Modern Interiors

Clean, airy spaciousness marks the room that follows the modern trend in design. A minimum of furniture without sacrificing comfort in the least is the motif in such interiors. The above photograph shows a living room done in the modern manner. Concealed illumination; wide, simplified window space with venetian blinds to control ventilation and light. Smart built-in furniture of distinctive form. Additional spaciousness is gained from the built-in mirror occupying the entire right wall. The living room illustrated is suggestive of how a home may be transformed in the modern manner.

On the left is shown a corner of the living room (pictured above) and also the entrance. Built-in bookcases, a sliding cocktail tray, mirrors, cabinets, all are included with a minimum of space utilized. Late developments in this form of decoration have struck a happy combination of charm and softness that in no way detracts from the advanced and refreshing effect. Modern floor covering in any of a number of styles, designs, and shades adds much to such an interior.

FENCING REPAIRS TIMELY IN SPRING

The advent of warm weather provides an excellent time to build new fences and to repair old ones. Even the truck garden should be fenced to keep out chickens.

Deteriorated fence posts should be replaced with new ones, preservatively treated, or of very durable wood, concrete, metal or other suitable material. Sagging wires should be tightened, and broken wires, fence boards, and woven fences of various kinds which will no longer furnish adequate protection should be replaced with new, durable material.

Spring is also an excellent time to paint fences before grass or other plant growth becomes sufficiently high to interfere with this kind of work. A fresh coat of white paint on the posts not only serves as a guide to assist the automobilist who drives at night but white posts and fences surrounding verdant fields, farm woodlands, and orchards make beautiful and attractive landscape settings.

Loans for repairing and installing fences are available through private financial institutions cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration, which is insuring such loans under the National Housing Act.

VALSPAR RESISTS 403 DEGREES BOILING OIL

Everybody remembers the famous Valspar boiling water test. Water at 212 degrees poured on a Valspar finish—the varnish that won't turn white!

After years of exhaustive research Valspar has advanced varnish standards by another quarter of a century. Super Valspar, made by the Valenite process, is the result. This amazing new finish not only will not turn white under boiling water—but, in the famous boiling oil test, it actually withstood 403 degrees of withering heat. Positive proof of the ability of Super Valspar to stand terrific wear and tear.

Super Valspar not only gives years of added service, it is actually easier to apply, flows on smoothly, evenly, no brush marks. And it dries for sure in four hours.

This amazing new finish gives at least twice as much wear as ordinary varnishes and enamels. The boiling oil test is positive proof of Super Valspar's ability to take terrific punishment—and of course "it won't turn white." Made by the Valenite process.

The Valenite process is a discovery of the Valentine chemists—a secret Valentine method of utilizing ultra modern gums in the production of ultra modern four hour drying varnishes and enamels.

Through this Valenite process are produced Super Valspar varnish, stains and enamels, possessing super qualities of beauty and durability.

Without the Valenite process, supre Valspar would not be possible and only Valentine has the Valenite process!

The J. C. Steel Lumber company, West Monroe, are the local dealers.

ADVISORS TO HELP BETTER HOMES DRIVE

Twenty-Seven Experts Deal With Important Problems In Housing

WASHINGTON, D. C.—One of the unique forces in the better housing program, which is proving an effective stimulus to modernization of all types of real property and to construction of new homes, is the advisory council of the federal housing administration.

This group of 27 men was selected to represent practically all shades of specialized opinion, so that when a question is placed before the advisory council the report on that question will closely approximate the opinion of the general public. They serve solely as advisors to the administrator. Many serve without pay.

Lend Experience

The purpose of the organization of this group was to make readily available to the administrator the experience and judgment of the outstanding men in the whole field of housing and allied activities, whose services it would not be possible to obtain as permanent members of the staff.

In its membership are financial men, representing insurance companies, commercial and savings banks, trust companies, and building and loan associations; real estate men, builders, housing experts, city planners, economists, material men, engineers, architects, and fire-prevention experts, and representatives of labor, skilled in housing.

Council Members

Members of the advisory council include: James D. Dusenberry, chairman of the council, director of underwriting and realty division, federal housing administration; Wayne F. Palmer, executive secretary of the council; F. L. Ackerman, New York housing and city planning expert; Robert J. Barrett, executive director of plumbing contracting division of the construction industry, divisional code authority, Washington, D. C.; Alexander M. Bing, president of city housing corporation, New York City; Lewis H. Brown, New York, building material manufacturer; Louis Brownlow, Chicago, city planning expert; Merrell P. Callaway, New York, banker; F. S. Cannon, Indianapolis, building and loan executive; Jacob L. Crane, Jr., president of American city planning institute, Chicago; Franklin D'Olier, insurance company executive, Newark, N. J.; John Waller Edelman, research director of American Federation of Hosiery Workers, Philadelphia; Robert V. Fleming, Washington, D. C., vice president of American Bankers association.

Rolland J. Hamilton, New York, heating equipment manufacturer; Joseph W. Holman, architect, president of National Council of Architectural Registration Boards, Nashville, Tenn.; Sullivan W. Jones, engineer and architect, chairman of National construction planning and adjustment board, Washington, D. C.; Charles F. Lewis, housing expert, director of The Buhl Foundation, Pittsburgh, M. J. McDonough, president of Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, Washington, D. C.; Charles A. Miller, New York, banker, former president of Reconstruction Finance corporation; Hugh Potter, Houston, Texas, former president of National Association of Real Estate Boards; Winfield W. Riefler, economist, Princeton, N. J., former chairman and economic adviser to the executive council of the Central Statistical Board; C. C. Sheppard, Clarks, La., president of the National Lumber Manufacturers association; Ben Taub, Houston, Texas, real estate expert and banker; S. F. Voorhees, New York, director of American Institute of Architects; George B. Walbridge, Detroit, contractor; Franklin H. Wentworth, managing director of National Fire Protection association, Boston; and Coleman Woodbury, executive director of National Association of Housing Officials, Chicago.

LABOR BENEFITS FROM BRICK MANUFACTURING

According to press reports, the government has announced that many of the big projects have been abandoned because too much of the cost went into the manufacture and did not provide as many jobs for labor as desirable.

In the manufacture of brick, the major part of the cost is in labor. An inquiry made at the local brick manufacturing plant revealed that nearly 80 per cent of the cost of manufacture and distribution of brick is paid out in labor, and every dollar of which is spent in Monroe.

In construction with brick, every dime is spent in labor to brick masons and helpers, except the small amount for cement and lime, used in mortar.

Made Livable For $250

Above is shown a remarkable transformation achieved in a farm building through the expenditure of only $250. This building, as the top photograph indicates, was virtually in a state of complete dilapidation. A repair crew set to work. The house was leveled. New blocks and part of the sills were put in. Weatherboarding, old windows and frames were replaced. All outside doors were newly installed. Two rooms were torn down, a hall built, as were a front and back porch. Two pairs of steps, one flue, a corrugated-iron roof were added, and the chimney was repaired. The lower photograph shows the result.

Appoint Chairman In Store Program

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Activity in the state-wide food stores modernization program took another step forward with the appointment of John J. Coyle, Newburgh, as chairman of the state committee. Plans were worked out for the drive recently at a conference between Mr. Coyle and representatives of the state association of food-store operators.

The program is directed at the 74,000 food stores in New York state, of which approximately 45,000 are individually owned and independently operated. The estimated annual volume of business transacted by food stores in the state has been set at $750,000,000.

Within a few weeks the program will be projected in every part of New York. At the outset 16 chairmen will be appointed at strategic points who will conduct the drive in their respective communities. A marked impetus to start modernization is expected to accrue from this movement.

SALE OF PAINTS SHOWS INCREASE

Industrial, Automotive, Retail Improvement In Recent Months

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Paint, varnish, and lacquer sales figures for the first quarter of 1935 showed appreciable increases over the same period last year, according to information given the Federal Housing Administration by the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer association.

The figures, showing percentages of increase, indicated marked improvement in both industrial and retail dealer sales and reflected improvement in the automotive industry. A general industrial expansion and retail business increases, due largely to the modernization program of the Federal Housing Administration, according to a representative of the association, were also indicated.

The comparative figures:

Total industrial sales: 1934, $18,759,619; 1935, $22,500,219—increase, 19.9 per cent.

Total industrial sales, comprising paint and varnish sales to industry and lacquer sales to industry, showed the following percentages of increase over 1934: Paint and varnish sales to industry, $12,773,915—increase 22.3 per cent. Lacquer sales to industry, $5,985,704—increase, 14.9 per cent.

Trade sales of paint, varnish and lacquer (344 establishments), 1934, $22,231,676; 1935, $25,856,487—increase 16.3 per cent.

Unclassified sales (242 establishments), 1934, $20,418,335; 1935, $22,393,130—increase, 9.7 per cent.

The 22.3 per cent increase shown in industrial sales of paint and varnish was credited by an association spokesman to the recent expansion and building improvement programs instituted by many industries and to the increased use of quick-drying enamels in the automotive industry which comes under this classification. Lacquer sales increases were considered due to additional automotive activity. General trade sales, showing a 16.3 per cent increase over 1934, were said to be due to a great extent to the effect of the modernization and repair program of the Federal Housing Administration on the sales of retail paint outlets.

UNDER THE PWA PLAN

This house, being built for W. J. Tyler, West Monroe, is an illustration of what can be done under the PWA loan plan. The building material is paid for through a loan of $1,000, financed by the Certainteed Products corporation, obtained on behalf of the builder by H. R. Hayes Lumber company. The time of getting the loan approved was less than ten days. The payments amount to $31.94 per month for a period of three years.

FLOWER BOXES GIVE BEAUTY TO HOUSES

The warm days of spring offer a splendid opportunity for the home owner to build attractive flower boxes in windows and sun parlors and on porches.

These may be painted a bright color to harmonize with their surroundings and then filled with rich dirt in which numerous flowering plants may be grown. Spring is an excellent time for flower-box planting because of favorable climatic conditions. Charming and beautiful effects may be obtained with flower boxes. In addition, flowers are thus made available for all occasions during the long season before winter returns.

Flower boxes built and installed as a permanent part of the house come under provision of the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration.

FAMILIES MAY ENJOY SUN PORCH COMFORT

An open sunporch makes it possible for members of the family to enjoy the health giving rays of the sun on warm spring days.

The porch can be erected on any side of the home, except the side having a northern exposure. A southern exposure is preferable. Permanent flower boxes built around the porch can be finished to harmonize with the color scheme of the home, or they may be in gay, complementary colors. Contrasting colors add a note of cheer and charm.

A sunporch may be added to any home with a loan obtained from an approved lending agency and insured by the federal housing administration.

CHECK ROOF FLASHING

If flashing has deteriorated, or if a good, durable, metal flashing has not been properly installed in all of the valleys of a roof, around chimneys and around skylights, rain and snow water will leak through the roof and cause interior damage. Moisture also will cause deterioration of the roofs, walls and other structural members, which will necessitate expensive repairs. The roof should be carefully inspected in the spring to determine winter damage, and all defective flashing and roofing should be replaced.

SWIFT & CO. HAS GOLDEN JUBILEE

Organization Celebrates 50 Years Of Service In Meat Packing

Swift and company looks back this week on 50 years of development, while its local branch observes the golden jubilee.

The story of Swift and company is the story of the growth of America's largest industry, meat packing. The history of the industry, and particularly of Swift and company, its foremost unit, is filled with romance, adversity, struggle against enormous odds, and success in the best American tradition.

It is a tale of pioneering, of the opening up of the west a half a century ago—and as well the already populous but prejudiced east. First a revolution of production and distribution methods in the west, then a complete change of buying habits in the consuming centers of the east.

Gustavus Franklin Swift started in business for himself with a total capital of $20 when he was 16 years old. That was in 1855. He paid $19 for a heifer, dressed it himself and sold the meat in his little home town on Cape Cod.

From that time on he moved in an ever-widening area, investing his money for the next step in the great task of his life—to eliminate waste, which he hated, and solve the problem of feeding America efficiently. In that day refrigerator cars were unknown and meat processing was expensive and unscientific.

By 1875, when he was 36, G. F. Swift had reached Chicago as a cattle buyer for his eastern firm. But his work, at which he so excelled that he was offered the then unheard-of salary of $8,000 a year, did not satisfy him. He could see in it only the waste of shipping live cattle to the Atlantic coast when only the 55 per cent of edible meat would be consumed.

Almost alone in his vision, and entirely alone in his courage to act on his convictions, he saw his future in meat packing at Chicago rather than shipment of live cattle to the east. He began to experiment with winter shipments of dressed beef. His first efforts were successful. Then summer shipments engaged his interest.

While others scoffed, he put his faith in refrigeration as the element which would one day, sooner than he then dreamed, revolutionize the live stock and meat industry of the nation.

The growth of Swift and company to its present position in the industrial world reveals how great was the need and opportunity and how effectively the young man from Cape Cod met it.

The company was incorporated in Illinois in 1885 with six shareholders and a capital of $300,000. Its only packing plant was at Chicago, but it had several eastern alliances with distributing firms.

Today, just a half century later, it has 50 packing plants, in every section of America and Canada, 100 produce plants, 16 oil mills, eight refineries and around 400 branch selling houses.

The business continues to be operated by members of the immediate Swift family. Seven sons of the founder all entered the company. Of these, one has retired, two have died. The four remaining include Charles H., chairman of the board; Gustavus F., president; George H., director, and Harold H., director and vice-president. Two sons of L. F. Swift, retired president and board chairman, are Alden B., director and vice-president, and Louis F., Jr., manager of the Fort Worth packing plant.

One of the most valuable collections of Indian relics yet received by the University of Idaho was donated recently by a postal employe.

EDUCATORS ENROLLED IN COURSE FOR SUPERVISORS

Pictured above are leading educators from 45 parishes in Louisiana who enrolled Monday for the six weeks' supervisors course at Louisiana State Normal college at Natchitoches. Ouachita parish is represented by Myrtle Rodgers, Monroe, and Julia Caroline Wossman, Monroe. The group was welcomed by President Albert A. Fredericks of the college, Dr. T. H. Harris of Baton Rouge, state superintendent of education, and E. A. Lee of Natchitoches, superintendent of Natchitoches parish schools. A. M. Hopper of Baton Rouge, state supervisor of elementary schools, and E. B. Robert, director of teacher training at the normal college, have charge of the program. Assisting in the program will be members of the state department of education, faculty of the Louisiana State Normal college, Dr. A. L. Grabb of George Peabody college for Teachers, J. W. Brouillette, assistant superintendent and supervisor of St. Landry parish, and Miss Helen Woodard, supervisor of Webster parish. The course in supervision being offered at the normal college this summer is the second of its kind in the state, the first having been offered at the State Normal in 1918, with 35 enrolled. A total of 128 supervisors and principals have registered for the course this summer. Graduate credit is being offered for the course through the extension division of the Louisiana State university.

Rev. Thomas Jett Likes To Hunt, Fish And Swim

Pastor Of Christian Church Stays Fit With Outdoor Activities

Outside the realm of his activities as a minister, Rev. Thomas F. Jett, pastor of the First Christian church, is a hunter and fisherman, a swimmer and a golfer, and a student of humanity.

He keeps himself physically fit with outdoor activities and one of his keenest pleasures is fly fishing. He swims often, early in the morning, in the municipal natitorium. With other ministers, he finds time occasionally for playing golf.

Reared at Indianapolis, Ind., Rev. Jett graduated from the school of religion of Butler university, located in that city, and has been pastor of the local church since January 1, 1931. He is 33 years of age. He is married and the father of one child, Thomas F. Jett, Jr.

In living, he follows, generally, a four-fold plan of life, a plan which he says develops him "mentally, spiritually, physically and socially."

Mentally, he is continually seeking to broaden himself and his usefulness by study. He reads widely, but believes that the study of humanity is the most absorbing in the world, and this study is not confined to books. Contacts with people form a most important phase of "knowing people."

Spiritually, he feels an innate calling to his work as a minister.

Reverend Jett likes people, likes to converese with them and learn from them. He therefore derives pleasure in attending conventions, hearing speakers from various parts of the country, and exchanging ideas with people.

At this time he is making preparations to attend the world convention of his church, to be held at Leicester, England, August 7-12. He is looking forward with pleasurable anticipation to contacts with great religious thinkers of the world who will be present at the convention. People from 35 nations will be there, presenting a highly interesting field for the study of humanity.

While in England, Reverend Jett plans to study the English people, their home life, customs and religions. He has already made a reservation to reside in an English home during the convention.

It is interesting to note, as an example of the young minister's strength and determination both as a man and pastor, that the Monroe First Christian church under his pastorate has at all times paid the notes on its property indebtedness and has not had a deficit while paying current expenses.

The church, of attractive frame construction and located in the 400 block of St. John street, owns the large, vacant adjoining lot at the southeast corner of the intersection of St. John and Oak streets. Reverend Jett, with his congregation, is visualizing and planning for the day when work will start on a beautiful church edifice to be located on the lot.

GARAGE BUILDING TO BE COMPLETELY RENOVATED

The garage at the southeast corner of South Grand and Grammont streets, operated by S. H. Adler, is to be completely renovated at a cost of from $1,200 to $1,500, it was announced Saturday when the contract for the work was awarded to J. M. Head of Monroe.

Construction will start Monday, and a new front, new offices and other new features will be installed.

The plans for the alterations were prepared by the architectural firm headed by H. H. Land.

Zoologists say fresh water shrimp have much economic value because of the great numbers of mosquitoes they destroy.

BAPTISTS WILL GO TO CAMP AT OLLA

Many From Monroe To Attend Annual Sessions Starting June 18

The fifth annual sessions of the Northeast Louisiana Baptist encampment will open June 18 and continue for 10 days at Olla. Rev. L. T. Hastings, pastor of the First Baptist church in Monroe, is president and teacher of the encampment, and a large enrollment from this city is anticipated.

The CCC grounds and buildings will be rented for the use of the encampment, the members of the government unit taking up quarters elsewhere during the time the Baptists are holding camp.

Each day's schedule will be of interest. The day will start with 6 a.m. rising bell, followed by a quiet hour from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. Breakfast will be served at 7:15 a.m., and Sunday school will be held daily from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m., with Bible hour from 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., conducted by Rev. Hastings. B. T. U. classes will occupy the time from 10 a.m. to 10:50 a.m., with preachers' hour conducted by Dr. B. C. Land immediately following. After an inspirational address daily at 11:45 a.m., by Dr. A. E. Prince, dinner will be served.

Afternoons will be given over to recreation conducted by Miss Emma Bains and after supper, stereopticon pictures and evangelistic services are slated by Rev. A. D. Muse each night.

Hen feed must necessarily include bone meal, ground oyster shells or limestone and salt if egg production is to be maintained at a high level, poultrymen say.

MOON MULLINS

by Frank Willard

MOON SAYS TO TELL YOU HIM AND TH' BOYS HAS BEEN WAITIN' A HOUR FOR YOU DOWN AT TH' POOL PARLOR, AND FOR YOU TO SHAKE A LEG!

SHHHHUSH! I'VE BEEN WAITING TWO HOURS FOR YOUR AUNT MAMIE TO GO TO SLEEP - NOW I HOPE YOU HAVEN'T WENT AND WOKE HER UP.

LISTEN, KAYO - I WILL GIVE YOU A NICKEL IF YOU GO CRAWL IN MY BED AND SNORE REAL LOUD TILL I GET HOME.

NAW - SHE'S STILL ASLEEP.

HA! WHEN SHE HEARS KAYO SNORING SHE WILL THINK IT'S ME AND NEVER SUSPECT THAT I'M OUT-

R-R-ROOARR- OOOP- ZOOF RRR-

WELL WHAT IN THE WORLD?

OH! OH!

SO!

WELL, SO FAR SO GOOD!

POW!

NOW YOU GET IN BED AND STAY THERE.

WHY, MY PET I WAS ONLY GOING OUT TO SILENCE THAT CAT ON THE FENCE. I WAS AFRAID IT WOULD DISTURB YOU.

JUNE 16

I'M SO SORRY, WILLIE - PLEASE FORGIVE ME FOR BEING SO IMPULSIVE.

WELL, DON'T NEVER LET IT HAPPEN AGAIN, HONEYBUNCH.

SAY, UNCLE WILLIE, SHALL I GO DOWN TO THE POOL PARLOR AND TELL MOON AND THE BOYS THEY NEEDN'T WAIT ANY LONGER?

YAS, MÁM - HE PROMISES LITTLE KIDS A NICKEL TO DO A JOB OF WORK FOR HIM AND THEN HE DON'T LIVE UP TO HIS AGREEMENT.

DICK TRACY

BUT DICK, I HAVE THESE DEPOSIT SLIPS SHOWING MY MONEY HAS BEEN PUT IN THE BANK-AND BESIDES, I CHECKED UP AT THE BANK THIS MORNING AND FOUND MY ACCOUNT IS ALL RIGHT.

OH, YOU'LL SUFFER NO LOSS, MARY-THE BANK WOULD HAVE TO MAKE GOOD ANYWAY. BUT THE IDEA IS-THAT TOBY AND THIS BANK TELLER ARE PLAYING THE HORSES WITH YOUR MONEY-THEN HE IS JUGGLING THE ACCOUNTS SOME WAY SO THAT THE BANK HASN'T GOT WISE.

THEN I'D BETTER DISCHARGE TOBY-AND WASH MY HANDS OF THE WHOLE MESS.

NO! DON'T DO THAT! JUST GO ALONG AS THOUGH NOTHING HAD HAPPENED. IT'S THE ONLY WAY I CAN GET THE GOODS ON THIS GAMBLING [illegible]LER.

MEANWHILE, IN ANOTHER PART OF THE CITY...

BUT, MARK- I DIDN'T WANT TO DO ANYTHING REALLY CROOKED. I DIDN'T KNOW YOU WERE BETTING LARGE AMOUNTS OF THE BANK'S MONEY, TOO.

SHUT UP- WE'RE BOTH IN IT- AND NOW WE'VE GOT TO GET OUT! SH-SH! SOMEBODY'S ANSWERING THE DOORBELL.

OH, IT'S YOU, MARK MASTERS! WHAT'S THE IDEA- WAKING A FELLOW UP THIS TIME OF NIGHT?

I'M IN TROUBLE, JOE- SERIOUS TROUBLE!

THE KID HERE AND I HAVE BEEN PLAYING THE PONIES FOR THE LAST THREE WEEKS AND BREAKING ABOUT EVEN. THEN TODAY I GOT A "SURE THING"-PLUNGED FOR ABOUT FIVE GRAND-AND LOST IT ALL.

WELL, WHAT AM I SUPPOSED TO DO-BUST OUT IN TEARS. I'M ONLY A BOOKIE.

THE POINT IS, JOE- THE DOUGH WASN'T MINE.

WHY YOU DIRTY LITTLE RAT, YOU! IF YOU THINK I'LL PULL YOU OUT OF ANOTHER HOLE LIKE YOU WERE IN A COUPLE OF MONTHS AGO-YOU'RE CRAZY! I TOLD YOU THEN TO KEEP YOUR HANDS OFF THAT BANK'S DOUGH!

NOW, LISTEN, JOE- YOU'VE GOT TO HEAR ME!

LISTEN, YOU'RE A BIG BOOKIE. I'VE PLACED A LOT OF BETS WITH YOU IN THE PAST. YOU'VE GOT LOTS OF MY OWN MONEY, JOE-LOTS OF IT! MONEY THAT WAS MINE, UNDERSTAND? NOT THE BANK'S!

LET ME HAVE FIVE GRAND TO GET OUT OF THIS HOLE OR I'LL BE FOUND SHORT AT THE BANK- AND I'LL SPILL EVERYTHING! I'LL TELL HOW I LOST THE MONEY PLAYING THE HORSES...

-THERE'LL BE AN INVESTIGATION OF HAND-BOOKS, AND I'LL FRAME UP A SPEECH THAT YOU WERE IN CAHOOTS WITH ME TO STEAL BANK FUNDS FOR PLAYING THE PONIES- I'LL RUIN YOU!

LISTEN, YOU CHEAP LITTLE CROOKED BANK CLERK-I'LL GIVE YOU TWO SECONDS TO GET OUT OF..

MARK! NO! NO!

GET DOWN THOSE STAIRS, QUICK! I'VE GOT HIS WALLET. WE'VE GOT TO GET OUT OF HERE!

SOLDIER OF FORTUNE
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

by ROY CRANE

KEEP STILL, YOU IDIOT! THEY'LL FIND US.

I CARN'T 'ELP IT, SIR, KA CHOO! KA CHOO!

ENEMIES!

TO ARMS! TO ARMS! DEATH TO THE ACCURSED SWINE!

AFTER THEM! HEAD THEM OFF!

NOW YOU'VE DONE IT! WE'RE IN A HECK OF A MESS.

OW, BLI'ME! LOOKIT THE SPEARS. THEY'RE TRYIN' TO KILL US.

ZIP

OF COURSE THEY ARE, YOU MONKEY. RUN FOR YOUR LIFE — IT'S OUR ONLY CHANCE.

WHILE EASY AND PIPPY ARE FLEEING BEFORE TWO DOZEN BLOOD-THIRSTY PIRATES, WOGGA ZAZULA AND EIGHTEEN FAT LITTLE WARRIORS ARE LANDING NOT FAR AWAY.

....EASY AND PIPPY RUN SMACK DAB INTO THEM.

IT'S HIM!

AFTER UM! AFTER UM! CATCHUM! BURNUM ALIVE! SIX PIGS TO THE ONE WHO CATCHUM ALIVE.

STRIKE ME PINK, GUVNOR, I'M ALL IN — PUFF - PUFF - I CARN'T - PUFF - RUN ANOTHER STEP.

YOU GOT TO! BLAST YOU, PIPPY! YOU GOT TO.

WHAT A MESS! PIRATES ARE BAD, AND SAVAGES ARE WORSE, BUT TO BE CHASED BY BOTH AT THE SAME TIME — WELL, THAT'S THE LAST STRAW.

OOPS!

THEN TO MAKE MATTERS WORSE THAN EVER, PIPPY TRIPS AND TURNS HIS ANKLE.

S'NO USE, GUVNOR. I CARN'T GET UP.
